PRIDE II update

Trustee pledges $400,000 to Elon

An Elon College trustee has made a pledge of $400,000 to the PRIDE II Campaign, one of the largest single contributions in the 94-year history of the liberal arts institution.

The trustee, who wishes to remain anonymous, said the funds will be used for capital improvements at the college, possibly toward the construction of the proposed fine arts center.

"The PRIDE II Campaign is critical to the future success of Elon College," the trustee said. "If Elon is to maintain academic excellence and continue to attract talented students, the school must continue in a position of financial health.

"The PRIDE II Campaign will ensure that Elon College remains independent and competitive among institutions of higher education," he said.

PRIDE II, an acronym for "Providing Resources for Institutional Development at Elon," is a three-year, $5.7 million campaign, the most ambitious fund raising effort in the history of the college. With over 2,700 men and women from about half the states, Elon is the third largest private college in North Carolina.

The campaign will generate funds for endowment, campus improvements, ongoing expenses, and the construction of a new fine arts center. The campaign was publicly announced in mid-October.

Elon College President Fred Young said the gift will probably be used in the construction of the $2.2 million fine arts center, which will eventually house the college's music, drama and art departments.

Construction of the center is expected to begin next year in the area of the present soccer field and track, which will be moved to the northern edge of the 150-acre campus.

"This gift, one of the largest in the history of Elon College, represents a generous gift to thousands of young people who will attend Elon in the years ahead in an effort to improve their lives," Young said. "The donor has made an investment in our future, and all of us associated with Elon College greatly appreciate his generosity."

Glen Raven challenges Alamance County

An Alamance County textile firm has donated $80,000 to the PRIDE II Campaign at Elon College to challenge other county donors to support the fund raising drive.

Glen Raven Mills Inc. will offer $1,000 to Elon College for every gift or pledge of $1,000 or more that any individual, company or organization in Alamance County makes to the PRIDE II Campaign, up to $80,000 toward the campaign goal.

The challenge gift was announced recently at a kick-off luncheon of the Alamance Campaign, a mini-campaign within the PRIDE II schedule of events.

PRIDE II, an acronym for "Providing Resources for Institutional Development at Elon," is a $5.7 million capital campaign, the largest in the history of the institution. Funds generated through the campaign will be used for endowment, current expenses, campus improvements, and the construction of a new fine arts center.

Elon College President Fred Young said the challenge was realistic but would require considerable effort on the part of volunteers in the county.

"The success of this campaign will depend on the generosity of many groups, and the participation of the corporate community in Alamance County is critical," Young said. "It is refreshing that companies such as Glen Raven Mills recognize the importance of this institution to community life."

Over 200 volunteers will call on businesses and individuals during the month of February in an effort to meet the challenge offered by Glen Raven.

MBA PROGRAM OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED

The new Master of Business Administration degree program, Elon's only graduate program, was officially announced to Alamance County business leaders at a luncheon on the campus, Wednesday, January 18.

Recruitment for the 36-hour degree program begins immediately with the first applicants to be accepted for fall, 1984.

ELON TODAY

PRIDE

"Elon College trustees give generously of their time, at their own expense, in providing government for Elon College, which has a budget in excess of $11 million a year. This is a major responsibility. The additional support by trustees through the PRIDE II campaign indicates their firm commitment to higher education and to Elon College. We are proud to have each one of them associated with Elon," Dr. Young said.

Trustees pledge $1.5 million

The 36 members of the Elon College Board of Trustees have contributed $1.5 million to the PRIDE II capital campaign, a figure equal to more than 1/4 of the campaign's total goal of $5.7 million.

"This outstanding level of support is a further indication of the depth of commitment our Board has to Elon College," said Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development. "Their financial support is but one of the ways they support Elon, and we are truly grateful to them."

The 100% participation of the Board made them the first organized group to complete their segment of the campaign.

PRIDE II is an acronym for "Providing Resources for Institutional Development at Elon." The campaign seeks funds to construct a fine arts center, endowments for scholarships and professorships, current operating expenses, and money for campus improvements.

Elon College President Fred Young praised the trustees for their leadership role in the campaign, the most ambitious fund-raising effort in the private college's 94-year history.

Duke Power gives to Fine Arts

The Elon College PRIDE II Campaign received another major boost with a gift of $25,000 from Duke Power Company. The funds will be used toward the construction of the proposed $2.2 million fine arts center.

PRIDE II is a $5.7 million, three-year capital campaign, will raise funds for campus improvements, ongoing expenses, and endowments and scholarships, and the construction of the fine arts center.

The center will be built beside the lake on the northern part of the campus, in the area now utilized for the track and soccer field. It will house faculty offices, classrooms, practice rooms, a theater, art gallery, band room, and related facilities.

Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development, praised Ed Hartgrove, manager of the Burlington Duke Power office, as being instrumental in securing the gift for Elon.

"Ed Hartgrove is a leading businessman in Alamance County, and this generous gift from Duke Power Company represents the faith the business community has in Elon. Without the support, our campaign could not succeed. We are grateful to Duke Power Company and to Ed for this leading gift," she said.

NCNB gift to PRIDE II announced

North Carolina National Bank has made a commitment of $20,000 to the Elon College PRIDE II Campaign. PRIDE II is an acronym for "Providing Resources for Institutional Development at Elon."

Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development, said the funds will probably be used in the construction of the proposed fine arts center.

PRIDE II seeks funds for the fine arts center, scholarships and endowments, operating expenses, and campus improvements. The campaign goal is $5.7 million over the next three years.

"NCNB is a corporate leader in Alamance County and North Carolina," Dr. Williams noted. "This generous gift from a large financial institution represents a great deal of faith in the continued improvement of the economy and in the ability of Elon College to meet its goal."

Don McCorkle, city executive officer and senior vice president of NCNB, said the bank is committed to cultural improvements such as the fine arts center would bring to Alamance County.

Plans call for the fine arts center to be constructed at the present site of the track and soccer field.

First Federal makes Fine Arts pledge

First Federal Savings and Loan Association has made a pledge of $20,000 toward the PRIDE II Campaign at Elon College. The gift will go toward the construction of the proposed fine arts center.

PRIDE II is a three-year, $5.7 million capital campaign, the largest in the liberal arts college's history. Funds will be solicited for ongoing expenses, campus improvements, scholarships and endowments, and the fine arts center, expected to cost approximately $2.2 million.

The center, to be built on the lake at the site of the present track, will eventually house the music, art and drama programs at the 94-year-old coeducational institution. A new track and soccer field is nearing completion near the Newsome Field baseball stadium.

Bob Gaydon, president of the savings and loan, said the association has supported Elon College programs for years because of the college's outstanding academic reputation and impact on Alamance County.

"First Federal Savings and Loan Association, like Elon College, is service-oriented and committed to improving the living environment in Alamance County," Gaydon said. "The fine arts center will soon become the cultural center of the county, and we are pleased to be a part of this ambitious project."

Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development at Elon, said the gift, one of several from financial institutions serving the county, will enhance the fine arts program the college offers students and improve the cultural offerings in the county.

Wachovia endows fund

Wachovia Bank & Trust Company, N.A. has made a major gift of $25,000 to PRIDE II, the three-year capital gifts campaign at Elon College.

Robert L. Saffelle Jr., senior vice president of the financial institution, said the gift will endow the Wachovia Fund for Excellence at Elon College. Income from the fund will be used to enhance the college.

Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development at Elon, said the Wachovia gift will improve several areas of the college.

"As an endowment, this fund will continue providing resources each year as needs arise," Williams noted. "We are grateful to Wachovia Bank and Trust Company for this generous support."

Elon 'family' sets fine example

The Elon College family — professors, administrators, and staff — has exceeded its goal of contributions to the PRIDE II Campaign, according to Dr. Jerry Tolley, PRIDE II campaign coordinator.

College employees have contributed over $200,000 toward the $5.7 million campaign, 117 percent of the gifts anticipated from the group.

Elon President Fred Young said the support given by the college family indicated the commitment to excellence shared by everyone associated with the private, four-year college.

"We are proud of the deep commitment the college family has given to this fund raising campaign," Dr. Young said. "Many employees made major gifts, and some areas, such as full time faculty members, had 100 percent participation. In all, 85 percent of the college family made a monetary gift to the campaign."

Dr. Carole Chase, professor of religion and chairperson of the faculty/staff campaign, said 44 employees volunteered their time to work in the campaign and solicit their colleagues. The campaign was completed in less than six weeks.

"Gifts were made to the fine arts center, scholarships, campus improvements, and ongoing expenses," Chase noted. "Many left the gift unrestricted, so it can go toward the area with the greatest need. In all, our faculty and staff have been very generous in their giving to the PRIDE II Campaign."

Business prof authors new book

The publication of Principles of Accounting, Third Edition is the latest in a series of textbooks that has made Dr. Allen B. Sanders a well-known author all over the United States. The first two editions were adopted by over 100 schools, including impressive institutions such as New York University, Auburn and the University of South Carolina, and were used by more than 100,000 students nationwide.

Sanders, professor of business administration and accounting at Elon College, penned the book with co-authors Isaac N. Reynolds, professor of accounting at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, and A. Douglas Hillman, professor of accounting and computer information systems at Drake University. Principles of Accounting, Third Edition has been carefully developed as the focus of a total teaching and learning package for the first-year accounting course.

An unprecedented development effort helped create the new edition. "We had nearly 40 reviewers from large universities, small private colleges and community colleges all over the country to review the manuscript," Dr. Sanders said. "They made comments, suggested better ways of saying things and pointed out errors. Also, six instructors from colleges where the previous editions were used kept user-diaries, measuring classroom performance and student response. Our rewriting was based on these personal comments and findings. Rewriting is a constant process."

Dr. Allen B. Sanders

In addition to correcting errors and rephrasing, many other factors account for the extensive rewriting involved in Principles of Accounting, Third Edition. The Financial Accounting Standards Board, a national organization responsible for setting accounting standards, has issued over 40 new directives since the first edition of the textbook was published. "We've added new chapters and revised some chapters to accommodate these changes, some of which are drastic," Sanders said. "Changes in the law, economic conditions and research are all factors in the rewriting process."

The 1056-page textbook emphasizes readability and consistent use of real-world businesses such as Sears Roebuck and Company, R.J. Reynolds and Roche Biomedical Laboratories. Keeping in step with the high-tech age, a Computer Assisted Instruction package is also available to adopters of the text. Class-tested and developed over two years, this tutorial aid is ideal for a laboratory situation.

Principles of Accounting, Third Edition introduces the complete accounting model while incorporating all the fundamental accounting concepts with a clear and cohesive approach. "In writing a textbook, you accept the responsibility for putting out information that thousands of people will read and accept as the gospel," Sanders said. "It's a tremendous responsibility."

Sanders, a professor of business administration and accounting at Elon since 1965, has accepted that responsibility numerous times. He was consulting editor of "Basic Accounting," a textbook published in the U.S. and Canada in 1975, and the author of "A Student's Self Study Guide" to accompany that textbook. He also co-authored "Financial Accounting: A Basic Approach" in 1980 with Isaac N. Reynolds and Albert Slavin, Northeastern University, in addition to the two previous editions of this new book. Dr. Sanders is a member of the American Accounting Association, the National Association of Accountants and the Institute of Management Accounting.

Elon trustee establishes endowment

An Elon College trustee has pledged $25,000 to the college's capital campaign, PRIDE II.

Maurice Jennings, a trustee from Southern Pines, N.C. and formerly of Burlington, made the pledge to establish an endowment fund at the college. Jennings attended Elon and has served on the board of trustees for several years.

Jennings is president of the Biscuitville, Inc. chain of restaurants, which employs 500 people in 25 restaurants in North Carolina and Virginia.

Dr. Fred Young, president of the college, said Jennings has provided valuable leadership to the board of trustees and has a keen interest in the future of Elon College.

"The Maurice Jennings Endowment Fund will provide academic scholarships to talented students at Elon College. His generosity will be appreciated for years as these young people improve their lives through a college education," Dr. Young said.

Long named to church, grants post

Former Dean of Student Affairs William G. Long has been appointed director of foundation, government and church relations at Elon College.

An ordained minister in the United Church of Christ, Long will coordinate relations between the college and the churches of the Southern Conference of the United Church of Christ. Long succeeds the late Dr. Clyde L. Fields in this role.

In addition, Long will be responsible for acquiring grant money from private foundation and government sources. He will keep the faculty of the college informed of the availability of special projects and research grants and will work closely with them in the preparation of grant requests.

A native of West Virginia, Long received his B.A. and M.A. in political science from West Virginia University and his M. Div. from Yale University Divinity School.

Prior to coming to Elon as dean of student affairs in 1974, Long had served as associate secretary of the North Carolina State University YMCA for two years, as dean of men at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill for eight years, and as dean of student affairs and associate professor of political science at Kalamazoo College in Kalamazoo, Michigan.

"Bill Long has been one of our most valuable staff members at Elon College for many years," said President Fred Young, "and he is ideally suited for the requirements for this important position. We are fortunate to have him."

Long will also retain his appointment as associate professor of political science and will continue to teach one course in American government each semester.

Judy S. Henricks

INSTRUCTOR EARNS RECOGNITION AS STILL-LIFE PAINTER

by MARY ELLEN PRIESTLEY

photos by Gayle Fishel

When readers of the Greensboro Daily News opened their morning papers on November 11, 1983, they saw on the inside front page, not a photograph of a tragedy or an accident, but a photograph of fine art — a painting by Judy Smith Henricks, part-time instructor in art at Elon College, entitled "Pitcher with Flowered Cloth." The painting was one of those exhibited in the acclaimed Art on Paper 1983 show held from November 13 to December 11 in the Weatherspoon Art Gallery in Greensboro.

Having a painting selected for the show was a considerable honor for Henricks. Hers was one of only 14 works by local artists to be chosen.

Art on Paper, sponsored annually at the Weatherspoon by the Dillard Paper Company, is a highly respected show featuring works by noted contemporary artists, all done on paper. This year's version — the 19th annual — included 156 works, chiefly by American artists, most of whom are from the New York City area. Nine works came from throughout the country and 13 were from members of the UNC-G faculty in art. The Weatherspoon Gallery is located on the campus of UNC-G.

"Pitcher with Flowered Cloth" is a typical Henricks painting. It is a still life in oil on paper, measuring 16 x 15 1/4 inches. Henricks is neither an abstract artist nor a hyper-realistic one. Her paintings, exhibit a strong relationship with the natural world but not an exact one.

"Painting for me is a formal exercise," she says. "What interests me in a painting is placement, shape and color, and playing with those elements to achieve different effects. 'Pitcher with Flowered Cloth' for example, was primarily an exercise in color, in red/green opposition. The table is teal-colored. The flowered cloth is behind a white pitcher and three small pears on a table. A peach-colored cloth or napkin lies nearby. In the painting I was interested in how the colors can make each other vibrate and also in the feeling the fall of the light creates in the painting."

All of Henricks' paintings are still-life. Bottles, fruits and plants are favorite objects and patterned cloth is also frequently included. She often paints the same objects over and over, but abandons them once her reaction is conditioned — once they no longer "ignite a spark." Consequently, she is always searching for interesting objects in grocery stores, antique shops and fabric outlets.

"Pitcher with Flowered Cloth," still life in oil by Judy Henricks was one of only 14 local works selected for Art on Paper 1983. The painting was featured in newspaper and television stories about the show. Pictured below is "Hydrangea and Checked Cloth," 15 1/2 x 18 1/4.

This selection process forms an important part of the gestation period for new works. "I see something like a piece of fabric or some fruit in a market and get excited about that thing. Sometimes the color or shape leads me to other items I already have. I see associations. I think about them and how I would combine colors and shapes in the painting."

All of the groundwork is done before picking up a brush. Since she must hire a babysitter in order to paint in her garage studio, she can't waste studio time not painting.

Henricks finds it difficult to talk about any strong statement her paintings make. "In my paintings the statement is the combination of color, form and shape," she says, "as opposed to the very strong emotional or even political statements that some artists make in their paintings."

She also does not consider herself part of any current trend in painting. She shuns such modern innovations as the air brush, and even acrylic paints, preferring instead to paint at an easel with oils. "I guess much of the revolution of art has passed me by," she states. "I seem to be more in line with a turn-of-the-century artist."

Whatever her methods, they seem to be working nicely for Henricks. The Art on Paper show was the capstone of a series of exhibitions. In 1980 she had one-artist shows in the Firehouse Gallery, Graham, N.C. and in the Durham Art Guild Gallery.

Since 1981 she has exhibited at the Green Hill Gallery in Greensboro, and she had works included in their winter shows in 1982 and 1983. From Green Hill, word spread to the Somerhill Gallery, Durham, whose director chose some of Henricks' oil paintings for a bank in Alamance County.

ELON ALUMNI

Maedell Lambeth Rice '40

Elon alumna writes prize-winning poetry

Reprinted from Columbia
Missourian.

Maedell Rice (Linda Maedell Lambeth '40) was 11 years old when she won her first poetry prize. "I won a bottle of perfume for a jingle," she says. "I was just a kid. My father and mother thought it was pretty nice. Back in the '30s you didn't win much money."

Fifty years later Rice, of Columbia, Mo., is still writing prize-winning poetry. She recently won nine awards, including five for first place, in poetry competitions of the Fleetwood Society of Poets in South Shore, Ky., and the Carter County Poetry Society, Carter Caves, Ky.

Ms. Rice was invited to read her poetry and be honored at a banquet in Kentucky. She did not go. "It would have been fun, but I've got too many strings to my bow," she says.

It's hard for Rice to sit still and talk about her poetry. She finds it hard, in fact, to sit still at all. "I'm afflicted with hyperactivity," she says. "I have to be doing things." In her window hang stained glass objects she has made. On the shelves sit ceramic pots made by her and her daughter. By the kitchen table sits a guitar. She is a serious classical guitarist.

"I recently had an attack of tulip-o-mania," she says. "I planted over $90 worth of tulips this fall." Her backyard is a playground for the area children, and she has made her front yard into a rock garden. "It's fun in the spring," Rice says. "I like stumps and rocks. I collect rocks when I can."

"I have to be doing things," she says. "Writing is sort of inactive but it's satisfactory, too, in its way."

Although she started with jingles, her poetry has changed over the years. "I write strictly serious stuff because I'm from a strict academic, ministerial background," she says. "Time seems very precious to me, and what I am is more important than who or what I do."

She says her poetry is just now beginning to be appreciated. She thinks the reason is that people didn't like philosophical or religious stunts on life. "All my poetry is geared toward thoughtful appreciation for beauty, courage, life and conviction. I would think I was wasting my time if I were writing about what to me is triviality," she says.

Rice, a North Carolina native, graduated from Elon College in 1940 and studied at Columbia College in New York City. While there, she began teaching and writing for children. "It was a fascinating time of my life," she says. "People would dance in the streets — people from other countries. Everybody was so nice in those days. And there was never any fear."

She moved to Columbia in the 1940s with her husband, Jim, when he became an instructor at Stephens College. She has raised four children.

This year is the first year she has entered the contests in Kentucky. "It was accidental that I found out about them," she says. There were 20 categories in each contest. "I sent in 40 poems, and no duplicates. I was hoping to win with at least one."

She was surprised when she found out she had won awards in the Carter Caves competition. "The judge was an English professor from the University of Kentucky," she says. "He didn't know who wrote the poems because we submitted one group of poems without our names attached."

"I felt the competition would be keen because people from all over the country were entering." Rice will receive a monetary award for her prize-winners, but she does not know how much. "The money didn't interest me one bit," she says.

Although she has been writing poetry, children's stories and articles for many years, Rice still considers herself a novice. "I'm a beginner in a way," she says. "I think I'm getting better because I'm more mature and know better what I want to say."

This triflet is one of the poet's first-place poems.

ANNOUNCING... THE 1984 ELON COLLEGE PHONATHON AND THE GREAT ALUMNI CHALLENGE

That's right! A CHALLENGE has been issued. At the insistence of a number of our more recent graduates, a challenge has been issued to ELON's OLD TIME ALUMNI. Simply stated, the challenge brags that the ALUMNI departing the campus after 1963 will have more donors to the 1984 PHONATHON than those "OLD FOLKS" who left the campus before 1968.

Janie Council is retiring. The woman who seems to be everybody's favorite professor at Elon College is leaving in May, after 24 years of teaching in the Department of Business Administration and Accounting.

The walls of Janie Council's office in Alannance Building are dotted with plaques and awards — evidence of her immense popularity with students.

has been nominated for the award many times since, but it has not been the policy of the committee to allow multiple winners.

The Society for the Advancement of Management honored Mrs. Council by naming their outstanding member award for her. The cheerleaders have given her an award, as have the Business Student Communicators. Once an informal group of students presented her with philosophy is to treat students as whole persons.

"I let my students know I'm interested in them and their problems, and I really am. My office is always open. They know they will have someone who will listen, and I think they need it."

Indeed they must, for Janie Council's office always has someone in it. One of the things her students praise most about her is her

"The first day I was in her class, I knew she was a special person," says Bobby Sandell, who graduated from Elon in 1976 and is now in real estate in Hilton Head, S.C. "There was something in her voice. It just rang with enthusiasm, and she so sincerely wanted to help everybody."

"There aren't enough words to say what she's meant to me personally," says Libby Crosby '79. "She encouraged me to do the best I could." The best for Libby was very good indeed. She went on to graduate school at Virginia Tech and is now a senior tax specialist for Peat, Marwick and Mitchell, one of the nation's "Big Eight" accounting firms.

Seven times since 1970 she has been voted Outstanding Professor of the Year by the Student Government Association.

She was the first recipient of the Daniels-Danielley Award for Excellence in Teaching at Elon. She a plaque of appreciation on their own!

Indeed, Janie Council has a thing about students — she loves them. And you don't need to see the plaques on her wall to tell how much they love her in return.

All you have to do is ask one of them:

Who is this woman that people can't say enough good about? A petite dynamo: 5'5" of energy and enthusiasm and a heart as warm as fresh-baked bread.

"What is so special about Janie is that she is really interested in her students; she really and truly cares," says her colleague, Dr. Allen Sanders, professor of business administration and accounting. "She's interested in them as persons and is concerned about all their problems. They sense that and respond. She has incredible rapport with her students."

Mrs. Council affirms that her availability.

"One of the amazing things about Mrs. Council is that she was — and is, I'm sure — always there," says Sandell. "She always has time for people."

Having time for people has led Mrs. Council into an active role with several student organizations.

As adviser to the Civinettes for 10 years, she has been constantly involved with that organization. She's visibly proud of that club and the fact that it is a true service organization, the only one on Elon's campus.

She is also an instrumental faculty figure in the Society of the Advancement for Management (SAM), which she advised for many years. "Mrs. Council encouraged me to join SAM," says Tom Berry, '78, who went on to become president of the organization. "She wants everyone to get everything possible while they're at Elon, and she is willing to work to make that happen."

THE TEACHING LEGACY OF JANIE COUNCIL

In addition, the indefatigable Mrs. Council served for years as adviser to a sorority and to the cheerleaders. A sports enthusiast, she still goes to cheerleader camp every year.

But the list of her activities doesn't stop there. She also takes on an incredible advising load each semester — up to 80 students. And she is known for the personal touch — cards, cookies, inviting people to her home.

"Her incredible rapport with her students is a strong motivating factor," says Dr. Sanders.

Libby Crosby agrees. "She has a way of making people hungry for more knowledge. In the classroom she is so full of what she's doing, you simply cannot get bored. Also, she has amazing patience. She will go over something as many times as it takes to make sure everyone understands."

Mrs. Council says of her teaching philosophy. "I want to teach well what I teach and test on what I teach. I still prepare for every class. I also try to encourage students individually. It bothers me when students do not work up to the level of their potential."

Is there anything bad about Janie Council? Apparently not. "In the 10 years I've been here, I've never even seen her be unpleasant," says Linda Weavil. "The only time she gets upset is when she thinks a student is being treated unfairly."

A native of Greenville, North Carolina, Mrs. Council is a graduate of East Carolina University with a BA in English and business education. After receiving that degree she went on to graduate school at ECU and earned her master's in business with a concentration in accounting, while also working as secretary to the university's business manager.

"I have never seen anybody give so selflessly as Janie Council," says Dr. Linda Weavil, assistant professor of business education and business administration and director of cooperative education. "She's always baking for someone; she goes to every student's wedding, gives a gift to every new baby. She often has students and former students at her home and travels all over the place to visit them."

How does one person do so much and teach too? For Mrs. Council, there's only one explanation: she loves Elon and she loves the students. She can give so much of herself because she genuinely cares for them and is genuinely concerned about their problems.

There's more to Janie Council than friend and confidant, however. She is also recognized as an excellent teacher and an asset to the business department.

She and her husband, William, then came to the Burlington area and Mrs. Council, who always knew she wanted to teach, taught for ten years in the evening school at Burlington Business College while her two sons were small.

In 1960 she accepted a job at Elon College to teach shorthand and office machines. After three years, she went into teaching accounting where she has since remained.

Things were quite different at Elon in 1960. She was assigned no office, but used a classroom in Alamance instead. Classes were taught six days a week, she recalls.

The business department has been enlarged considerably in the years since Mrs. Council came, and its offerings strengthened. In 1960 no accounting degree was offered; now, of course, accounting is one of the college's most respected majors.

Elon accounting graduates in recent years have performed as well on the rigorous Certified Public Accountant's examination. A recent Greensboro Daily News article reported that in 1983 the percentage of Elon graduates passing all four sections of the test in one sitting was higher than that of North Carolina State University, Appalachian, East Carolina and Guilford, among others.

The total business curriculum has recently been strengthened to make available the Bachelor of Science degree for accounting and business majors.

According to Libby Crosby and others, Mrs. Council's excellent teaching is a contributing factor to the department's strength. "She was the main reason I passed the CPA exam on the first try," says Crosby. "Although Elon had no accounting theory course at that time, I recognized as I took the test that she had integrated theory into the intermediate accounting courses."

Mrs. Council says she has never been bored teaching accounting. "Accounting is an exciting field with changes every year," she maintains. "Textbooks are constantly being updated to keep up with new and revised standards and changing tax laws. It keeps you on your toes."

Mrs. Council is also devoted to the teacher education program and teaches the methods course for business education majors.

How can anyone so involved in her work leave? For one thing, Mrs. Council wants to retire before she loses any of her enthusiasm for her job. Then, too, other things are calling. Her husband retired two years ago, and they would like to spend some time together.

Also, she plans to do some things she's never had time to do before. She mentions cooking and gardening, learning to do crafts, travel, getting involved in community work — and spoiling her granddaughter!

She and her husband are planning to build a house on land they have bought near their son's home in Farmington, N.C., outside of Winston-Salem.

What will Janie Council miss the most about Elon? You don't have to ask — it's the students. "For me, everything centered around the students. I love them and I'll really miss them."

And they will miss her. Teacher, friend, adviser, confidante — she's meant so much to countless Elon students.

Tom Crosby sums it up:

"She was like a second mother.

You could go to her about any problem and her advice was always helpful. She took the pressure off of you. She made four years of my life four years I'll never forget."

Some of Janie Council's former students are planning a scholarship in her honor. They have formed an endowment group which will match up to a total of $10,000 in gifts for the Janie E. Council Scholarship Fund.

If Janie Council touched your life and you would like to honor her in this way, send your gift to the Janie Council Scholarship Fund, Box 2116, Elon College, N.C. 27244.

DIE KUNSTEN DER SPRACHEN WIEDER i LAS LENGUAS EXTRANJERAS LES LANGUES ÉTRANGÈRES REV FOREIGN LANGUAGES

A major in foreign languages, approved by the faculty in the fall of 1983, has moved Elon College tentatively toward the re-establishment of languages as an important part of the liberal arts curriculum.

The recently approved major, to become effective in the 1984-85 academic year, requires a student to study at least two foreign languages, one primary and one secondary. In the main language, the student must successfully complete six semester hours at the intermediate or 200 level and 18 hours at the 300 level. In the second language, he or she must satisfactorily meet requirements for six semester hours, 211 and 212.

Why begin with a major requiring two languages instead of one? Surely a student could easily spend more than three years or 30 hours on one foreign language. For many, that would not be enough for proficiency in speaking and writing.

"If we had decided to start again with the traditional one-language major, we would have used too many of our resources in that one," says Christopher White, vice president and dean of academic affairs. "We would have cut off German for the present, or French. We want to encourage all to grow, but we should start with the language having the greatest strength at Elon College as the reinstated foreign language major."

The greatest strength now lies in Spanish, the language used by the Puerto Ricans, Mexicans, Cubans and emigrants and refugees from South America, now living in the United States. Spanish has long echoed through business offices of multi-nationals, in telephone calls, and along the streets of New York City and the southern coast from Florida to California.

At present the foreign language major will have Spanish as its primary language and French or German as secondary. The new courses in Spanish emphasize advanced conversation and composition as well as Spanish and Latin American literature.

To look back at the decade of the '70s is to see a distressing history of foreign languages at Elon College. One sees the college following a then current fad in higher education, thinking wistfully about student choices in courses, and discovering that it is difficult to rescue a program of study that is slipping away. The mistakes of that decade are on the minds of administrators and professors as they rebuild the program.

In 1970-71 foreign languages were still required for graduation at Elon.

For the language major, a minimum of 39 semester hours in French was required plus six hours of Latin if the student did not exhibit proficiency (six courses were offered in Latin). A Spanish major required 36 semester hours, and the student had 17 courses to choose from. German courses numbered 11, and Greek 4. Eleven professors taught non-English languages in 1970-71.

In 1971-72 the college changed the language requirements for all students to 12 semester hours of language and literature to be selected from English, French, German, Spanish or Greek. The reason given for the change was the decreasing numbers who were majoring in foreign languages. What the change did was to end the foreign language requirement for graduation and put language on a downhill roller-coaster as most students chose English.

By 1974-75 the catalogue listed only five professors, and courses had shrunk to the 100 and 200 level and an independent study course. Greek held on to one course each semester over two years, and Latin had disappeared.

In the remaining 1970s, non-English languages at Elon served to make up entrance requirements for many students and to whet the ambition of a few for further language study. The communications explosion in the early 1980s renewed interest in strengthening weakened language programs at colleges and universities across the country. Increased calls for knowledge of a second language in business and government also led to revived courses and hiring of teachers.

After nurturing upper level courses during the last two years, Elon College has increased its foreign language faculty with highly qualified professors.

"We now have a mixture of youth and experience with impeccable credentials," Vice President Chris White says. "These professors understand the need to attract and retain students. They encourage the student to major in a foreign language or to take language in a double major."

White says he does not expect "hordes of students" to major in foreign language, but "we do see more choosing language and business or political science. We think we can re-establish the French major in another year or two."

What about the "fail-safe" net — if in three years the enrollment does not reach a certain level, does the program go on the scrap heap? Does its destiny depend on a dollars and cents balance sheet?

"We think we are scheduling courses for financial feasibility — that is, six upper-level Spanish classes, one a semester over a three-year cycle," White says. "The six are not prerequisites for each other. In addition, we have independent study. We think we have modest expectations, those that are reasonable and realistic."

"We expect the program to move but we want it to be successful as part of the liberal arts tradition and what we aspire to be."

vice president

"We expect the program to move ahead for its own value, but we want it to be successful because Elon needs languages as part of the liberal arts tradition. They are part of who we are and what we aspire to be."

The new foreign language faculty: excellence across the board

Ernest Jackson Luusford, 38 the first of the new group of foreign language professors to join the Elon College faculty, brings both wide and in-depth training and experience in the Spanish language and literature as well as Spanish and Latin-American culture.

Born in Durham, North Carolina, Luusford received his B.A. in Spanish from Duke University, his M.A. from Middlebury College in Vermont and his Ph.D. in Spanish language and literature with certificate in Latin American Studies from the University of Florida. His dissertation examined the theory of the novel as revealed in contemporary Spanish American novels. Luusford has also studied in Lima, Peru and Madrid and has traveled extensively in Mexico, South America, Spain and other European countries.

WELCOME! RETURN!

the M.A. in education, Normal Superior Benevente, Puebla, Pue., Mexico. He went back to Spain where he earned the Ph.D. in education at the University of Madrid in 1964. The summers of 1971 and 1972 were spent at Middlebury College, Vermont, known around the world for its language curriculum.

His teaching experience ranges over several colleges in Mexico and the United States — Colegio Benavente and Normal Inferior Benavente in Puebla, Pue., Mexico; Douglass College, Rutgers University; Beaver College, Glenside, Pa.; and Saint Mary's.

Rodriguez is a prize-winning poet who also has a lively interest in drama and the visual arts. He has directed many Spanish plays, and his research has centered on drama and the Spanish theater. His workshops have focused on such topics as "Twentieth Century Spanish and Spanish-American Theater," "Humor in Thirty Paintings by Picasso," and "Obstacles in Language to Communication."

This professor also enjoys some after-class "socializing." He organized a Christmas party for foreign language and international students at Elon. To everyone's delight, about 150 turned up for food, entertainment, and good cheer.

Marjoo Ornstein, born in Amsterdam, came to New York state as a child. After receiving a B.A. in psychology from Guilford College, she went to France where she studied with the Middlebury College Graduate School of French at the Sorbonne, University of Paris, and was awarded the M.A. in 1953. She received her Ph.D. in French from the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Although her specialty is French, Ornstein is at home in Dutch, German and English. Her education and experience have earned her such comments from her students and colleagues as "an extremely fine teacher," "enthusiastic," "lively," and "exacting."

She has taught at Ashley Hall in Charleston, S.C.; Abbot Academy, now part of Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.; the University of Texas, where she was named best new French instructor; Lawrence University, Appleton, Wisc.; and the University of Wisconsin at Oshkosh.

One of Marjoo Ornstein's most interesting assignments was teaching French at the Iranzamin Tehran International School in Tehran, Iran.

"I taught all levels from seventh through eleventh grades in this outstanding high school," she recalls. "The school is very academic. It prepares its graduates, Persian and foreign students, to enter leading universities all over the world."

"One term I taught in the elementary school where pupils start French in the third grade. I had learned the direct French method of teaching and helped in its adoption in the Tehran school. Language teaching was consecutive right through all the grades," she said. "Some students were good in three to five languages."

Dr. Ornstein lived in Tehran four and one-half years and became acquainted with much of Iranian life and language.

Now at Elon she is enthusiastic about the foreign languages major. "It makes sense to take a double major with a foreign language as one," she says. "Young students do not realize how important it is to be able to communicate in a second language today. But it takes at least four years of preparation and hard work."

Katherine Wallace-Casey, 27, arrived at Elon College in September 1983 from Harvard University where she had studied comparative literature on a teaching fellowship since 1978. She received the M.A. in 1981 and the Ph.D. in June 1983.

She went to Harvard from Stanford University where she had earned both the B.A. in French and German Literatures as well as the M.A. in German Studies in 1978. Between 1974 and 1978 Wallace-Casey spent considerable time in Vienna, Austria, Paris, and Germany under the Stanford Studies programs. Living and working with native speakers, she perfected her own fluency.

Her meteoric university career took its beginnings from fine scholastic work in high school which merited a four-year California State Scholarship at Stanford, a Bank of America Award for Foreign Languages, a Zeta Phi Beta Sorority Scholarship, and membership in the National Honor Society, all in 1973.

Young Dr. Wallace-Casey teaches German at Elon although she had first inquired about an opening in Spanish here. When she discovered that the college needed a German professor, she accepted that position, and everyone was pleased. Though German literature was her major concentration at Harvard, she had studied Spanish language and literature at Stanford and again in Austria.

Although she had considerable teaching experience at Harvard and Stanford, her job as assistant professor of foreign languages at Elon College is her first full-time teaching role. She is here to teach German, to help increase enrollment in German classes, and to develop upper-level courses.

Dr. Wallace-Casey lives in Greensboro where her husband is a student at North Carolina A & T State University. He had taken a year of university studies off to work in Boston while she completed her dissertation at Harvard.

These four new professors have much of the future of foreign languages in their hands. But not all. They look to the administration, other professors in other disciplines, to outreach programs in high schools and communities, and, probably most of all, to students who are coming to realize the value of languages in careers and in self-development and enrichment.

Before coming to Elon, Dr. Lunsford taught at Episcopal High in Alexandria, Virginia, at Salem College and at Virginia Commonwealth University. At VCU he directed the study-abroad programs in Mexico City and Malaga and Barcelona, Spain. Lunsford sees the need for Elon students to have the experience of language study abroad. "As a beginning, I am planning a three or four-week classroom and travel seminar in Mexico City in the summer of 1985," he says. More information will be available in the fall 1984 from Dr. Lunsford. Interested friends of the college and alumni will be invited to make inquiries about the study abroad program.

In the meantime, Dr. Lunsford enjoys his garden and home in Burlington where he raises very special irises and daylilies hybridized by his late mother. He plays the piano, skis, and likes to visit art galleries.

Also teaching Spanish is Gerardo Rodriguez, 47, a native of Madrid who came to Elon College from Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, where he had served as chairman of modern languages.

Having lived in Spain, Mexico and the United States, he brings much teaching experience and participation in workshops on literature and methodology in teaching foreign languages to speakers of English.

ELON ATHLETICS

Carden succeeds Anderson as head coach

Lionie Mack "Macky" Carden, Jr., an assistant football coach at Elon College for the past seven years has been named head coach of the Fightin' Christians.

He succeeds Wright Anderson who resigned January 13 to accept an assistant's position with the Oklahoma Outlaws of the United States Football League.

"I'm happy to be Elon's head coach," said Carden, 39, who is a 1967 graduate of the college. "I think I've prepared myself for the head job by coaching on the high school level and as an assistant to coaches Jerry Tolley and Anderson."

"We're extremely proud to elevate Macky Carden to the position of head coach," said Dr. Alan White, director of athletics. "Macky is a quiet coach but an excellent one. He has all the qualities necessary to continue the stability in the fine football program at Elon."

White also pointed out that Carden had been Elon's chief recruiter and that he knows most of the high school and junior college coaches in the state.

Carden indicated he would retain all coaches currently on the Elon staff. They include Don Kelly, linebackers and defensive ends coach; Gary Van Dam, defensive backs; Charlie Griffin, defensive front; Mike Howell, tight ends and receivers. He also said he would like to retain the services of part-time staffers Steve Johnson, Dwight Dutton and Henry Trevathan.

An offensive coach will be hired to replace Anderson, Carden said.

A native of Durham, Carden graduated from North Durham High where he played football and basketball and ran track. He attended Wake Forest for one year before transferring to Elon, where he majored in physical education. He received his master's degree in physical education at Appalachian State.

Prior to coaching at Elon, Carden held high school coaching jobs at Graham High, High Point Andrews, Hillsborough Orange, High Point Central and Kinston.

In 1977 he became Elon's offensive line coach under Coach Jerry Tolley, a position he has held since. He has converted the line, once a major weakness, into one of the strongest annually in the SAC-8 conference.

In an interview with the Burlington Times-News, Carden said he has no precise coaching philosophy. "I guess you can say I'm a personal coach as opposed to an x's and o's coach, although I have a good background in x's and o's. I plan no major changes in the football program. Perhaps we'll refine a few things."

Carden does not think the coaching change will hurt recruiting.

"We're in good shape personnel-wise," he added. "We lose most of our offense, three linemen, a tight-end, and two running backs, so our recruiting will center on the offensive unit. But we have our sights set on some good prospects and we'll follow up on those."

Carden is married to the former Karen Reider, a 1968 Elon graduate. Mrs. Carden serves as Intramural director at Elon as well as the women's tennis and volleyball coach. They have one daughter, Cindy.

Basketball teams pass mid-season

The Elon College men's basketball team stands 11-6 in mid-season, and Bill Morningstar says the outlook for the remainder of the season is good.

"This team is the best I've coached in the five years I've been year," Morningstar stated. He added that Benjie Tate and Kenny Richardson are having excellent seasons, averaging 12.7 and 10.7 points per game respectively. Andre Hines, transfer from the University of Maryland who became eligible to play on January 5, is now a great asset to the team. He averages 13.1 points per game.

Elon will host the Carolinas Conference Tournament on February 28 - March 2, and Morningstar predicted that the team would be in an excellent position to take the conference title.

The Elon College women's team, the Golden Girls, coached by Mary Jackson, have battled to an overall 8-8 record, behind standout Donna Trollinger who is averaging 19.1 points per game. Lisa Briggs, Jamie McNeely and Renate Costner have also been outstanding.

Results of games for both teams at press-time were as follows:

Soccer team has best season yet

Elon's soccer team completed its best year ever with a 12-5-2 campaign in 1983. The Fightin' Christians booters advanced to the District 26 finals before losing to Atlantic Christian 2-0 in a game played at Elon's home field.

A number of players also captured post-season honors for the Fightin' Christians. Being named to the All-Carolinas Conference team were striker Paul Lawson, goalie Joe Bartlinski, sweeper back Israel Hernandez, stopper back Andy Schaefer and striker Scott Spada. Lawson, Spada, Hernandez and Bartlinski also captured All-District 26 honors. Elon's first All-American was striker Scott Spada as he captured a place on a National Soccer Coaches Association All-South NAIA All-American team.

Football team finishes 18th

The 1983 Fightin' Christian football team finished the year 7-3 overall as Coach Wright Anderson completed his second year at Elon College. The Fightin' Christians, beset by numerous injuries, were ranked No. 18 in the final NAIA national poll. For the third time in the past four years, a South Atlantic Conference school, Carson-Newman, captured the NAIA national title. With Elon's national championships in 1980 and 1981, it is apparent the South Atlantic Conference is the premier conference in the NAIA.

Several Fightin' Christians garnered post-season honors. Named to the All-District First Team were offensive guard Clay Hassard, offensive tackle Eddie Hernandez, defensive end Jeff Cooper, linebacker Royce Fentress, and strong safety Kenny Angel. Second Team honorees were tight end Kelly Stanley, runningback Jimmy Smith, and noseguard Grady Williams. Garnering All-South Atlantic Conference honors from Elon were defensive end Jeff Cooper, linebacker Royce Fentress, and offensive tight end Kelly Stanley along with center Thomas Kilcrease. Being named to the second team from Elon were noseguard Grady Williams, quarterback Sam Fromhart, runningback Jimmy Smith and offensive guard Clay Hassard.

Elon's wrestlers have thus far struggled for a 1-3 record for the 1983-84 campaign. With two-time All-American Jay Lineberry returning to the Fightin' Christians, Elon's matmen should be much improved to the second half of their season.

F.A. Rawles '28

'28 grad still at head of class

F.A. Rawles celebrated his 80th birthday recently by working as a substitute teacher at Williamston Junior High School in Williamston, N.C.

Mr. Rawles was born in Suffolk, Va., October 7, 1903 and attended the public schools there. After graduating from Elon College in 1928, following several years of work and a return to school, he began a teaching career at Jamesville High School. He taught science and coached girls basketball at the school. Mr. Rawles' college degree certified him to teach all subjects and all grades 1-12.

He later taught at Chowan High School and Roper High School before going to work in the insurance, stocks and bonds business. The depression took care of his business and he took a job with the Virginia Department of Highways. After working with the U.S. Navy during World War II, he went back to the Virginia Department of Highways until he retired with 25 years of service. He and his wife Camille then moved to Williamston.

Mr. Rawles has worked for nearly 11 years as a substitute teacher in the Martin County Schools. During that tenure, he has worked in 13 of the 14 county schools in all grades and subjects. He is an active member of the Williamston Lions Club, serving as the White Cane Director last year, a member of the Administrative Board of the Methodist Church, and a Sunday School teacher. He also finds time to sing in the choir at the church.

When asked about his longevity. Mr. Rawles' comment was, "I'm thankful." He also stated that he tries to impress on his temporary students that association and perseverance are all important and that he is appreciative to be allowed the opportunity to work with them. They keep him looking forward to seeing and working with them next time.

Students in the Martin County Schools look forward to seeing Mr. Rawles and hearing him give time-honored principles and quotations to illustrate points, school officials stated. It was noted that he takes a genuine interest in each student he sees and often asks later how students did in a certain class or course.

Mr. Rawles lives with his wife, Camille, who also continues to work part-time.

College, Naperville, Illinois, in the late 1960s when she won the Outstanding Freshman Award. When she went on for her B.A. degree at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle, her major was English literature. She graduated cum laude with departmental distinction in 1977. For her, work in art began with weaving which she taught later at the Technical College of Alabama.

In the fall of 1979 Henricks received a graduate assistantship at UNC-G in art, and she continued her interest in weaving. But a course in painting soon overtook her love of work in fibers. Since 1980, Henricks has taught drawing, design and painting at Elon College on a part-time basis. Her husband, Tom, is assistant professor of sociology at the college. They have one child, Elizabeth, born in 1982. Judy Henricks likes teaching and finds contact with students both enjoyable and helpful. "It forces you to rethink certain issues," she says. She also likes to watch them learn to paint — "they often amaze themselves."

Henricks sees herself continuing to paint in the future. Recognition and commercial success, while they are gratifying, does not strongly motivate her. "You can't eat on what you make selling paintings," she says. "The act of painting must be a self-sustaining thing in itself. For me it is."

"Pears, Bottle and Patterned Cloth," 15 1/4 x 14 1/8 is a Henricks' still life in the artist's favorite medium, oil.

AMERICA'S ENERGY IS WINDPOWER

Never before has this nation had a greater need for educated minds... to help solve problems of energy, the economy, equal rights, employment, and the environment. Higher education must be a higher priority

Colleges shouldn't have to choose between lighting their buildings and enlightening their students. —Thomas Edison Invenior

Today, colleges all across America are being hurt by inflation. More and more of the money that used to go for microscopes, lab equipment and library books is now being consumed by basic necessities such as heating and maintenance. And my specialty—lighting.

What is most frightening is that this squeeze is coming at a time when we need all the trained minds we can get.

So please give generously to the college of your choice. The money you give will make everyone's future brighter.

Help! Give to the college of your choice.

FOUR ALUMNI RECEIVE RECOGNITION AWARDS

Special awards were presented to four alumni during the annual Elon College Alumni Association Awards Luncheon held on Alumni Day, May 5, 1984, at the college.

Rudy Moore Fonville, a member of the class of 1927 and Frances Turner Fonville, class of 1928, received Citizens' Service Awards; Charles Almon McIver, a member of the class of 1936, received the Distinguished Alumnus of the Year Award; and James W. Morris III, class of 1972, was named the Young Alumnus of the Year.

The Citizens' Service Award is given to a maximum of two people, who have been instrumental in the advancement of Elon College through the giving of their time, energy and resources.

The Distinguished Alumnus Award is given to a maximum of three alumni who have distinguished themselves in their professions and communities, bringing honor to their alma mater.

The Young Alumnus of the Year Award is presented to a maximum of two alumni who have been graduated for a period not to exceed 15 years and who have brought honor and recognition to themselves through their activities, and in doing so have reflected credit on the college.

Rudy M. and Frances Turner Fonville — Citizens' Service Award. Rudy Moore Fonville, a native of Alamance County, is an alumnus of North Carolina State University and Elon College. Fonville is the former general manager and executive vice president of the Burlington Daily Times-News.

Fonville went to work for the Times-News in the advertising department in 1929. Filling in as salesman, advertising manager, and proofreader, he worked his way up to business manager and finally to executive vice president.

He served as president of the Newspaper Advertising Executives Association of the Carolinas and is a former member, secretary and president of the Burlington Kiwanis Club. Fonville served 14 years as a trustee of Alamance County Hospital and is a former secretary and director of Alamance County Club.

Mrs. Fonville, the former Frances Turner, was born in Reidsville. She attended Elon College for two years, left to take a teaching position in High Point, and returned to Elon two years later to complete her studies. She graduated in 1928 and taught for four years in the Burlington City School system.

She is a recipient of the U.S. Treasury Award for Patriotic Services, 1942-44, and has served on the board of directors of United Way. She is an honorary member of the Service League of Alamance County and an honorary life member of the Women of the Church, First Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Fonville is a member of the Elon College Presidential Board of Advisers and has served on the Alamance County Hospital Auxiliary.

In May of 1981, the Fonvilles provided the resources to Elon College to construct the beautiful Fonville Fountain, which has become the highlight of the campus.

The Fonvilles currently reside in Burlington and are active members of the First Presbyterian Church in Burlington, where Mr. Fonville is a former deacon.

Charles Almon McIver Distinguished Alumnus of the Year Award

Charles Almon "Mon" McIver, a Burlington native, attended Elon College with the class of 1936. McIver worked with the Baker Cammack Hosiery Mills for 46 years, starting as payroll clerk in 1934 and working his way up to president in 1976.

He served as mayor of the City of Burlington from 1959-1963 and was active in the 1968 Senate election campaigns for Sam Ervin, Jr. and in 1972 for B. Everett Jordan, serving both times as Alamance County chairman.

McIver has been active in the Burlington community, serving as president of the United Way of Alamance County, a member of the board of health, and chairman of the Citizens' Committee for Burlington City Schools. He also has been active in the Salvation Army and the Boys Club.

An active member of First Presbyterian Church of Burlington, he is an elder and trustee. He is a former deacon, teacher and superintendent of the Sunday school. He is chairman of the board of First Federal Savings and Loan Association, where he has been a director for over 20 years, and is a former treasurer and secretary of the Alamance County Club.

Mr. McIver is a former member of the Elon College Development Council, past president of the Alumni Association, and member of the Presidential Board of Advisers. McIver is presently Alamance County chairman for the Elon College PRIDE II Campaign.

McIver and his wife, the former Bessie Walker, currently reside in Burlington.

James W. Morris III Young Alumnus of the Year Award Jim Morris was born in Lexington and graduated from Elon College in 1972 with a degree in health and physical education.

Prior to receiving his degree, Morris left Elon to play professional baseball with the Boston Red Sox organization. He returned to Elon after a summer of professional baseball to finish his degree.

After serving as a graduate assistant coach at Elon for several months, Morris spent the next three years in minor league baseball, playing every position except first base and catcher. In 1974, Morris became a graduate assistant coach at Appalachian State University, and after receiving his master's degree in 1975, accepted the job of head baseball coach at Dekalb South Junior College.

From Dekalb, Morris spent two years as an assistant coach at Florida State University, joining one of the most successful college programs in the country.

Morris is presently the head coach at Georgia Tech, where he has been instrumental in promoting the team. He was named "ACC Baseball Coach of the Year" in 1983.

PRIDE II reaches $4.5
million

As of March 31, 1984, the Elon College PRIDE II campaign had garnered $4,512,000 toward its goal of $5.7 million. Announced in October, 1983, the PRIDE II campaign is the most ambitious fund-raising effort in Elon College history. It seeks to raise $2 million for endowment, $2 million for a new Fine Arts Center, $1.2 million for Annual Giving and $500,000 for physical plant enhancements.

College officials were gratified by the success of the campaign thus far.

"Once again alumni, parents, friends and members of the college family have demonstrated their commitment to Elon College," said Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development. "The success of this campaign is a direct reflection of their generosity and dedication to high ideals, and it renews our commitment to ensure that their money is well invested."

According to Dr. Jerry Tolley, campaign coordinator, twenty-eight new scholarship funds have been established as a result of the campaign, generating over $500,000 for the Elon scholarship endowment. Two of these scholarships honor members of the Elon College family — former coach L.J. "Hap" Perry and Professor

Phonathon exceeds goal

The 1984 Elon College Phonathon has ended with a total of $112,343 pledged to the college, the largest amount ever raised in the five-year history of the Phonathon.

"We surpassed our goal of $100,000 by 12 percent," said an ecstatic Dr. Jerry Tolley, Elon's Director of Annual Giving and organizer of the Phonathon. "It gets better every year. The enthusiastic response of the alumni, parents and friends who were called is truly gratifying."

An interesting side story in this year's Phonathon was the Great Alumni Challenge. The alumni who graduated after 1968, the "still-we-behind-the-ears" crowd, challenged the "old-timers."

those who graduated before that year, to see who could get the highest number of donors. According to Tolley, however, it is still too early to predict the winner in that hotly contested race. The "old timers" are now ahead by approximately 100 donors, but the final figures will not be known until after May 31, 1984, the date all pledges are due.

The Phonathon, an annual spring event at Elon, raises money for the Annual Fund, which helps to pay for general operating expenses. Donations to the Annual Fund help to offset the rising costs of day-to-day operations and therefore help to keep tuition costs down.

Phonathon calls are made by students at Elon over a three-week period. "We try to contact every alumnus, parent and friend of Elon College," said Tolley. The callers are representatives of various student service groups and Greek organizations at the college, as well as the ROTC, the Black Cultural Society and the new dormitory complex.

The callers this year were divided into two teams, composed of five groups each. The top group in each team won a trip to Myrtle Beach during Spring Break. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Watkins '48 again donated the use of their condominium for the week to the winning teams.

"We are extremely grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Watkins for their generosity in letting us use their home again," said Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development. "This trip provides motivation for our volunteer callers and rewards them for the hard work they put into the Phonathon."

Tolley praised this year's student callers as dedicated and highly effective. The winners of the trip were Tau Kappa Epsilon and Tri-Sigma representatives. The top caller of the Phonathon was Tri-Sig Karen Welzant who obtained 143 pledges amounting to a total of $3,755.

College receives bequest

A teacher who retired after 37 years in the classroom in Alamance County has left a bequest of over $22,000 to Elon College for scholarship aid to students who are preparing to teach.

Mrs. Lucy Martin Kernodle, who died in 1982 at age 81, had taken some teacher education courses at Elon and, as a result, decided to establish an endowed scholarship fund for Alamance County students majoring in education. She was the aunt of Emery K. Gilliam, a 1948 graduate of Elon College, who encouraged her to include the liberal arts institution in her will. Gilliam is a senior group industrial engineer for Burlington Industries, and his wife, Doris, also an Elon alumna, works in the athletic office at Elon.

Mrs. Kernodle was born in the Bethany community of Alamance County in 1901. She attended Bethany Grade School and graduated from Graham High School. Dedicated to the profession of teaching, she was educated at Appalachian State University and Lenoir College. She retired in 1963 from her long-time position as a certified elementary teacher in the Alamance County school system.

She began her teaching career at the Bethany School in the Southern part of the county, then moved to Oakwood School near Gilliam's Church in the northern part of Alamance. When Oakwood closed, she transferred to Alamahaw-Osage School, where she taught the first grade until her retirement.

While teaching at Oakwood School, she boarded at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Kernodle, within walking distance of the one-room schoolhouse. She later married their son, Claude, and they had one son. Both her husband and son are deceased.

Mrs. Lucy Martin Kernodle

A dedicated church worker, Mrs. Kernodle was a member of Shiloh United Methodist Church at Route 1, Gibsonville. Her leisure time was spent in studying the Bible, visiting shut-ins, oil painting, and playing the violin.

Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development at Elon, said the college will use the bequest to establish The Lucy Martin Kernodle Scholarship Fund and will award the earnings from the endowment to aid students in the department of education. "This is a wonderful memorial to a lady who touched so many lives and was highly respected, not only as a teacher, but also as a mother and friend," Dr. Williams said. "Her memory will live on in the lives of students who receive this scholarship, thanks to her generosity."

Iris H. McEwen dies after long illness

Mrs. Iris Holt McEwen, trustee emerita of Elon College, died Sunday, April 15, 1984 after several years of failing health.

Mrs. McEwen had been a member of the Board of Trustees since 1948. The Iris Holt McEwen Library on the campus is named in her honor, and the McEwen Dining Hall was made possible by a gift from her in memory of her husband, James H. McEwen, Sr. In 1970 she was awarded the honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from Elon College.

"Iris McEwen was a respected and valued member of the Elon College Board of Trustees for many years," said President Fred Young. "Her influence will extend for generations."

Mrs. McEwen had a long career of community service. She was a trustee emerita and former president of the Elon Home for Children. The Holt Chapel on the campus at the home was given by her and her family in memory of her parents. She was the Alamance County Woman of the Year in 1962, a member of the Burlington Garden Club, a charter member of the Burlington Service League, and organized the first Girl Scout Council of Burlington. She was a charter member of the Mentor Book Club, past chairman and member of the Board of Public Welfare of Alamance County, and was vice president of the local Council of Social Agencies.

She was a member of the First Christian United Church of Christ, founder of the Iris McEwen Sunday School Class, past president of the Women of the Church and was active on boards and committees at the conference and convention level.

Mrs. McEwen is survived by a daughter, Mrs. John A. McCrary of Burlington, and a son, James H. McEwen, Jr. of New York, who is also a member of the Elon College Board of Trustees.

Movie Director Martin Ritt '36 returns for film festival

Martin Ritt, Elon alumnus and award-winning movie director, visited the Elon College campus May 1-5 for a week-long Martin Ritt Film Festival.

Several of Ritt's best-known films were shown prior to and during the event, including Southerner with Paul Winfield and Cicely Tyson; Norma Rae with Sally Field; Hud starring Paul Newman, Melvyn Douglas and Patricia Neal; and Conrack, starring Jon Voight.

His most recent film, Cross Creek, starring Mary Steenburgen and Rip Torn, was also shown. The movie is based on the life of Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, the author of The Yearling. The film received several Academy Awards nominations.

Ritt first came to Elon College in 1932 from Brooklyn, New York. During his two-year stay at Elon, he played football under Coach

"Peahead" Walker, participated in various theatrical productions and took in all that he could about the South, a region that would provide the setting for eight of his films.

After leaving Elon in 1934, Ritt studied law at St. John's University in New York. He soon became involved in the theater, studied under Elia Kazan and joined the historic Group Theatre. During World War II he served in the Air Force.

In 1957 Ritt directed his first full-length film, The Edge of the City, starring Sidney Poitier and John Cassavetes. Since then he has directed 21 films. Four of his productions have been nominated for Academy Awards for best film.

Ritt came to the Elon film festival from Atlanta where he is currently starring in a movie being filmed there. The role is one of his rare acting appearances.

ELON ALUMNI

EMANONS ENTERTAIN SIX ALUMNI CHAPTERS

"Superb!" "Fantastic!" "Marvelous!" "Extraordinary!" These are just some of the exclamations that were used by alumni and friends of the college to describe The Emanons of Elon College during their appearances at six alumni chapters in January and February.

The Emanons represent the jazz program of the fine arts department at Elon. The repertoire of the group is a variety of music from the "Big Band" sounds to the vast array of jazz and jazz rock styles of the 80's. The ensemble was organized in 1962 and has appeared in Puerto Rico, Switzerland, Germany and Luxembourg, as well as at locations along the eastern seaboard of the United States. During the 1984 Winter Tour The Emanons appeared at Disney World in Orlando, Florida for the tenth year.

Under the capable direction of Drs. Jack White and David Bragg, the band entertained approximately 1,000 Elon supporters at six social events sponsored by Elon College Alumni Association.

GREATER RICHMOND ALUMNI CHAPTER

On Saturday, January 14, the Greater Richmond Alumni Chapter, headed by Linda May Shields '67 and her husband, Bill, sponsored a dinner/dance at the Richmond Country Club. This gathering, which has become an annual tradition in Richmond, attracted over 125 friends of the college who danced until midnight to the sounds of Tommy Dorsey and Glenn Miller. Wallace '49 and Nita Chandler assisted at this highly successful event.

GREATER WASHINGTON ALUMNI CHAPTER

On the following evening, about 45 Elon supporters who live near the nation's capital met at the Twin Bridges Marriott Hotel in Alexandria for the third annual "Sunday Evening with The Emanons" party. Pete Eldridge '75 was responsible for the arrangements at the Marriott.

GREATER CHARLOTTE ALUMNI CHAPTER

On Saturday, January 21, The Emanons appeared at Myers Park Country Club in Charlotte and received an enthusiastic reception from more than 125 Elonites. This was the chapter's first social of this type and was an overwhelming success. Fred Bright '67 and his wife, Sandy, were responsible for making the arrangements at the club, and Chapter President "Ace" Harrell '48, his wife, Jeanne '45, and a committee of local alumni organized the event. It was announced at the dance that Stan Butler '78 would become the new president of the chapter.

GREATER ATLANTA ALUMNI CHAPTER

ALAMANCE COUNTY ALUMNI CHAPTER

On Tuesday, February 14, The Emanons presented a "Welcome Back Concert" in Whitely Auditorium on the Elon campus. A standing room only crowd of approximately 400 persons — the largest alumni-chapter-sponsored gathering ever — enjoyed the two and one-half hour performance. Afterward, the guests adjourned to West Dormitory Parlor for a reception hosted by Tom Bass '71, president of the Alamance County Chapter, and his wife Sandy '67.

GUILFORD COUNTY ALUMNI CHAPTER

On Saturday evening, February 18, the Guilford County Chapter sponsored its first gathering in several years and enjoyed the largest turnout ever at any chapter-sponsored dance of this type. Nearly 200 guests enjoyed an elegant evening at Greensboro Country Club with music provided by The Emanons. Members of the Executive Committee of the Alumni Association were special guests of the affair, which was promoted by chapter president Ashburn Kirby '57 and nearly a dozen other local alumni. A special word of thanks goes to L.E. "Foots" Fesmire '24, who hosted this gathering.

Bowmans endow new scholarship

A Burlington couple has endowed a $10,000 scholarship at Elon College for needy and worthy students, preferably from Alamance County.

Established by Dr. Betty Lynch Bowman and her husband, J. Fred Bowman, the scholarship honors Dr. Bowman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Zebulon Lynch. Mr. Lynch was manager of the Elon College farm, where many students in the 1920s to 1940s worked their way through college.

All five of the Lynch children, including Dr. Bowman, attended Elon College and worked on the college farm to help pay their tuition. Dr. Bowman received the A.B. degree at Elon, the M.A. degree at UNC Greensboro, and the doctoral degree from UNC-Chapel Hill. She has worked in the public schools for 39 years, 16 years with the Burlington City School System and 20 years with the Alamance County schools.

Mr. Bowman received the A.B. degree from Elon in 1944, working second shift to meet expenses. Following the war, he received a Master's Degree in engineering from Duke University and the Master's Degree in business management from UNC-Greensboro.

Dr. Bowman is principal of Broadview Middle School. Mr. Bowman, an engineer at AT&T, is a candidate for the North Carolina House of Representatives.

"This is an example of an Elon College tradition at its best," said

Dr. Betty Lynch Bowman '44

J. Fred Bowman '44

Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development at Elon. "The Lynch family heritage is built around Elon College. The Bowman gift is a marvelous tribute to their love for the institution."

Administration in Hampton, Va., said committee members share a common interest in the campaign and "pledge their 100 percent support of and participation in the $5.7 million PRIDE II Campaign." Dr. O'Neill is president of the alumni association representing over 10,000 Elon alumni.

The three-year campaign, the most ambitious in the 95-year history of the college, seeks funds for the construction of a new fine arts center, for ongoing expenses, capital improvements, and endowment.

Announced last October, the campaign has already generated over $4.5 million to the college.

solicitors have already raised over $175,000 for the campaign.

During the Alamance County campaign, 52 persons and companies have responded to the Glen Raven Challenge. The challenge offered $1,000 to Elon College for every gift or pledge of $1,000 or more that any individual company or organization in Alamance County makes to PRIDE II, up to a total of $60,000. Only a few months into the campaign, the challenge is already well on its way to being claimed — perhaps exceeded.

The total amount contributed or pledged to the campaign from all Alamance County sources now stands at $1.9 million.

WSOE: a sound alternative 89.3

RADIO STATION INCREASES POWER TO 500 watts

By Chris Quad

In a small room off the dark, deserted hall in Harper Center, a girl is seated in front of a panel of lights, switches, and buttons. A record spins on one of the two turntables within her reach. Her practiced fingers cue up another record and flick the red microphone lever to the "on" position.

The girl announces the next song, returns the microphone to the "off" position, and shuffles through a stack of records, looking for a song that has just been requested.

This is a typical scene at WSOE, the radio station of Elon College. Prior to February 1, 1984, the ten watt signal from WSOE could be picked up by very few people. Now, with a boost in power to 500 watts, the sounds of the station are heard by more people than ever before, and interest in the college's radio program is booming.

The road to success has been a long one. "During the middle and late seventies the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) was involved in a debate over the future of educational radio," said Gerald Gibson, faculty advisor for WSOE and communications instructor at Elon College. "There is only enough room for 100 stations on FM radio, and the commercial band space is from 91-108. People who were primarily interested in commercial stations looked at all small educational radio stations and decided we weren't using this limited resource very well," he explained.

In January, 1981, the FCC ruled that public radio had to go on the air 365 days a year, and WSOE was faced with three options: go up in power, go into the commercial band, or shut down completely.

"At ten watts," said Gibson, "no one would have heard us in the commercial band. It would have just meant a slow death," he said.

A task force was set up at Elon College that looked at all the media on campus and analyzed the functions they served. A report recommending the increased wattage for WSOE came out in June 1983, and in August, $25,000 was set aside for the purchase of equipment and construction costs.

"Before we increased power, the signal from WSOE got out about two miles," said Gibson. "And that was on a good day with no birds on the antenna," he added. Now at 500 watts, the signal from WSOE can be reached up to 25 miles away.

According to Gibson, people are now talking about WSOE. With an estimated audience of 18,000 listeners, the station covers all of Alamance County and half of Guilford County. "Commercial stations in the area are talking to us," said Gibson. "We are large enough now to be a threat to their market," he said.

The station, located at 89.3 on the FM dial, aims its programming towards Elon College students and the surrounding community. "There are certain songs we don't play because of the lyrics," said Gibson. "We try to direct the balance of our programming toward the community of Elon College," he said.

The station has a variety of programs, including a church service broadcast on Sundays, a big band show, a late 60s show, a new music show, and a contemporary Christian music show.

"We would eventually like to expand our programming and to coordinate it with what is going on in the classroom," said Gibson. "For example, when students are assigned to read dramas, we would like to try to broadcast them so they can hear what is happening," he said.

WSOE has a big high school audience, mostly due to the fact that the station makes it a point to play requested songs. During the college's recent Spring Break, the station averaged from five to seven phone calls an hour. "We play requests as soon as we can get to them," said Gibson.

Through WSOE, Elon College is able to offer hands-on experience in radio broadcasting. Though Elon does not offer a major in communications, students are able to find good jobs in the field because they know how to use the equipment.

"Students do not have to take classes in broadcasting in order to work at WSOE. This makes the program more attractive in recruiting people," said Gibson. "We have people coming out their senior year with four years of broadcasting experience. They learn production, newswriting, and how to run the equipment. I have them discuss the station and make a lot of management decisions," he said.

Indeed, at a recent staff meeting, decisions were made without Gibson even being present. A group of nine Elon College students make up the executive board and are essentially responsible for the operation of WSOE.

Pat Bell, a senior at Elon, is the station's general manager. Bell spends about 11-12 hours at the station a week and has been working at WSOE since his freshman year. "One of the first places I went on Freshman Day was the radio station," said Bell. "I like radio, and I feel this is preparing me for a job in broadcast management," he said.

Charles Bruce, the station's assistant manager, says working at WSOE is strictly a hobby. "It's nice to know people are listening to you and that you have followers," Bruce said.

Other staff members are Emily Besuden, program director; Tom Smiddy, assistant program director; Tammy Epperson, music director; Mike Wheaton, assistant music director; Robin Keller, business manager; Joe Zeller, production director; and Pete Koort, promotions and public relations director.

More than 25 other people also work with WSOE. These students learn every facet of the station, all the rules and regulations, and are trained to use the equipment. Program director, Emily Besuden does much of the training. "It is gratifying to know people appreciate the work we do," said Besuden. "Some of us do it just because we enjoy it, and some of us want to go on in the field," she said.

WSOE is giving many students at Elon College the opportunity to participate in, and learn about, the broadcasting field. "The students do the majority of the work," said Gibson. "I'm primarily here to advise them. We try different things in programming, and if they don't work, we try other things. We have an open-door policy at WSOE and we feel that everybody deserves a chance," he said.

Looking back at Elon

When young James Eugene Watts stepped off the train at the Elon College depot in September 1923 he was beginning a tradition that would span three decades and see all eight members of the Watts family attend Elon for their education.

A young boy, just shy of 15 Gene Watts had come to Elon from the farmlands of Anson County where his family raised cotton on a plantation originally owned by his great-grandfather. Gene's parents, James Cyrus and Blanche Rogers Watts, were committed to the value of education for their children. There had been some talk of Gene's going to the University of North Carolina, but it was ultimately decided that he should accompany Ruth and Mae Lowry, the two young daughters of a neighboring family, to Elon College.

Gene Watts' arrival coincided with the building of a new Elon. In January of 1923, the Administration Building, the main campus facility, had been destroyed in a catastrophic fire. By September five new buildings were going up at the heart of the campus — Alamance Building, Mooney Christian Education Building, Duke Science Building, Carlton Library and Whitley Auditorium. Gene Watts helped to build Alamance Building, hauling load after load of mortar to the bricklayers as a part-time job.

Lack of funds kept Gene from returning to Elon in 1924-25 — he taught school that year in Polkton, N.C. near his home — but he was back for the following year, and in 1926 two Wattses stepped off the train — Gene and his sister Sue. From then on until the mid '40s there would be two members of the family studying at Elon more often than not.

There were plenty of rules to keep men and women apart at the college then, but, as Gene Watts recalls, they "got together." One sanctioned opportunity was in the dining hall which was behind West. Each night men and women sat together at assigned tables which were hosted by a senior. Meals were rather formal affairs: everyone "dressed" for dinner and everyone remained seated until they were excused.

Frank Carboy was director of athletics at Elon and coached all sports. Gene Watts was a benchwarmer, or "back-hat," he says, on several teams. On one occasion Carboy was taking the football team on the train to Clemson, S.C. Not having the money for a ticket, Gene, a mere whippersnapper at 95 pounds, hid in an upper berth behind 275-pound Bill Caldwell. The sharp conductor detected him however, and Coach Carboy had to buy him a ticket. When they returned to Elon, Gene had plenty of time to think about the trip while he beat rugs to repay his debt to Carboy.

Gene Watts received his B.A. from Elon in 1928, and Sue, who had married George D. Colclough, received hers in 1931. Brother Cecil arrived as a freshman in her senior year.

Cecil studied at Elon for two years during the height of the Depression, working several jobs to pay his way. In addition to working for the A&P in Burlington and White's Drug Store in Elon, he swept the third floor of Alamance and kept books for Mrs. Boney, the dietitian. He recalls a second eating establishment called the "Boys Club," which was run by a man named Jim Brown and was located across Highway 100 through the big iron gates at the north entrance to the campus. In spite of hard times, says Cecil, students "were too busy being happy to think about being poor."

Cecil Watts was followed by Dan and Hal who came in 1933 and 1934 respectively. Dan's arrival coincided with the arrival of the first child born to the Colcloughs and he lived with them in their home on O'Kelley Avenue during all of his four years at Elon and, as he says, "babysat my way through college."

By 1933, the college was in severe economic distress because of the Depression and debts from the building campaign, and enrollment had dwindled to fewer than 250 students. As Field Secretary, George Colclough was in charge of admissions recruiting then. Like many others, Dan Watts credits Colclough with keeping the school alive.

"George Colclough went out literally walking through the corn fields of North Carolina to tell young men and women face to face about the opportunities for an education at Elon," says Watts, "and he brought them in." One of the newest residence halls on the campus today is named in memory of Colclough and his contribution to the college.

Dan remembers several of his professors at Elon who, as he says, "pointed me in the right direction." Dr. T. E. Powell, Jr. was, he recalls, "a real dynamo." Powell had already founded Carolina Biological Supply when Dan Watts was a student at Elon and Dan, a biology major, worked there on weekends. Like all the Watts family, Dan also fondly remembers Dr. A. L. Hook.

By the time Hal Watts was ready to enter college in 1934, a tradition had been established. Although he had been offered a football scholarship by a college in Arkansas, the call to Elon was stronger, and Hal was here for three years — 1934-35, 1937-38

Dr. L. E. Smith was president then and years later when Hal introduced his wife to Dr. Smith, the formidable chief executive said, "Mrs. Watts, I'm pleased to meet you. Did you know your husband owns two square feet of carpet right here in front of my desk?"

Like many other young men, Hal had a penchant for being knowledgeable about such matters as a water balloon dropped squarely on the head of Dean J. D. Messick! On such occasions he would invariably be called before Dr. Smith's mammoth desk. "You may not have done it, Hal, but you know who did," Dr. Smith would chide.

Hal and Dan both remember the legendary Elon coach D. C. "Peahead" Walker, but Dan recalls a side of Walker, not frequently mentioned — his teaching ability. He took Walker's course in coaching techniques and remembers him as an excellent teacher. "Two years after I graduated, I was teaching in Yanceyville, N.C.

and they asked me to coach the basketball team," he says. "I did it solely on the basis of what I had learned in Walker's class and the team went undefeated!"

A vivid memory for Hal Watts is the Elon football team of 1937 that defeated VMI, the Southern Conference champion for that year. The 12-6 victory over the powerful VMI team is considered one of the greatest games in Elon sports history. The 1937 team went undefeated except for one controversial loss to Appalachian in a game that many Elon fans felt should have been postponed due to weather conditions.

In 1939, as World War II was beginning in Europe, two more Watts brothers entered Elon — Blanchard King, called B.K., and Cyrus Edwin or Ed. B.K. studied at Elon for two years, before enlisting in the Air Force where he would become a fighter pilot, a member of the Flying Tigers, and fly P-40's or Warhawks throughout the war.

B.K.'s preparation for his auspicious career as pilot was begun on the Elon campus through the Civilian Pilot Training Program which Dr. L. E. Smith had managed to secure for the institution. Under the direction of Professor A. L. Hook, the program offered a course in aeronautics and flying instruction at Burlington's Huffman Field. B.K. excelled in the course and, as a result, received an appointment to the Flying Cadets.

By joining the Naval Reserves, Ed stayed at Elon to finish his degree in 1943, before going into the Navy, and he recalls the changes the war made on the campus — the stunning effect of the Pearl Harbor bombing which cast a big question mark on the future for all students, the calling up of the Army reserves which wiped out nearly one-half of the senior class, the influx of several hundred Army Air Force Cadets who moved onto the campus and received academic and military instruction prior to being sent to army bases for flight instruction.

But some things went on as usual even during the War — student pranks for example. One Monday morning during required chapel in Whitley Auditorium, an alarm clock mysteriously went off in the middle of Dr. L. E. Smith's address. As Ed recalls, the stern president let the alarm finish and then continued his address, never once acknowledging the shrill interruption.

Ed also remembers living in the Publishing House across the railroad tracks from the college, students flocking to the bookstore at 9:30 each night for a social hour after enforced study hours, printing the Maroon and Gold (of which he was editor) using the college's linotype machine and printing press in Duke Science Building, and the terrible fire that destroyed the West Dorm annex housing the dining hall and kitchen.

The last Watts to attend Elon was Jo, who entered in 1945.

After her sophomore year, she married fellow student W.L. "Bill" Williams. While Bill finished college, Jo worked and took courses, one at a time, finishing her degree in 1955.

For many years after her marriage, Jo was secretary to Dr. L. E. Smith, whose office occupied the southeast corner of Alumnance Building. Across the hall was the student bookstore, containing not only books but a soda fountain and juke box which poured forth such favorites as "Sentimental Journey" to a packed house of students in their saddle oxfords, bobby Sox and sweaters.

Professor A. L. Hook was registrar during Jo and Bill Williams' Elon years. D. J. Bowden was dean, W. E. "Buster" Butler was business manager, Jackie Matlock and Judy Burns comprised the Admissions Department.

Jo and Bill Williams were also among the early residents of the Veterans Apartments, the four room dwellings that were constructed of surplus government materials after the war. These apartments, much maligned in later years, were "quite comfortable" when they were new, as Jo remembers.

Although she was the last to come to Elon, Jo Watts has stayed the longest. After leaving to teach in public schools for many years, she returned to Elon in 1969 to become a professor of education and is now vice president for development.

Sue Watts Colclough retained close ties with the college through her husband, whose untimely death in 1975 was a great loss to all, and through the proximity of their home, which is located just one block east of the main campus.

In spite of the educational background they have in common, the Watts brothers have all distinguished themselves and their alma mater — by their accomplishments in different fields.

After teaching for several years, Gene Watts founded Burtex Corporation, a distributorship of hosiery, in Burlington, N. C., and he and his wife Thelma made their home nearby in Haw River, her hometown. They have lived there since. In 1973, he sold the business and retired.

Cecil Watts went on to graduate from the Strayer College of Accounting in Washington, D.C. after leaving Elon. He then went to work for the U. S. government's General Accounting Office, transferred to the Treasury Department in 1950 and retired after 37 years in 1972. He and his wife, also a native of Anson County, now live in Charlotte, N. C.

Hal Watts' name was drawn in the first draft for World War II and he entered the Navy in March, 1941. Eight years later he switched to the Coast Guard. In 1971, after 30 years service and having lived all over the world, he retired. For the last six years, they have lived in Parkton, N.C., where Hal plays golf every day.

Dan Watts went on to earn his Ph.D. in physiology in 1942 after graduating from Elon. After a 4½ year stint in the Navy, he began a career of teaching and research in the field of pharmacology. In 1966, having held positions at the University of Virginia and West Virginia University, he was named Dean of the School of Basic Sciences and Professor of Pharmacology at the Medical College of Virginia at Virginia Commonwealth University. In 1982 he retired and was named dean emeritus. He and his wife live in Richmond.

After his illustrious tour of duty as a pilot in World War II, B.K. Watts made a career of

THE MIND IN THE HE

Angyal's biographical study of Loren Eiseley traces the synthesis of science and literature

By Mary Ellen Priestley

"I rode...across a sunlit, timeless prairie over which nothing passed but a sloop or a wandering bird. On the verge where that prairie halted before a great wall of naked sandstone and clay, I came upon the Silt. A narrow crack wore by some descending torrent had begun secretly, far back to the prairie grass, and worked itself deeper and deeper into the floor sandstone that led by devious channels into the broken waste beyond. I rode back along the crack to a spot where I could descend into it, dismounted, and left my horse to graze.

"The crack was only about body-width and, as I worked my way downward, the light turned dark and green from the overhanging grass...The Silt was a little sinister—like an open grave, assuming the dead were enabled to take one last look—for over me the sky seemed already as far off as some future century I would never see.

"I ignored the sky, then, and began to concentrate on the sandstone walls that had led me into this place...that cut was a perfect cross section through perhaps ten million years of time. I hoped to find at least a bone, but I was not prepared for the sight I finally came upon. Staring straight out at me, as I slid farther and deeper into the green twilight, was a skull embedded in the solid sandstone...

"It was not, of course, human. I was deep, deep below the time of man in a remote age near the beginning of the reign of mammals."

So the opening paragraphs of Loren Eiseley's The Immense Journey draw the reader into the past ages of the earth and the emergence and development of life. Within a controlling frame of evolution, Eiseley the eminent anthropologist writes of the immense journey of humanity in scientifically informed but metaphorical prose full of personal recollections and insights.

And so the prose of Loren Eiseley attracted Andrew J. Angyal, now assistant professor of English at Elon College. Angyal had been interested in the natural history writer from the time he first read Thoreau in high school. He was introduced to Eiseley's writing by Edmund Fuller, the book reviewer and critic, when Fuller was head of English at South Kent School, Connecticut, and Angyal was an English master. Having earned his B.A. in English at Queen's College, City University of New York, Angyal went on to Yale Divinity School for the M.A. degree. He came south to Duke for the Ph.D. in American literature, awarded in 1976. By this time he was reading Eiseley's essays and books as soon as they were published.

At a 1977 summer seminar, Angyal was lecturing on the anthropologist's graceful and eloquent prose, and his wisdom and insight as a scientist, when he learned that Eiseley had died. He commented on the fact that little had been written about him. One student said, "Why don't you write about him, Dr. Angyal?"

Thus it was that Angyal decided to undertake a critical biography. With a load of teaching, directing plays, and student advising, he managed to devote summers to research and writing and one sabbatical during January to completion of the book. The result is a biography, Loren Eiseley, published last fall in the Twayne United States Authors Series by G. K. Hall & Company, Boston.

In writing the biography, Angyal also wished to recognize some achievements of Eiseley that were ignored by "most of the literary avant-garde." For example, he notes in his preface that Eiseley "has done as much as anyone in his generation to revive the personal or 'familiar' essay and to extend its range and audience," but "his contribution has gone largely unrecognized." Perhaps the "literati feel less than comfortable with his subject matter, and scientists too often look askance" at fellow scientists who write for the general reader. Angyal reminds us that Van Wyck Brooks, critic and biographer, argued that "our best prose is written by our natural history writers, their field dismissed by science as anachronistic and by the humanities as somehow beyond the pale." Eiseley himself decried the notion of "the two cultures" which assumes that science and literature do not mix. This idea, he felt, is an illusion, for the literary natural history writer heralds a new humanism based on reconnecting mankind and nature.

Angyal also believes that, in this materialistic, technological

Dr. Andrew J. Angyal, assistant professor of English at Elon College, whose most recently published work is world, people need to read about their natural world. And more specifically, he hopes that the excellent prose of Loren Eiseley will be read by new generations of readers. His biography was written as a reference work, one that may be used as a text for courses in biography, nature writing, and interdisciplinary studies.

The author says that Eiseley's final essays place him in the tradition of such natural history writers as Gilbert White, W. H. Hudson, Richard Jefferies, Henry David Thoreau, and in our time, Rachel Carson, Annie Dillard and Lewis Thomas.

Angyal's biographical study of 153 pages opens with a chapter entitled "A Son of the 'Middle Border,'" Eiseley's early life which includes his lonely childhood, his interest in poetry, his restless wanderings, university education, early teaching and the beginnings of his "humanized" scientific writing.

The body of the critical biography, chapters two through

of anthropology Loren Eiseley.

six, examines Eiseley's major and minor prose works, some of his numerous lectures and articles, and finally his return to poetry. Throughout these chapters, Angyal weaves a close fabric of criticism, life story and pertinent information from his research and wide reading. The book includes a useful chronology, well documented notes and references, a selected bibliography arranged by categories under primary and secondary sources, and an index.

This biography appeared almost simultaneously with two other books on Eiseley, one by E. Fred Carlisle, Loren Eiseley: The Development of a Writer, and the other by Leslie E. Gerber and Margaret McFadden, Loren Eiseley. The Library Journal reviewer on September 1, 1983, said that these were the first "book-length studies of the renowned and prolific poet/essayist/naturalist/environmentalist." The reviewer wrote that Angyal "provides, in the standard Twayne format, the most valuable overview." Of the three titles, Angyal's is "the most comprehensive."

Wall Street Journal reviewer Edmund Fuller commended the biography for its "comprehensiveness, balance and objectivity." It has "a refreshing directness and coherence." Fuller regretted that Twayne had classed the biography as a textbook because texts do not have general distribution. "It will go widely into schools, colleges and (one hopes devoutly) public libraries."

As Angyal implies, the best introduction to Eiseley is Eiseley. Reading The Immense Journey, The Night Country, and All the Strange Hours will tell anyone that what Eiseley writes of his great predecessors such as Richard Jeffries might be said of himself:

"The grim portrait of a starving lark cracking an empty snail shell before Richard Jeffries' window on a bleak winter day is from a world entirely different from that of the scientist. Jeffries' observation is sharp, his facts accurate, yet there is, in his description, a sense of his own poignant hunger—the hunger of a dying man—for the beauty of an earth insensible to human needs. Here again we are in the presence of an artist whose vision is unique."

The great nature essayists were not discoverers in the objective sense, Eiseley says. There was a different contribution. "They opened the minds of men by the sheer power of their thought. The world of nature, once seen through the eye of genius, is never seen in quite the same manner afterward." (The Night Country)

And so it is—reading Eiseley.

OBSERVATION & WONDER

The Life of Loren Eiseley

By Mary Ellen Priestley

Loren Corey Eiseley was born in Lincoln, Nebraska, on September 3, 1907 to a hard-working but impoverished father and an artistic mother who was stone deaf. Loren grew up an only child in a family isolated by his mother's attempts at communication and by the family's "keeping to themselves." Loren soon became aware that they were different from other people.

One joy was hearing his father, once an actor in small Midwestern "opera houses," talk and read in his "beautiful resonant speaking voice." But Clyde Eiseley was away much of the time working long hours trying to sell hardware. So Loren dug in the sand, taught himself to read, followed daring boys through city drainpipes, and lived in the two worlds of physical activity and imagination. Books, borrowed from the library and pulled home in his wagon, and aquariums he built helped him create a life of his own. Animals took on great importance in his life.

Loren was also helped by his maternal uncle who took him to the University of Nebraska museum to see mammoth bones and other exhibits from the Nebraska Badlands.

After Temple High School where he began to write free verse and to compose commendable prose, Eiseley entered the University of Nebraska in Lincoln in 1925.

What should have been a four-year quest for a degree stretched into eight years as his own restlessness and a series of calamities intervened. The Depression hit. His father lost his job, "cast on the industrial scrap heap." Loren dropped out of classes and began riding freight trains with jobless men. In Sacramento he received word his father was dying of cancer. After the shock of his father's death "was no time for books," Loren said, and so he took a job in a chicken hatchery as watchman, checking incubators hourly. Exhausted, he developed incipient tuberculosis. For a cure, his aunt went with him to the Colorado mountains where they stayed until their money ran out. Then a professor arranged for Loren to live on a ranch in the Mohave Desert until he recovered his health.

Scientist-writer Loren Eiseley

He drifted back to Lincoln, hiding and riding trains with men "drifting like sargasso weed in a vast dead sea of ruined industry." In the fall of 1930 he returned to classes, drawn back by poetry. He was soon contributing poems to a literary magazine Prairie Schooner. But poetry would not buy bread, and so Eiseley turned to anthropology, a new segment of the sociology department.

In the summer of 1931 Eiseley joined the South Party expeditions to western Nebraska to find fossils and record them. After two seasons in the field, he applied for graduate work in anthropology at the University of Pennsylvania.

In Philadelphia, Eiseley became acquainted with Dr. Frank Speck, ethnologist and expert on the Eastern Woodland Indians. Speck was to become Eiseley's adviser and friend.

Again Eiseley had to drop out of school and return to Lincoln to

ELON ATHLETICS

TRUE GRIT:

Determination makes Ballard a pro

Story by Steve Mana
Reprinted from Burlington Daily Times-News

For most of his 23 years, Quinton Ballard has been guided by a tenet he embraced as a youngster growing up in the eastern North Carolina town of Gates, a hop, skip and jump from Elizabeth City and about the same distance from nowhere. Everyone knows how it starts — "If you don't believe in yourself..." But what's important is the ending, "...how can anyone else believe in you?"

That, as much as anything, pushed the former Elon College gridiron standout to believe he could play professional football despite being snubbed on NAIA All-American teams and in the pro drafts.

It guided him through a confusing time when the New Jersey Generals of the fledgling United States Football League released him after the first day of a two-day mini-camp.

It propelled him to prove to the Baltimore Colts that a 6-3, 265-pound defensive tackle from two-time NAIA national champion Elon College is as good or better than some of those big-namers walking around with chips on their shoulders and dollar signs in their eyes.

It gave him the gumption to rehabilitate a knee injury that could have ended his career with Colts before it even began.

And it's behind the belief that with the social sciences degree he'll have earned by this time next year, he won't be just another successful athlete, but a "successful human being," as well.

"I have a lot of pride, I believe in myself," said Ballard recently while lounging under sun-splashed skies during a break in his studies. "And if someone says I can't do something, it becomes a challenge. I react to challenges in a positive way. That I could play in the NFL was something I wanted to prove to myself and those people who thought I couldn't."

"I felt I should have been drafted. By not getting drafted, they were saying I was a sorry athlete, that I didn't make the grade. I didn't believe that."

"Making the team and playing well was the only way to throw it back in their faces. I wanted to say, 'I'm not a sorry athlete, you're sorry judges of talent.'"

Talent is something Ballard, who has added 25 pounds of muscle since completing his collegiate career in 1982, has always possessed.

In pickup games with friends in Gates, he envisioned himself as a quarterback. Ironically, his glory was to come throwing them — and others who got in the way — to the ground. Hard.

He was a four-year starter at Elon, made the All-SAC-8 and All-District 26 teams, but never All-America. Although he's the only player off the 1980 and 1981 national championship squads to land a pro contract, by most he's just remembered as one of a group of defensive linemen that ranks among the best the South Atlantic Conference has ever seen.

"I felt all along that maybe I should have gotten more honors," said Ballard, who fangled a three-year pact with the Colts at better than the $40,000 minimum per year for rookies. "I really didn't feel a challenge here. I didn't play up to my potential. Only in the big games did I really let go. The bigger the game, the better I play."

"I've always felt the best athletes play better under pressure."

His first taste of pressure in the world of professional football, however, wasn't handled well.

Admittedly nervous and somewhat in awe of the situation, Ballard lasted just one day of the Generals' January 1983 mini-camp.

"I knew it was political. I knew I was the most talented lineman there. It discouraged me. I thought, well, if a minor league team cuts me after one day, what will happen now?"

"I said to myself, there's only one way to find out. I wasn't going to take 'no' from anyone."

When the Colts offered him a tryout in April as a free agent, Ballard jumped at it.

This time, he knew the score and handled the pressure like a seasoned veteran.

"I felt like I was in the same situation I was in when I was in New Jersey," said the eloquent young man. "Since I was from a small school, it made it harder on me."

"They didn't know the name of my school, let alone mine. A player from a small school has to be twice as good as a guy from some big-name school like Nebraska, Oklahoma, Notre Dame or North Carolina. I had to worry about them believing in those type of guys."

"The biggest pressure on me was to do something to get their attention."

He listened in meetings. He knew what he was supposed to do, which helped eliminate mental mistakes and survive the coaches' mind games. And figuring he was in better shape than the others, he outthrew everybody.

By the second preseason game, Ballard was starting. But in the next outing against the New York Giants, he went down with a knee injury that sidelined him three weeks.

"That was my biggest setback,"

Quinton Ballard, former Elon griddier, now plays for the Indianapolis Colts.

he said. "Mentally, that was a throwback. I hadn't made the team and I didn't know how that'd affect their (the coaches') judgment."

"I worried about things slipping away. I was so close and misfortune came my way because of an injury. They kept on me to get well. They wanted to see how I'd react to injury. They have to have people who play with pain."

He worked hard, and by the third game of the regular season he was back, coming off the bench.

When former Tar Heel Donnell Thompson was injured against Philadelphia in the ninth game, Ballard stepped into a starting role again.

His belief in himself was paying off. The next week against the New York Jets, Ballard was awarded the game ball as defensive player of the game. All he had done was better

WINTER SPORTS WRAP-UP

The Elon College men's basketball team posted a 17-11 record this season. Following a midseason slump which saw the team's record slip to 12-9, the Fightin' Christians won five of their final six games to finish the regular season 17-10 and 8-6 in Carolinas Conference play. During the five-game streak, the team upset then Conference leaders Pfeiffer (77-63) and High Point (72-58). In the Carolinas Conference tournament, High Point was the Christians' opponent. In a close, hard fought game, High Point defeated Elon 64-59 to eliminate the Christians.

For the season, Charlotte, N.C. native Bengie Tate led the Christians in scoring, averaging 13.8 points per game. Maryland transfer Andre Hines chipped in 11.8 points, junior Robert Leak, despite missing 11 games with a broken foot, came on strong in the later stages of the season and averaged 11.3 points per game. Freshman Kenny Richardson averaged 10.4 points per game and hit 55% of his shots. The team has lost seniors Mel Melton and Joe DeShazo to graduation. However, with the strong unloading of returning players, Coaches Moringstar and Morrison are optimistic for next season.

Coach Mary Jackson's Golden Girls also finished their season with a 17-11 record. The women won the Elon College Invitational defeating Atlantic Christian and Glenville State to capture the crown. During the regular season, the Golden Girls posted a 9-5 Carolinas Conference record which tied the girls for third with Atlantic Christian College. In the first round of the Carolinas Conference tournament, Guilford had a night in which everything went in and Elon's fate was just the opposite. When the final horn sounded, the Lady Quakers had stunned the Golden Girls 97-67.

Post season honors were many for the Golden Girls as junior Donna Trolinger and sophomore Jamie McNeely were named to the All-Carolinas Conference first team. In addition, Donna was also named to the All-District 26 first team and was Carolinas Conference Co-player of the Year.

With four of five starters returning next season, Coach Mary Jackson can look forward to another fine season. Renate Costner was the lone starting senior.

Jim Richardson's wrestling team finished its season with a second place berth in the Carolinas Conference wrestling tournament, and placed third in the District 26 tournament action. Elon placed two wrestlers on the All-Conference Team — Jim Ambrose at 118 and Jay Lineberry at 126. Strong performances were also turned in at the conference meet by Jeff May, 134; Wendy McCoy, 150; Ron Budd, 158; John Travis, 190; and Jay Gros, 177. Lineberry, May and Travis were participants at the NAIA National tournament at Central State University, Edmond, Oklahoma.

all-pro offensive tackle Marvin Power en route to eight solo tackles, a sack, causing a fumble and tipping a pass.

He started the next three games and ended up with five starts to his credit as the Colts — who had won just two games the previous two seasons — faded from the playoff picture before finishing 7-9.

The medium of success Ballard had his rookie year, and the Colt coaches' plan to try him at nose guard next season, have only served to strengthen his belief in himself.

"Making the team, I knew the work had just begun," said Ballard. "That's the first step. The second step is getting playing time. The third step is starting. The fourth step is all-pro, and, if there is a fifth step, well, everyone wants to be a superstar."

"I wish I could've gotten more playing time, but it told me what I knew. I can play in the NFL, I have the ability to be a great player if I can be healthy. I'm not cocky. Just confident."

"(Playing pro ball) has strengthened me as far as confidence," added Ballard. I believe I can do anything I set my mind to. As I get more comfortable in my position and get the proper amount of experience, I should excel."

As far as the belief in himself has carried him thus far, is any one going to doubt him?

ONCE MORE, WITH FEELING

Defensive back John Muir, pictured above, grins after the Elon alumni football squad handed the varsity team a defeat in their recent scrimmage game at Burlington Memorial Stadium. Led by the paslog combination of Phil Bracco and Steve Vargas, the Oldtimers upset the younger varsity team 16 to 14.

The Alumni squad was coached by former coaches Jerry Tolley and Mickey Brown. Muir was instrumental in arranging the event, which drew several hundred spectators and generated considerable alumni interest.

HANGING IN THERE:

Bryant Colson '80, Elon's first black SGA president, retraces his road to political success

By Jan Elliott

Before Bryant Colson was old enough to read or write, he watched television. But unlike many youngsters, Colson wasn't drawn to cartoons or to commercials, and his heroes weren't found in adventure programs.

"When the news came on, I'd watch it and listen for certain names," said Colson, a banking officer with Wachovia Bank and Trust in Greensboro. "My idols were Julian Bond, Andrew Young and John Kennedy."

As a youngster, Colson also deviated from the norm in his career choice. He wanted to be a U.S. Senator.

"My interest in politics was sparked at an early age," he said. "I remember hearing the word 'senator' on the news and thinking, 'What is that? I wouldn't mind doing that. It might be nice to be a senator.'"

Although he hasn't achieved that goal yet — he's only 25 — he did hold his first political office at an early age. In the sixth grade, he was elected president of his elementary school.

"At the end of my campaign speech, I made the infamous peace sign," said Colson, forming the V-shaped gesture with his right hand. "I think that's what got me elected," he added with a laugh. While at Page Senior High in Greensboro, Colson served in student government, held several class offices and participated in intramural sports. He recalled an incident during those years that, perhaps more than anything else, encouraged him to pursue his civic and political goals.

"I ran for a class office and suffered my first political defeat," he said. "I had been accustomed to winning and was very upset with the outcome. It really hurt and I began to doubt myself. I decided I couldn't take the pain of losing and wanted to give up my political activities."

But, Colson's mother and grandmother convinced him otherwise. His parents divorced when Colson was 10, and he, two brothers and a sister were reared by the two women.

"They told me not to give up because I had too much invested to call it quits," he said.

Colson took their advice and appreciates it to this day. In his senior year at Page, he received the Luther Medlin award for outstanding leadership.

Colson chose Elon College to further his education and graduated in 1980 with a B.A. in political science and a minor in business.

"I didn't want to leave an active role in high school and be lost in a large university," he said. "I went with the idea of getting involved, but taking it slow. On the whole campus, I knew one person — my roommate — when I arrived at Elon."

Not one to wait for opportunity to knock, Colson ran for president of the freshman class.

"I lost the election, but that didn't stop me this time," he said.

Bryant Colson '80

"I ran because I was interested. I wanted to see where I fit in. The election was close and that surprised me."

That same year, he did win a seat in the Student Senate, a position he held for three years. As a senator, Colson represented Elon in the National Student Government Association and visited many cities across the United States.

During his freshman year at Elon, Colson wrote an English paper titled "Women in Tennis," in which he pointed out the inequalities between men's and women's professional tennis. His English professor subsequently asked him to join the staff of the school paper, The Pendulum, as a sports writer.

In his junior year, he became editor-in-chief of The Pendulum.

"We had fun, produced a good paper and won some national awards," Colson said.

Colson said he feels the exposure he gained as editor of The Pendulum helped him to win the college election he is proudest of — president of the student government association. He became the first black elected to that job.

"When I was a freshman, I told myself I would run for that position. Student government is big-time politics at Elon," Colson said with a smile. "All through college, I worked towards that goal by participating in extra-curricular activities. I tried to get noticed and known so people would see that I could do a good job."

Colson said he learned a lot about people, politics and the school while serving as president his senior year. "It was a very rewarding learning experience."

As recognition for his achievements, Colson received the ODK William Mosely Brown award for outstanding leadership his senior year.

In 1980 Colson joined Wachovia in Greensboro and worked in sales finance before transferring into the retail area. He was a personal banker in the High Point office for six months before returning to Greensboro in January to be personal banker and operations manager at the Golden Gate office.

Joanne Soliday named dean of admissions

Mrs. Joanne Cadorette Soliday has been named dean of admissions and financial aid at Elon College.

Mrs. Soliday joined the Elon staff in 1978 as coordinator of commuter affairs, and has also served as associate dean of student affairs and as associate director of admissions. Prior to her promotion to dean Soliday served as associate dean of admissions and financial aid.

She received her Bachelor of Arts degree from West Virginia Wesleyan College in Buckhannon, W. Va., and her Master's degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Mrs. Soliday has served as a family and children service counselor in Charlotte and as Director of the Consultation and Education program for the Alamance County Mental Health Department. She has also worked with emotionally disturbed children and children with learning disabilities in the local school systems.

Dr. M. Christopher White, vice president for academic and student affairs at Elon, said that Soliday has demonstrated a high level of energy, creativity, and success in her previous positions. "I am confident that she will be able to provide the leadership necessary to continue advancement in the critical area of admissions and financial aid," White said.

Soliday begins her duties on June 1.

King to play August recital in France

Robert Burns King, college organist and teacher of organ at Elon, has been invited to play one of the recitals during the Festival d'Orgue at the Cathedral of Chartres, France, on Sunday, August 26. The festival begins in July and lasts through August, and recitals which are open to the public take place on Sunday afternoons.

Other engagements for recitals by King during this season include Baltimore on April 1 and 3 (Old Saint Paul's Church), Topeka, May 4 (Grace Episcopal Cathedral), Lincoln, May 10 (Cathedral of the risen Christ), and New York City, June 10 (Saint Thomas Church).

Mr. King, who is also Organist-Choirmaster of the First Presbyterian Church in Burlington, was educated at Furman University, the School of Sacred Music of Union Seminary in New York, where he studied organ with Vernon DeTar of the Juilliard School, and he holds the Prix de Virtuosité from the Schola Cantorum of Paris, France. He has also studied with Michael Schneider in Cologne, Germany.

Flute soloist conducts class at college

Carol Kniebusch, nationally acclaimed flute soloist and professor of flute at James Madison University, presented a recital and master class in the Mooney Theater on the Elon College campus May 5, 1984. Flutists from local junior and senior high schools, as well as other interested persons, were invited to attend.

Appearing through the courtesy of W. T. Armstrong Company, Ms. Kniebusch also gave a demonstration of Armstrong Flutes, featuring their new Headstart headjoint, a new design which is ideal for small children and band use.

The event was arranged by Barbara Dinger Jacobson, adjunct instructor of flute at Elon. According to Ms. Jacobson, the master class concept, which allows several students to work simultaneously with a master teacher, is becoming more and more popular because of its usefulness in presenting a variety of approaches to students and improving technique.

A member of the Elon faculty since 1982, Ms. Jacobson holds Bachelor of Music and Master of Music degrees from the New England Conservatory of Music. Having begun studying the flute at age 10, she has performed widely in the U.S. and abroad.

Since coming to Elon, she has organized a flute choir, which uses various members of the flute family, including the piccolo, alto flute and bass flute. The concept of a flute choir is relatively new in this country, and Carol Kniebusch has been instrumental in the spread of its use.

Ms. Kniebusch is director of the flute choir for Geoffrey Gilbert Master Class, principal flutist for the Roanoke (Va.) Symphony Orchestra and a member of the Board of Directors of the National Flute Association.

Manuscript competition announced

The United Church Board for Homeland Ministries is soliciting manuscripts for the 3rd Pilgrim Press Manuscript Competition. The winning manuscript will be published in book form by The Pilgrim Press, the Board's publishing imprint for trade books.

Among those eligible to enter the competition are alumni/ac of member institutions of the Council for Higher Education of the United Church of Christ. Since Elon College is a member institution, alumnae/i are invited to enter the competition.

Manuscripts are sought which will be of interest to the general reader, in such areas as ethical perspectives on current personal and social issues, biography, and studies in the arts. Technical manuscripts of a more specialized nature will not be considered.

Manuscripts in final form will be due on March 18, 1985.

Full details are available from: James A. Smith, Jr., United Church Board for Homeland Ministries, 132 West 31 Street New York, NY 10001. Telephone: 212/239-8700.

Executive committee meets

The Executive Committee of the Elon College Alumni Association held its spring meeting at the Bur-Mill Country Club in Greensboro on Saturday, February 18. Dr. Sally O'Neill, president of the Alumni Association, presided.

The Committee officially accepted the nominations for officers of the 1984-86 term of the Alumni Association: Zac Walker, president; Noel Allen, first vice president; and Ron Butler, second vice president. The committee also approved by unanimous vote the Alumni Awards Committee's selections for the 1984 Alumni Association awards.

The Executive Committee also created a new award to recognize outstanding service to the college by organizations. Other action resulted in the reduction of the maximum number of Distinguished Alumnus awards to be presented. Additional discussion regarding the Alumni Association Awards will be held at the fall meeting with any changes being valid with the 1985 awards.

Other members of the Executive Committee present at the meeting were Tom Bass, Bryant Colson, Ashburn Kirby, Heleo Lindsay, Phil Mann, John McBrayer, Calvin Michaels, Robin Moser and Bob Pafe.

Ron Klepcyk is new dean of students

Ronald A. Klepcyk has been appointed dean of student affairs at Elon College.

Klepcyk received his bachelor of science degree in education at Kent State University in Kent, Ohio, and his master's degree in education from the same institution. He has been a member of the Elon College staff since 1978, serving as associate director and director of special institutional programs and as associate dean of student affairs.

Klepcyk has served as acting dean of student affairs since last October. Dr. M. Christopher White, vice president for Academic and Student Affairs, says Klepcyk has the training and experience necessary to provide creative leadership in the student affairs area.

look after his mother and aunt. While there he worked on the Nebraska Federal Writers Project. After a few months he returned to Pennsylvania where a Harrison Fellowship eased his financial problems for 1936-37.

Inspired by his field work and by two published articles on archaeological discoveries, Eiseley decided to investigate the usefulness of scientific measurements of Quaternary time in the study of early man, a subject which grew into his dissertation research. In June 1937 he was awarded the Ph.D. in anthropology, and that fall he began teaching at the University of Kansas.

In August 1938 Eiseley married Mabel Langdon, whom he had met in 1925 at the University of Nebraska. Their friendship had begun with a mutual interest in poetry. In World War II Eiseley was rejected for service because of poor eyesight and hearing. He spent most of the war years teaching anatomy in the Medical School, training much needed doctors.

In the spring of 1944 Eiseley was offered the chairmanship of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Oberlin. A full professorship and better research facilities than at Kansas drew him to the Ohio college where he remained three years.

The decade spent at Kansas and Oberlin was his most active period of research. At Kansas he resumed field work in which one of his greatest finds was evidence that a bison-hunting people lived on the Great Plains 7,000 to 8,000 years ago. This discovery dispelled scientists' beliefs that the area was uninhabited at that time.

During the 1940s Eiseley began experimenting with the personal essay, combining scientific information with his own experiences and insights. In such popular magazines as Scientific American, he "humanized" science through expression of his own awe and wonder and his use of metaphor in clarifying scientific concepts for the reader. He was also expressing a purpose in writing: to help people discover their past and its significance.

In 1947 Eiseley was appointed department chairman and professor of anthropology at the University of Pennsylvania, succeeding Frank Speck, his professor and adviser. He also became curator of early man at the University museum. In 1948 during an illness which confined him to his home, Eiseley began to revise and rework the 13 essays which would eventually be published as The Immense.

Journey, an imaginative account of how life evolved on this planet. This first book is still his most popular.

In 1959 Eiseley was appointed provost of the University of Pennsylvania, an administrative position he found incompatible with his research and writing. He resigned after two years, and was named the first Benjamin Franklin Professor with time to write, something he had been doing anyway. His second book, Darwin's Century, published in 1958, showed his increasing interest in the history and philosophy of science.

A popular lecturer as America reacted to Sputnik, he gave six lectures at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine on "Man's Quest for Certainty," published as The Firmament of Time in 1960. This book won major awards. It explains how man came to accept the earth and human existence as natural rather than supernatural, an account of the emergence of the modern scientific world view during the last three centuries.

During the 1960s Eiseley was establishing himself as a literary naturalist, enjoying writing, even though some scientists denounced him as a "mystic." Eiseley felt certain affinities of interest and writing style with those of Sir Francis Bacon whom he praised and defended in a series of lectures in 1961. The lectures were published in 1971, with an additional chapter, as The Man Who Saw through Time.

The Unexpected Universe, 1969, is a collection of 10 essays, each recording an encounter with unexpected aspects of the world, all symbolic. A common theme binds them together: desolation and renewal in nature.

From 1969 to 1970 Eiseley worked on a book for Scribner's on the American space program. It was published as The Invisible Pyramid, several of the chapters having been given as lectures. The book goes beyond the space program to evaluate our technical civilization and the impasse to which it has brought us.

Eiseley's last prose works, completed before his death in 1977, were The Night Country and his award-winning autobiography, All the Strange Hours. The 14 essays of The Night Country are in the narrative voice of an insomniac who watches the world of darkness. Eiseley is a fugitive who takes the reader on a journey into the night country of his mind, past memory and outside of time.

The subtitle of All the Strange Hours is The Excavation of a Life which sets the controlling metaphor of the book. This autobiography unfolds in a series of "memories, dreams, and reflections." The book is often sad, but it shows the power of personality and thought as well as the meaning of a thinking, feeling human being living in evolutionary time.

flying and remained in the Air Force for 30 years, test-piloting "just about every fighter plane that was developed." Engineering was always his first love. He had wanted to go to N. C. State originally and wound up studying there later, as did his wife who was one of the school's first female engineering graduates. In 1971, B.K. retired and he and his wife live on Silver Lake outside Spokane, Washington.

Like all his brothers, Ed Watts also served in World War II. He went into the Navy in 1943. After the war, he began a career with Sears, Roebuck & Co. which was to last until he retired in 1978 to start his own business manufacturing and selling ladies apparel. He and his wife live in Marietta, Georgia.

There are many families whose roots are deep in Elon tradition. Leafing through the pages of Elon yearbooks or the Elon history, one sees their surnames appear time and time again — Newman, Rawls, Jones, McCauley, Hook. Whole generations of these families come to Elon for their education. They leave only to send their children and grandchildren, or to return themselves to work or teach or serve on boards and committees.

Collectively they have helped to shape the face of the institution and its program.

The Watts family is one of these. Their history is intertwined with the history of Elon, and they retain close ties. Every summer they return to Burlington from Georgia, Virginia, Washington state, and all over North Carolina for an annual reunion. And when they do, they have lots to talk about — Anson County, World War II, Kappa Psi Nu—the fraternity with which all the men and the husbands of both women belonged—and of course Elon College.

Summer shape-up

People aren't the only things that peel in the summertime. The summer months at Elon are traditionally the time for getting buildings back into shape for the start of another year.

PRIDE II nears $5 million mark !

Aided by the Glen Raven Challenge in Alamance County, the Elon College PRIDE II campaign approached the $5 million mark as the college's 1983-84 fiscal year ended.

The three-year campaign, announced in October, 1983, has a goal of $5.7 million. Year-end tabulations on May 31, 1984 showed a total $4.7 million has already been pledged and/or paid to the campaign.

College officials estimate that commitments made since those figures were announced may have already pushed the total over the $5 million mark.

The Glen Raven Challenge in Alamance County has been a prime factor in the success of the campaign, according to Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development at Elon.

Under the terms of the challenge Glen Raven Mills, Inc. offers $1,000 to Elon College for every gift or pledge of $1,000 or more that any individual, company or organization in Alamance County makes to the PRIDE II Campaign, up to a total of $80,000.

The challenge has already netted more than 80 gifts of $1,000 and the figure is still rising, according to Dr.

Williams.

"The Glen Raven challenge has certainly inspired the people of Alamance County," said Williams. "They are always responsive to our needs, but in this campaign they have responded with particular enthusiasm. We are thrilled with the results and most appreciative for their generosity."

College officials are now planning a thank-you celebration in August for all those who responded to the Challenge.

In other campaign news, officials announced that 26 new scholarship funds had already been added as a result of PRIDE II. The funds account for a total of $260,000 in gifts or pledges to the college.

The $5.7 million PRIDE II campaign is the largest in Elon history. Funds generated through the campaign will be used for endowment, current expenses, campus improvements, and a new fine arts center.

In the coming months, campaign officials, led by Dr. Jerry Tolley, campaign coordinator, will be working to complete the PRIDE II effort. A number of area campaigns similar to those already conducted in Charlotte and Alamance County are planned.

NEH chairman speaks

1984 graduates follow Elon commencement traditions

Introducing Mom and Dad to professors at the Parents' Reception...sitting in the silence of the Worship Service...lining up amid the chaos in Whitley...a last walk through Alamance Rotunda, across Scott Plaza and down the brick walk lined with faculty members...sweltering through the ceremonies in the gym...then hugs and tears and trying to find the words to say thank you and goodbye...

These are the elements of an Elon Commencement and the 1984 version had them all.

A total of 388 seniors received their diplomas on Sunday, May 20 during the 94th annual commencement exercises held in Alumni Gym.

One of the happiest graduates was Margaret Jane Zint, 52, of Mebane, N.C. Moments after she received her bachelor's degree in human services, her daughter, Marcy Zint McAdams, 23, received her degree in business administration.

They were the third and fourth members of the Zint family to graduate from Elon in the last five years, Bill Zint having received his degree in 1979 and Jimmy in 1981.

Mrs. Zint, who returned to college because she was "a little bored" graduated summa cum laude and plans to pursue a master's degree before entering a career in counseling.

The Commencement speaker, William J. Bennett, chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, advised the 1984 graduates to "like life," to "look forward to work," and to be open-minded "but not so open-minded that your brains fall out."

Honorary degrees were awarded to two men during the ceremonies, Bennett and Joseph Branch, chief justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court. Both received honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degrees.

Bennett is the former president and director of the National Humanities Center in Research Triangle Park. A native of New York, he received his B.A. degree in philosophy from Williams College, a Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Texas, and a J.D. degree from Harvard Law School. He has received honorary degrees from several institutions.

Before assuming his post at the National Humanities Center, Bennett was assistant to the president of Boston University. He has taught law and philosophy at a number of universities and has been a consultant to more than 50 secondary schools on quality in curriculum. He was appointed chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities by President Ronald Reagan in 1981.

Chief Justice Branch, a native of Enfield, received the L.L.B. degree from Wake Forest University in 1938. He practiced law privately for 25 years before being elected Associate Justice of the State Supreme Court in 1966. In 1979 he became Chief Justice.

He served as a member of the North Carolina General Assembly from 1947-53, was legislative counselor to two governors, and has been a delegate to the Democratic National Convention. He is a member and former chairman of the Board of Trustees of Wake Forest University and a former trustee of Wesleyan College in Rocky Mount.

Two new members and youth trustee elected to Elon board

Mrs. Kay Bryan Edwards of Greensboro, N. C. and Mrs. Newman Fulgham of Suffolk, Virginia have been named trustees of Elon College.

Both women were elected to four-year terms by the Board of Trustees at the spring meeting held on the campus in March. Diane McSheehy, 1984 graduate of Elon, was elected to a two-year term as youth trustee.

Mrs. Edwards is a native of New York City and a graduate of Madeira School in Washington, D.C. She received the A.B. degree from Sweet Briar College in Virginia.

Mrs. Edwards has been active in civic, church and cultural affairs throughout her life and is one of North Carolina's most prominent supporters of the arts and education. She has served as a board member for the Greensboro Civic Ballet, Opera Company and Symphony Orchestra; the North Carolina Museum of Art and Dance Theater; the Metropolitan Opera National Council; and the International Council of the Folger Shakespeare Library.

She has also served as a member of the Guilford County Board of Visitors, the Sacred Heart College Board of Trustees, the North Carolina School of the Arts Advisory Board and the Greensboro Junior League. She supports a number of community efforts.

Mrs. Edwards is the mother of eight children, and she has two grandchildren.

Nancy Newman Fulgham is a member of the Newman family whose history is intertwined with that of Elon College. Her grandfather, N. G. Newman, was a member of the first graduating class in 1891 and a lifelong minister in the United Church of Christ. Her great-uncle, J. U. Newman, was one of Elon's original faculty members. Mrs. Fulgham has served on the Elon College Board of Advisers.

A graduate of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Mrs. Fulgham taught in the Henrico County schools for two years and served as a research assistant with the Federal Reserve Bank.

She is a member of the United Church of Christ and is a past president of the Tidewater Chapter, Randolph-Macon Alumnae Association; past president of the Westover Garden Club; and past president of the Suffolk Literary Club. She is a member of the Nansemond River Garden Club and is Regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

She has been an active volunteer with Reach to Recovery, the Louise Obel Memorial Hospital, and the Suffolk Fine Arts Commission, where she served two years on the board. She is a trustee of the Longwood Fine Arts Commission.

Nancy Newman Fulgham

Mrs. Fulgham is married to Dr. William M. Fulgham. The couple has two children.

Mrs. McSheehy, the new youth trustee, served as president of the Student Government Association during her senior year. An honors student, she received a B.A. in English and plans to attend graduate school at Wake Forest University.

Elon slide show receives second highest CASE award

Elon College has received an Exceptional Achievement award in the 1984 Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) Recognition Program.

The award, the second highest in the CASE program, was received for a multi-media slide presentation which was developed for the college in 1983 by Lothner Communications with support from the Admissions Staff.

The 12-minute three-projector show, named "Elon College: A Place of Infinite Possibilities," was designed to fit in with a total recruiting package. It presents an overview of the college and its program and features outstanding photographs; interviews with students, faculty and administrators; lively narration; and a slide animation effect.

Housed in the college admissions suite, the presentation is shown to all visiting prospective students and their parents. It is completely portable, however, and has also been shown to large groups in many locations, both on and off campus. Recruiters also carry small self-contained projectors to show the production to prospective students in high schools.

"This show has been one of the most effective aids in recruiting that the college has ever had," stated Dr. Fred Young, president of the college. "It has considerable impact upon all who see it."

The CASE Recognition Program recognizes achievement in various aspects of a total higher education program — teaching, recruitment, fund raising, public relations and publications. Over 4,500 entries were submitted in 1984 from 588 educational institutions in the U.S. and Canada. Awards were given in 58 categories. All winners will be announced in a forthcoming issue of the CASE magazine, Correlata.

Joyce Speas awarded highest teaching honor

"It would be difficult, if not impossible, to overemphasize the contribution she has made to my career... I never walk into a classroom or help an individual without thinking of her."

The recipient of this high praise from a former student is Ms. Joyce Speas, winner of the 1983-84 Daniels-Daniel Award for Excellence in Teaching. Ms. Speas received the coveted award, Elon's highest teaching honor, during Faculty-Staff awards ceremonies in May.

In making the presentation, President Fred Young read the above comments and others from letters nominating Speas for the honor:

George Bakatsias discusses family gift to Elon athletics

By Bill Hunter '82

It has been a long, hard pull for the Bakatsias family, which began immigrating to America from Greece in the early 1950s. But by displaying strong family unity—a sort of Three Musketeers attitude of all for one and one for all—early adversities were overcome, and now each of three brothers heads a successful restaurant operation.

George is at Durham, in the Hilldale Shopping Center, where his classy Bakatsias Cuisine is prospering. Terry operates Bakatsias off I-85 near TCA, and Johnny is the man who signs the payroll at the Western Steak House near Western Electric.

The Bakatsias restaurant conglomerate, if you will, took roots when the family patriarch, Nikolaos, felt that his family, living in a small, impoverished village in Greece, should seek a better life. America, he wisely believed, was the answer. So to America he came, leaving the rest of the family behind.

But not for too long. His wife, Panagiotia, followed. Johnny joined his parents in the early 60s. Terry came a few years later and George completed the odyssey when he arrived in Burlington in the early 70s. A sister, Olga, is married and still living in Greece.

We run different businesses, but we remain very close as a family," said George Bakatsias as he sat at an immaculate white-clothed table at his Bakatsias Cuisine. "And the gift to Elon College is a gift from the entire family in honor of our father and mother, Nikolaos and Panagiotia Bakatsias."

Recently it was announced that the Bakatsias family will donate $50,000 to Elon. This money, it is stipulated, shall help defray costs of a soccer field now being completed on the northwest corner of the campus beyond Koury Field House.

The exact name of the facility, which will eventually be one of the finest in the state, has not been decided; Bakatsias Soccer Field or something similar is likely.

Now, the story about why the Burlington family, at George's instigation, probably, decided to help soccer at Elon College:

George attended Cummings High, where at that time there was no soccer program at all. As an alternative, he participated in track.

"I can remember in Greece, all of us kids played soccer in the streets, much like kids here play baseball and basketball," said George. "It's like that throughout Europe—soccer is THE game."

George became very proficient at the sport, and when he enrolled at Appalachian he became a very valuable member of the team. In fact, he was on teams that were ranked among the best in the entire country, and his talent is backed up by several trophies.

With a year left before graduation, however, he felt his presence was needed in the family businesses more than at Appalachian, so he dropped out of school.

It so happened that Steve Ballard, Elon's soccer coach, knew of George's talented toe, and with a little persistence, George was

Alumni couple establishes $10,000 endowment fund

Mr. and Mrs. Carl B. Coley have established a $10,000 endowment fund at Elon College. The income from the fund will be used to provide an annual scholarship for a worthy student.

Coley, a native of Burlington, graduated from Elon College in 1952. He is currently the owner and president of Coley Moving and Storage, Inc. in Burlington.

Betty Coley, a 1963 Elon College graduate, is from Concord, N.C. She is currently teaching in the Burlington City School System at Marvin B. Smith Elementary School.

"I went back to school after I had three children," said Mrs. Coley. "That was something rarely done in those days. We didn't have any extra money to spend on my tuition so the college worked out a loan for me. Everyone was so nice and worked with me so I could finish my degree," said Mrs. Coley.

The Coleys still have a good relationship with the college. They keep in touch with old college friends and attend Elon football games. The Coleys currently reside in Burlington.

The scholarship will be added to the Elon College catalog as the Carl and Betty Coley Scholarship Fund.

Danieley funds scholarship at Elon honoring wife

J. Earl Danieley has established the Verona Danieley Scholarship Fund at Elon College in honor of his wife.

Mrs. Danieley, a native of Beaufort, N.C., is the daughter of the late H. Burton Danieley and Mrs. Danieley who currently reside in Beaufort. Mrs. Danieley graduated from Elon College in 1949 and was secretary for Dr. L. E. Smith, fifth president of the college. She taught at Elon College High School and was secretary to the business manager for athletics at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

She is very active in the Elon College Community Church and is president of the Women's Fellowship and a former Sunday School teacher. She is a member of the Christian Education Committee.

Dr. Danieley graduated from Elon in 1946. He received his master's and Ph.D. degrees from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; an honorary Sc.D.

degree from Catawba College; and an honorary LL.D. degree from Campbell College.

Dr. Danieley was the sixth president of Elon College and is currently the Thomas E. Powell Jr. Professor of Chemistry at Elon.

The Danieleys have three children: Ned, a doctoral student at Duke University; Mark, a landscape contractor and nurseryman; and Jane, a tax accountant in Charlotte.

The scholarship is to be awarded on the basis of character, need, and demonstrated academic potential, with preference given to women students from Carteret and Alamance counties.

assurance, a deep personal concern for the success of her students and an unlimited amount of patience...Students are motivated to work harder in her classes when they see that she cares for them."

"She is able to make students want to learn. She touches them in such a way that they come to believe in themselves."

Speas has been a member of the Elon faculty since 1978 and serves as assistant professor of mathematics and education. While at Elon, she has been largely responsible for developing content and teaching methods for the Introductory Algebra course. In addition she has willingly assumed heavy advising loads.

Speas is a graduate of Mars Hill College and received her Master's degree from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She is the author of a social studies textbook for third-graders published by McGraw-Hill and widely used in elementary schools.

"I couldn't have been more surprised," Speas exclaimed upon receiving the award. "This is the greatest honor I've ever received, especially considering those who have received the award before me. I admire them all and to be a part of that distinguished group is thrilling."

The Daniels-Danieley Award is presented annually to an outstanding Elon professor. The award was established by Dr. J. Earl Danieley and Mrs. Verona Danieley in honor of their parents.

Dan Watts '37 receives VCU Presidential award

Dr. Daniel T. Watts, '37, received a Presidential Medallion during the 1984 commencement exercises at Virginia Commonwealth University.

Dr. Watts is credited with developing VCU's School of Basic Sciences into a nationally recognized program. He was the school's dean from 1966 to 1982, during which time it grew from a small program into a school that now ranks in the top 10 in the United States. He retired as dean in 1982 with the title of professor emeritus in pharmacology and toxicology.

After graduating from Elon, Dr. Watts was a high school chemistry and biology teacher and basketball coach before acquiring a Ph.D. in physiology from Duke University.

He served as an aviation physiologist with the U.S. Navy during World War II and developed breathing equipment for aviators and determined human tolerance to the acceleration forces in aviators' ejection seats.

Dr. Watts has been recognized internationally for his many accomplishments in teaching and research in Pharmacology.

enrolled at Elon where, just coincidentally, he decided to go out for the team.

"George's joining the team turned things around for the Elon soccer team," understated Coach Ballard. Actually, at the time, the program had only one direction it could go. Organized a few years earlier, the team had never experienced a winning season.

"But we were 9-6 with George on the team," Ballard declared, "and George looked like he came down from a higher league, which in fact, he had. Our program turned around. He had only one year of eligibility, and that year, 1979, he was named to the All-Conference and All-District teams."

As for George, he said thanks, but the pleasure was all his.

"I love soccer, and if I'd had more eligibility, I'd have remained in school (Elon) despite the pressing restaurant business."

As for the gift of $50,000, George said that he, Johnny and Terry had felt for some time they wanted to do something for the Burlington area.

"Burlington," he noted, "has been good to us. Actually, regardless of where we go, we will always think of Burlington as home. We like Burlington and its people."

"And we like Elon College. It's a good school with a good academic and athletic atmosphere."

"And I'd like to see a continued upswing in the soccer program there. The gift will give the sport a good, strong foundation and, to have a sound program, good facilities must be made available."

"In honor of our parents, we're proud to have a part in the betterment of Elon College and its soccer program."

George said that if it wasn't for Elon's coach Ballard, he would not have enrolled at Elon and would not have as much interest (in the school) as he does now.

"But there's just one little stipulation," he said, smiling and gesturing. "Steve must let me play on the field some time."

No problem, said Ballard.

"I guess we'll have to get up a little Alumni game next season," he said.

Memory contest winners recall days at Elon

STOP THE WEDDING!

Moses Crutchfield
Class of 1941

It was a dark and stormy night — or should have been if it wasn't — in the academic year of 1939-40.

It was the night for renewal of the Phi-Psi-Cli Follies sponsored by Elon's annual. These performances once had been a yearly event, but for one reason or another they had been allowed to lapse. Now, they were being brought back to life, and rumors around the campus were that they would be well worth going to see.

Indeed, Whitley Auditorium was packed that night. Students had responded to the appeal of resuming a tradition. So had many of the faculty. And, there in a seat close to the front was Dr. L.E. Smith the college's president. More than likely Mrs. Smith was with him. I don't remember.

A word of explanation for later-day students might be in order at this point.

In those days, Whitley served a number of uses. The Music Department occupied the rooms at the back part of the building and utilized the auditorium for those students learning to play the organ. Students gathered three times weekly in the auditorium for convocations or assemblies. The Drama Department occasionally used the stage and auditorium for its plays although these were more frequently presented in the upstairs auditorium of Mooney Christian Education Building. Visiting lecturers and concert productions also were presented in Whitley and each Friday night a movie was offered there.

But most important of all, Whitley doubled as the campus church. It was there that Dr. Smith, a preacher by profession, held services every Sunday morning for students, faculty and members of the community. I won't say that faculty members were required to attend but they certainly were strongly urged to do so, which gives an indication of Dr. Smith's feeling about the role of the church in the life of the college.

But back to the story of that dark and stormy night, or a night that should have been dark and stormy if it wasn't.

Some of the details escape my memory, but I do recall that many campus leaders had roles in the production — scholars, athletes and others. In keeping with my job in the college news bureau, I had learned how to take pictures with one of those old Speed Graphic press cameras. Somebody, I don't remember who, requested that I take pictures that night, so I was busily snapping away from the beginning.

For that reason, I was preoccupied and some of the words and their implications eluded me. But by the time the production reached a scene wherein a group graphically portrayed a shotgun wedding, I realized things were getting rough. Today, such a scene would never rate a second thought, but the world was different then.

Suddenly, from out of the darkened auditorium, I heard Dr. Smith's voice. It was a voice that was capable of shaking the rafters of the building, and that night the rafters shook.

I don't remember the precise words that he spoke, but they were something to this effect: "This performance is to stop immediately. I am surprised and shocked that students of Elon College would stoop to such a presentation. This building also is our church and I will not permit it to be defiled further."

That was the end of the revival of the Phi-Psi-Cli Follies, at least for that year.

As a postscript, Dr. Smith demanded that film of any pictures taken that night either be destroyed or turned over to him. Frankly, I was afraid not to comply. However, years later among my belongings I found negatives of pictures taken that night. How they got there, I've never figured out. Nor do I know who took them.

If, by chance, you are one of those people who have been around Elon for a long while you may recognize some of the characters who were caught by the camera in the hands of an unknown photographer that night.

THE COLLEGE FARM

In May 14, 1940, I graduated from Aycock High School as valedictorian of my class. I was only fifteen years old but knew exactly what I wanted in life — to be a teacher. George Colclough had recruited me to attend Elon College. Living on a farm six miles north of Mebane made attending Elon College almost impossible. Another problem was that Daddy did not have any money to pay my tuition. However, Mr. Colclough made provisions for me to enter with a small job in the library.

My father, Zeb Lynch, not having the resources for the remainder of the tuition, went to Dr. Smith, the college president. He told Dr. Smith that I was one of five children who would need a college education. "I cannot move the college," he stated, "but I can move my family. Please find me a job working for the college." Daddy had been on the family farm for years. In fact, in 1938, he had built for us a new nine-room home with "running water" — no more outdoor toilets!

Dr. Smith made arrangements for Daddy to build his family another new home, owned by the college, on the hill back of Mrs. Vickers' house off Highway 100. Daddy's new job, after building the house, was to manage the college farm. The farm had a big cow barn and plenty of land to raise vegetables. The farm was to provide milk and vegetables for the college dining hall.

I left the dorm after two months and traveled with Daddy from the farm near Mebane to the college for classes. After the house was completed, the family moved to Elon to occupy the new college home.

Dr. Smith wanted the family girls to milk the cows while the college boys worked in the vegetable gardens. Those boys (Ralph Bridges, Marvin Langston, Allen Gray, Forrest Frazier, James Hipps — to name a few) still see my parents as an important part of their Elon College heritage. They visit them everytime they come to Elon.

Dr. Smith paid Daddy one cent per gallon for each gallon of milk to pay for my tuition which at that time, if my memory serves me right, was $180 per semester. In addition, Daddy's salary was $100 per month.

Somehow, I never thought I was any less privileged than any other student. In fact, Mrs. Smith liked me to help her with her social events. I thought she was the most elegant lady I had ever known.

My daddy constantly reminded Dr. Smith that I was to receive my yearbook whether the $180 was fully paid or not. It would be paid as soon as the cows had produced enough milk. I also remember that on some occasions I milked as many as twelve cows on one milking.

On August 13, 1943, I finished Elon at the age of eighteen and received a contract to teach in a Guilford County High School. Mrs. Smith, thinking I was too young to enter the world of work, applied for a scholarship for me to work on a master's degree at Duke. However, there was no way for me to continue graduate work at that time. There were others at home for Daddy to educate.

In 1944 the farm was no longer productive. Daddy became the mail carrier for Route 2, Elon College, from which he retired twenty-five years later.

I shall always be grateful to parents who wanted their children to have a better chance than they had. To me Mother and Daddy are the most beautiful people in the world. I'm sure all parents care, but how many sacrifice as they did by pulling up roots of many years to help their children to be educated?

In the May issue of the Magazine of Elon, all alumni were invited to participate in The Elon Memory Contest by sending in their favorite memory of their years at Elon. Response to the contest was enthusiastic, and the winning entries are printed on these two pages.

Future issues of the Magazine will carry other interesting entries that were received. If these recollections spur memories for you, it is not too late to send yours in. Address to Editor, The Magazine of Elon, Box 2116, Elon College, N.C. 27244.

ONE LAST TASTE

Tim Moore
Class of 1978

During my four years at Elon College I was not exactly known to be a "Jock." This is not to mean that I was not athletic. While in high school in Virginia I lettered in five sports and assumed my entire senior year I would be doing the same in college.

I found that I was a bit light for football, a little short for basketball, a step slow for track, and as for baseball, well, it was played in the spring. When the warm sun pulled the students out from their winter hibernation. When the girls wore those short shorts and halter tops. This was enough to stop even a "natural."

Though I never was a true college athlete, it does not mean that I had forgotten the sweet taste an upset victory or a championship could bring to one's lips. I thought I had taken my last drink of this intoxicating brew as my high school days faded into labs and seminars.

During my sophomore year I began to get involved in the student government at Elon. Another person in the student government who had been a superb athlete in high school himself was Bernard Carr. Bunny, as he was known, stands 5'6". He played soccer at Elon. In high school he had played football (once ran a punt back for a touchdown) and lacrosse.

Bunny and I grew up in Charlottesville, Virginia but he went to a high school across town from mine. The only time we had met before college had been on the lacrosse field. His school had probably the best team in the state in 1974. During our junior year Bunny and I decided that we wanted to get semi-athletic again. So we asked for and received $650.00 to help fund a Lacrosse Club from the student government. Our first year we won only three games.

We were now in our senior year at Elon and our second season of lacrosse. The team was storming across the South to play three games in three days. We had a small team of mostly Virginia and Maryland boys who played the game in high school along with a few North Carolina guys who were still learning. As we rolled into Atlanta on this muggy spring night we were beginning to question ourselves. Our record was 0-1 due to our loss to the University of South Carolina that afternoon 14-7. The following day we were to play Georgia Tech, a school that could draw from 10,000 students to field a team. Just a year ago they beat us 23-5. Everyone was doing their own thing this night. Some were going to town, others were sleeping, most of us just sat around and tried to figure what tomorrow was going to be like.

Early Saturday the team met in one room of our hotel and talked for a few hours about what to expect. We then rode over to Grant Field for our 1:30 game. As our team of 19 players walked into the stadium we were in awe. Grant Field is huge; it seats 39,000. Never mind that there are only about 2,000 here for the game; in that large a place it was no consolation.

The Georgia Tech players were out doing their exercises in neat rows. There must have been 50 players suited up. Coaches were everywhere yelling at the team, getting them ready to play. Bunny was our captain and he told us to stretch out on our own, then pass a few balls around between each other. Compared to the military style rows and well-synchronized Yellow Jackets we looked like a rag-tag group of guerrilla fighters out of South America. As Bunny and I looked through the heat waves rising from the AstroTurf we noticed a television camera. This was great! Not only were we going to be humiliated in front of the whole crowd but a home audience as well.

Butterflies were in all our stomachs as we lined up on the field for the opening face off. This feeling was replaced quickly by lungs gasping for air in the Georgia heat. On the first time down the field Paul Jamme' whipped a shot in from the left side. The next trip down Paul's brother, Kenneth, whipped in a shot from the right side. Suddenly the whole game changed. The rag tag group from Elon became the aggressor. We had put the pieces together and knew the answer to the question few even knew existed 10 minutes before. We could play with these guys!

At the half we were still leading 3-2. We sat in the cool shade of the end zone bleachers during the break. Everyone was pumped up. "We just need to keep what we're doing" was being said by everyone on the team. When we came back on the field we looked at the worried faces of the Georgia Tech coaching staff, and we knew we could not let this one get away.

The second half belonged to the Maroon and Gold. Paul Jamme' scored four goals and our goalie, Joe Stevens, playing the position for just his second game, had 16 saves. The fourth quarter seemed to last an eternity as we led 9-5, 9-6, 9-7. Those last few seconds were perhaps the finest I have ever experienced in sports. We knew we had slain the giant. This small group of competitors which had no coach, few players, and even less money had done the impossible!

To this day, when I think of that sultry day in Atlanta, I can still taste the sweet spirit of ecstasy as we counted down the clock. That small group of guys, who were tumbling all over each other in the middle of the field so far from home, had won as much as any conference championship or national crown. We had earned respect. Not only for us as a team, but for a brick-walled school of 2,300 students back in North Carolina.

Mary Ellen McCants Evans
Class of 1945

There were five of us there that December Sunday. Like typical college girls, we sat around listening to the big band sounds of the day. We munched our sack suppers (those brown-bagged baloney sandwiches, apples, and Hershey bars, intended for the evening meal), and we talked away our "quiet hour." The subject was basically "boys."

Afternoon sun filtered through the oaks into our room in West Dorm. Light-hearted and carefree, we basked in our good life.

As a dark cloud slid across the sky, the music ceased. From my small white radio came an almost choked voice from a newscaster. The Japanese had attacked American forces in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Virtually, our country was now into that far-away war.

As other news reports followed, more girls gathered in our room. Some were frightened, others stunned and quiet, and several crying. One's brother was stationed on that Pacific Island, and we began a realization that our lives and those about us would be different.

That night was the annual Elon College Singers presentation of the "Messiah." We in the choir had rehearsed many weeks with a lot of joking and fun and little thought of the words we were preparing to sing.

Gathering in the old library building about dusk for robing and lining up, we were still in varying stages of the shock of the day's news. Some of us begged to cancel the performance. Several of the fellows were already planning immediate enlistments in the armed services, and a petition was being circulated for an early Christmas vacation. Many were saying it would probably be a last holiday at home for a long, long time.

It's funny how I remember standing to the side with a very special Yankee friend and wondering when our good-byes would come and if they might be forever.

It was then our choral director, Professor Pratt, spoke to us ever so softly and so unforgettably. "Perhaps," he said, "tonight you are thinking only of war and what tragedy may be there for you. Yet, I implore you to sing joyfully and triumphantly, for that is the news we're about to tell. It is the finest thing that I can ask of you at this moment, for you have the chance to remind those who have come here this night of the one who came that night so long ago as our Prince of Peace."

Most of us of the Elon chorus that year were rather mediocre singers but somehow, the music came in a full and indescribable beauty.

Ever since that time, when I hear the Messiah I sense anew that long past evening. Perhaps I grew up a little that freshman year at Elon. I do not know. I do know that on that night there was a kindred, and a love and a bond across the campus that strengthened us for that time and for the years ahead, because together we had shared the hours of December 7, 1941.

THE LOST BELL

Kate Strader McCAdams
Class of 1925

A dear friend and classmate of mine, both graduates of Elon College in the Class of 1925, have kept a secret for sixty years. My question is, do I dare disclose it now?

The event I am writing about took place in the fall of 1923, our junior year, on a beautiful Sunday afternoon. Sunday afternoons were the only time we were allowed to date.

This particular Sunday was my first date with Mark McCAdams, now my husband of fifty-eight years.

The four years I was a student at Elon College proctors were elected whose duty was to keep us on the "straight and narrow path." One of our proctor's duties was to ring the bell when dating started and when it ended. Also, a housemother (so she was called) resided in our dormitory, which is old West today. She was our "Boss."

One of my close friends, but not my roommate, and also a close friend of the proctor thought it would be fun to move the bell from where the proctor kept it to those of us dating could have a few more minutes together. The bell was moved in fun but it almost ended in a catastrophe.

When the bell could not be found after a short hunt, the proctor told our housemother of the lost bell. Meanwhile, when the "culprit" went to return the bell, she heard the housemother say that taking the bell was a serious offense. This remark was frightening, so frightening that she was afraid to return it. She hid it in her room for a few days, not telling anyone of her dilemma.

Finally she told me of her "escape" and asked me for help. We put our heads together and talked over possible safe hiding places. One day as we walked slowly down the hall on second floor of West Dormitory talking, thinking and looking, believe it or not, about halfway down the hall, very near one of the fire doors, we spotted a hole or niche in the wall just large enough for us to slip the bell in. The bell remained there for quite some time.

Eventually we found an excellent way to get the "tormenting" bell off the campus. How we managed to do so must be another one of my secrets to keep.

In 1978 English actor Alec McCowen was delivering his solo rendition of St. Mark's Gospel to packed theaters in London, New York City and Franklin, Virginia.

Franklin, Virginia? A little Tidewater town, population 7,308? That's the one.

The November 22, 1978 Washington Post explains: "Tonight the English actor (McCowen) will do his rendition of the earliest gospel at the White House for the President (Jimmy Carter) and his guests... A week later another peanut farmer, one Hatcher Story, has bagged McCowen for a one-nighter (sold

With that, Hatcher Story grins good-naturedly and adds, "Don't print that now."

To appreciate this story, one must realize it is being told by a man who appears to be just an ordinary suntanned farmer having a bite to eat at a small-town diner — stained Khaki workpants, dusty brogans, a white cotton shirt with rolled-up sleeves and a pocket filled with pencils, glasses case and other paraphernalia.

But this is not just any other farmer. This is Hatcher P. Story — Elon alumnus ('38), Courtland landowner and peanut grower; restorer of old homes; collector of antiques and art; amateur historian; world traveler; and patron of the arts — an irrepressible man with thinning white hair, clear azure-blue eyes and a smile as warm and friendly as the noonday Virginia sunshine outside.

As the waitress brings us a slice of Danny's famous chocolate pie with the mile-high meringue, Story goes on to recount other celebrities he Hatcher Story. To him he owes his reverence for the land, his love of history, his interest in politics and even his zeal for bringing culture and art to out-of-the-way Courtland.

One of Story's early memories is that of his father inviting Russell Conwell — turn-of-the-century Philadelphia lawyer, Baptist clergyman and founder of Temple University — to speak in the Courtland Masonic Lodge.

Conwell, a self-made millionaire in the Horatio Alger mold, delivered the speech that had made him a famous lecturer on the Chautauque circuit. The lecture, called "Acres of Diamonds," proposed that wealth was everywhere to be found and that it was one's duty to get rich and use the money for the well-being of others.

The "Acres of Diamonds" philosophy is one the elder Story believed in and remnants of it may be seen in his son's life today. Hatcher Story is a man who sees diamonds everywhere — in the Sitting sideways in his chair during the noonday rush at Danny's Diner in Courtland — neighboring hamlet to Franklin — Hatcher Story recently recalled how the unlikely performance was arranged.

"I had seen McCowen do his show and it was amazing," he says matter-of-factly over a plate of meatloaf, Danny's Friday special. "He recites the entire gospel word for word. I thought our people here deserved a chance to see it."

"So I called up Bonnie Angelo — she's the Winston-Salem, (N.C.) girl who's the head of Time magazine's London bureau — and asked her to find out the name of McCowen's agent."

"The agent turned out to be a man in New York named Arthur Cannon and I called him. He wasn't much interested at first — didn't think McCowen would be interested. But I told him if he didn't work it out I was going to bring a crate of chickens up to New York and turn 'em loose in his office."

"I saw her (Hunter) sing in The Cookery in Greenwich Village the night she opened," says this amazing farmer, "and she was fantastic. I knew she had to come here."

On one of her visits Story even arranged for Franklin High to award her a diploma to make up for the one she had never managed to get.

Such is the benign audacity of the indomitable Hatcher Story — a man of many intriguing contrasts and contradictions. Strictly conservative but never conventional, highly opinionated but totally affable, seasoned traveler and small-town farmer — these are a few of the paradoxes that comprise Hatcher Story, a man equally at home in the sandy soil of the Tidewater peanut farms and at the annual meeting of the Edna St. Vincent Millay society in New York City's St. Regis Hotel.

He is a man of unending interests.

Hatcher is one of two Story sons to attend Elon College. An older brother, Bill (William Joseph), graduated in 1934, the year Hatcher Story entered Elon. Bill Story went on to coach football at Davidson College and later became superintendent of schools in Chesapeake, Virginia. He died in 1980.

A sister, Louise, studied at Westhampton, now the University of Richmond, and was a microbiologist in Georgia for 41 years before returning to Courtland.

Hatcher Story graduated from Elon in 1938 with a long list of activities to his credit, including president of the student body. "I couldn't believe they could get along without me after I left," he quips, remembering his days at college.

After Elon, he taught history and English in the Winston-Salem, North Carolina schools and then spent 4½ years in the Navy during World War II. Later he spent three years in Korea.

Following the war, Story earned his MA at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. ("I got to hear Robert Frost read his poetry there," he recalls.) Afterwards, he served as a principal in Asheboro, North Carolina, before returning to his native Courtland. Since then he has been involved in a number of pursuits, including acting as a tour guide for several years — Europe in the summer, Australia in the winter, Africa somewhere in between.

In recent years, Story's chief interest has been in moving and restoring a number of historic homes and dwellings that were slated to be destroyed.

The Southampton County area is rich in historic structures, Story explains, because a Union general, George F. Thomas, was a native of tomahawks from the fields of Southampton County.

In the bathroom stands a footed, copper-lined bathtub — a relic rescued from the debris of the Palace Hotel in San Francisco after the earthquake and fire of 1906.

Outside the yard is alive with Story's collection of fowl. White peacocks, Canada geese, Egyptian geese from the Nile — their eyes darkly rimmed by Mother Nature to protect them from the glare of the sun — mingle with a host of more familiar birds and a score of kittens and cats.

On the same piece of land, bordered by a pond and landscaped with boxwoods, are other homes which Story has restored and now rents.

Cedar Lawn, the plantation home of Civil War Major Joseph E. Gillette is another Story restoration.

Built around 1830, Cedar Lawn is a lovely two-story home with four spacious high-ceilinged rooms, original fireplaces and wide-planked pine flooring and wainscoting.

Preserving Southampton County's historical dwellings is one of Hatcher Story's main concerns. Pictured above is a slave cabin which he saved from destruction and is currently restoring.

the area and saw to it that the county was spared the worst ravages of the war.

Story himself lives in a Quaker house built in 1764 that he moved from 18 miles away. The house is charming, with wide-boarded floors, open fireplaces and a narrow staircase leading to an attic bedroom.

But its charm is rivaled by the beauty of Story's enviable collection of antique furniture and art objects. An avid collector with a reverence of history and a keen eye for value, Story buys from everywhere. Desks, cupboards, corner cabinets, dry sinks, benches and chairs stand side to side, practically filling every room.

Memorabilia and curios cover the table tops — a fossil from the Amazon River, opium pipes from the Far East, pottery from Jugtoma, North Carolina, arrowheads and Perfect natural light flows into each room through the tall ten- and twelve-paned windows, enriching the contrast of deep wood tones and white walls.

Story's goal in restoring is to retain authenticity while incorporating modern conveniences. As much as possible he uses salvageable materials from the local area.

He has shunned any effort to have the houses listed with the National Register, however, despite their historicity and the tax advantages. "I don't want anybody telling me where to hang my pictures," he jokes, his blue eyes crinkling above his good-natured grin.

One of his latest projects is the restoration of a particularly dilapidated slave quarters, one of four slated for destruction which he moved in one week. The cypress exterior of the dwelling had been completely removed and replaced. In doing so, Story found in the walls, a glazed earthenware spittoon and an exquisite African comb, handcarved from dogwood. Incidentally, bricks being used in rebuilding the kitchen hearth and fireplace of the home are from a house which belonged to a granddaughter of President Tyler.

Story's restorations are an investment in the future as well as a preservation of the past. His goal is to fashion a comfortable, livable dwelling, which he will sell or rent reasonably. Out of good materials, materials of historic value that were about to be destroyed, he can provide a home "cheaper than the government can build low-rent housing," as he says.

You don't have to talk to Hatcher Story five minutes to know where he stands on politics — just to the right of Barry Goldwater, William F. Buckley and Jesse Helms. Given the breadth of his interests and his cosmopolitan background, his political conservatism seems an anomaly in some respects, but to leave it out is to ignore a central aspect of the man. And its roots are plainly there — long-standing ties to family and the land, a deep sense of individualism, an indomitable spirit and a faith in God and mankind.

Affable, intelligent, kind, cosmopolitan yet comfortable as an old shoe, Hatcher Story is at once both interesting and interested, both ordinary and extraordinary. If you're ever in Courtland, Virginia around lunch time, stop in at Danny's Diner and ask for him. If he's there, you're in for a treat.

WHICH WILL IT BE?

ACCORDING TO YOUR WILL...or according to arbitrary state laws?

If you have not exercised one of the most precious rights you have as an American citizen, the right to make a will and dispose of your property in accordance with your own personal wishes, then you should see a free booklet, "Making Your Will," which we will send you without obligation on your part.

What can a will do for you? A will can:

- Provide for your property to be distributed in keeping with your wishes.
- Save unnecessary expenses in settling your estate.
- Name a guardian for minor children.
- In many cases, reduce or avoid estate taxes and future income taxes for beneficiaries.
- Create a trust or trusts to assure an adequate income for your spouse or other heirs, while protecting your estate against mismanagement or dissipation due to their inexperience or lack of interest in managing financial affairs.
- Provide a bequest to Elon College or any other charitable cause which you want to benefit from your estate.

Don't procrastinate or neglect to do what needs to be done. Before making or revising your will, write for the free booklet, "Making Your Will... What You Should Know Before You See Your Lawyer."

Robin Moser secured one of her students from Southern (Alamance County) High School on a trip to Hollywood in May. They toured the University Studios complex, Beverly Hills and the University of Southern California Film School; attended screenings of "Streets of Fire" and "The Last Starfighter"; and saw such performers as Barbara Streisand, Richard Pryor, Cher, Dionne Warwick, David Brenner and Rip Torn. The trip, sponsored by Universal Studios, was made possible by the student's award-winning entry in a national contest. Moser has taught at Southern High School for the past three years and will be teaching the 7th grade at Broadview Middle School in

1983-84 PRESIDENT'S REPORT

A YEAR OF GOOD RETURNS

A survey of the 388 members of the Elon College Class of 1984 revealed two impressive statistics: 95% of the graduating seniors indicated that they would return to Elon if they were beginning their education again and 97% pointed to the helpfulness and individual attention they had received from the faculty as a major factor in their satisfaction with the college. These two statistics were, for me, among the most gratifying indicators during the past year that Elon College is achieving its goal of offering to young men and women a superior educational experience.

There were other gratifying signs as well. In 1983 an evaluation team from the highly respected Research Triangle Institute spent a week on campus evaluating our use of a $2 million Title III grant. After the visit, the principal investigator wrote, "Of the 51 institutions involved in our intensive case studies of institutions involved in the Title III program, none emerged so positively in so many ways as did Elon... (Elon) was our paragon of direction for the achievement of institutional vitality and viability."

A third and most important source of satisfaction in 1983-84 was the overwhelming support Elon received from alumni, parents, friends, churches and corporations. A great number of donors have ever before gave to the college, indicating a high level of interest, approval and support.

Alumni giving made the most impressive leap, rising to a high of 30%. Just two years ago the level of participation was 15%. This new percentage ranks Elon near the top among North Carolina's private colleges and universities. Only Davidson and Wake Forest boast higher percentages. The increase also made Elon a finalist in the nationwide CASE/U.S. Steel Awards program.

The PRIDE II campaign was another success. The $5.7 million campaign was announced in October, 1983 and by May, 1984 over $4.7 had been received in pledges and payments.

By giving your money to Elon College, you, the donors, are making an investment in the total educational program at Elon, and I would like to share with you some of the returns on your investment in 1983-84. It is more than a coincidence that a successful fund-raising year is paralleled by an eventual academic year.

2715, the eighth consecutive all-time high. The total recruiting program at Elon was studied intensively in 1983, and several changes and improvements were made. One significant addition was a 12-minute multi-media slide presentation describing the college and its programs. The presentation was shown to thousands of enthusiastic viewers during the year and won a second-place award in the nationwide competition sponsored by CASE, the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education.

The strengthening of the Admissions program is already beginning to show results. At mid-summer applications for the 1984-85 year were up 22% over last year and paid deposits were up 14%. These increases have enabled the college to reject a greater number of marginal students without risking a precipitous decline in enrollment.

Academic Advances

A number of significant program improvements were made during the past year. A master of business administration degree was approved by the faculty, trustees and the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges. All preparations for the degree program were completed, and the first candidates are being accepted for fall, 1984.

The offering of a graduate degree is a milestone in modern Elon College history and a step forward in the service of the college to students and community. The decision to take this step was based primarily on two factors: community demand and college readiness. At a time when local business and industry were expressing a need for such a program, the college — fresh from a reaccreditation program and a number of major gifts — had the necessary faculty, library and computer resources to offer a quality program.

Another major thrust of the 1983-84 year was a study of the campus intellectual and cultural climate. Since Elon's mission is to educate the total person, exposure to intellectual and cultural events is a primary facet of the college program. A faculty member, Dr. George Troxler, has been given release time in the coming year to serve as coordinator of cultural and intellectual events. He will be responsible for planning and scheduling events and integrating them into campus life.

The revised and strengthened general education curriculum went into effect in 1983-84. The curriculum forms the core of liberal arts studies for all four-year majors. Dr. William G. Rich of the religion department has been appointed director of general studies to oversee the implementation and continued development of the program.

The groundwork for a new evening school program was also laid in 1983-84. Beginning this fall, the Elon in the Evening program will make it possible for students in a number of programs to receive their degrees by attending night courses exclusively.

WSOE, the college's student-run radio station, was increased in power from 10 to 500 watts during the past year at a cost of $25,000 for equipment and construction. The station now has a range of 25 miles and is operated 365 days a year, providing valuable experience for students interested in communications as a career.

Physical Plant Progress

The construction and renovation that has gone on in 1983-84 reflects the general progress of the institution. In the spring construction began on an additional 124-bed modular housing unit at The Oaks. The facility will be ready for occupancy in fall, 1984.

A new soccer field, a gift from the Bakstakis family of Burlington, N.C., has been built north of Koury Fieldhouse. A track is being constructed to surround the field. The old field and track will be the site of the new Fine Arts Center.

Construction also began on a greenhouse to serve the biology department. It is located at the corner of Lebanon and O'Kelley Avenues adjacent to the main campus.

Duncan Court, a gift of Mr. and Mrs. W.H. Duncan of Greensboro, N.C., was added between Smith and Carolina residence halls and has already proved a popular and attractive gathering place for East Area residents. In addition, a number of brick sidewalks were completed within the wall, adding to the beauty of the campus.

The Moonelon Conference Center one mile west of the campus was purchased from the United Church of Christ and renovated. Now known as The Lodge, it will serve as a site for educational and social events for faculty, staff and students.

The Challenges Ahead

I have listed some of the successes of the 1983-84 year. As investors you are entitled to know the challenges that the institution faces as well. Currently, Elon faces three major hurdles. The first is intense competition from lower-priced, state-supported institutions. Elon and all other private colleges and universities must find ways to remain affordable. This includes actively seeking increases in the North Carolina Legislative Tuition Grant program, keeping tuition costs down, and providing a full range of financial opportunities. In each of these areas your support—financial, political, and moral—is important.

Elon's second challenge is to build a stronger, more stable financial base through an increased endowment. Through the PRIDE II campaign, Elon's endowment has been raised substantially, but this is only the beginning. To reach the heights of excellence, Elon must have the security and resources a large endowment offers.

A final and immediate challenge that Elon faces is the building of a new fine arts center. The demand for this additional programmatic facility is great, and the rewards of having it will extend far beyond the immediate benefits of extra space. The completed center will serve as a central location for cultural events for the entire community and as an impetus for a greatly expanded thrust in the fine arts both on campus and off.

To all who made gifts to Elon College in 1983-84, I offer sincerest appreciation. The growths and gains that I have described in this report are some of the more visible returns that you have had on your investment. It is my hope that in the educational experience of any student you could find other returns, less visible perhaps, but no less dramatic in terms of impact.

In addition, I solicit your continued support. Our vision at Elon is to provide nothing less than the best for the students we serve. Our success is dependent upon your interest and involvement.

Fred Young

New Thrust in Admissions

The Admissions Department had a series of successes in 1983-84, beginning with a fall enrollment of

ALUMNI PARTICIPATION TOPS 30% IN 1983-84

For the second consecutive year alumni, parents, and friends gave in record numbers to Elon College.

According to Director of Annual Giving Jerry R. Tolley, the percentage of alumni giving at Elon topped 30% during 1983-84, up from 15.4% just two years ago in 1981-82.

"Elon has come a long way in the past two years to secure for itself an outstanding record in alumni giving," said Tolley, former national football coach of the year. "In fact, based on last year's alumni giving to all colleges and universities in North Carolina, both private and public, Elon should now rank with Davidson and Wake Forest as the three leaders in alumni participation."

All groups of contributors had impressive increases in the number of gifts made to the college during 1983-84. Gifts from alumni increased from 3,344 to over 4,000. Friends' donations increased from 905 to 1,085, while 892 parents participated in 1983-84 compared to only 746 the previous year.

The Great Alumni Phonathon Challenge

Other interesting news centered around the annual Elon College Phonathon and the results of the Great Alumni Challenge, issued by the younger alumni. The "challenge" bragged that the alumni departing the campus after the 1984 Phonathon than those "old folks" who left the campus before 1968. The final results are now in and according to W. David Wall, Elon's director of the administrative computer center, the Grand Old Alumni prevailed by the narrowest of margins — just 23 donations, out of a total of 2,515 received from all alumni, or a margin of .009%.

Tolley cautioned the older alumni against resting on their laurels, however.

"There is already talk of another Phonathon challenge by the 'youngsters' next year," he stated, "so the 'old folks' shouldn't get too cocky. In fact, because of their percentage of increased participation, some young alumni are already claiming a 'moral victory' this year!"

The Top Classes

Eight alumni classes had giving records of 50% or more participation in 1983-84: 1917, 1920, 1924, 1927, 1928, 1929, 1936 and 1937. The class of 1927 claimed the distinction of leading all classes in alumni participation as 18 of its 30 members made gifts for a 60% participation rate. The class of 1937 followed closely at 59% as 35 of the 60 on that class roll contributed.

Ten classes achieved a 40% - 49% participation record. The 1925 alumni led this group with 48% contributing. They were followed by the class of 1938 which stood at 46%. Other classes who donated in the 40% - 49% range were the classes of 1926, 1930, 1931, 1940, 1942, 1943, 1945 and 1947.

Classes Above 30% Participation

There were 27 additional classes whose percentage of participation was between 30% - 39%. The classes of 1938 and 1939 led this group with 39% and 38% respectively. The remaining 25 are listed in the alumni giving rolls.

Dr. Tolley noted that two years ago there were 36 classes whose participation ratio was below 20%. This year he was happy to report that there was not a single one. In fact, of the 77 classes that still have alumni on their rolls, 44 had participation ratios of over 30%.

Tolley also noted that even though the young alumni did not win the "Great Alumni Challenge" they have set a standard of giving for Elon that is not equaled at other colleges. Five classes had donors totaling over 100 gifts. These include the classes of 1970, 1973, 1976, 1982 and 1983. The classes of 1969, 1971, 1975 and 1981 had over 90 of their classmates make donations. These totals represent a great future for alumni giving at the college. For the record, the class of 1973 leads all 77 of Elon's classes with 122 donors.

Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development, praised alumni, parents and friends for their outstanding record of giving.

"Elon's alumni, parents and friends are the finest people in the world. Every gift we receive, from the smallest to the largest, is greatly appreciated and helps to keep Elon among the finest institutions in our state today."

GIVING CLUBS

Special recognition is given to Elon College donors who make significant gifts for the Annual Fund, academic scholarships and awards, academic program support, endowment, and capital projects. Membership in the ORDER OF THE OAK is awarded to alumni and friends who have contributed $100,000 to Elon through the new ELON LIFE FOR ENDOWMENT program. The CHAIRMAN'S COUNCIL honors donors who give $5,000 or more. Membership in the PRESIDENT'S CLUB is extended to those individuals who contribute $100-$999. A contribution of $500-$999 entitles donors to membership in the OAK CLUB. The A.L. HOOK CLUB membership consists of those who have contributed $100-$499. The amount of an individual's total gifts for all eligible purposes during the fiscal year ending May 31, 1984 determines the qualifications for giving club membership.

FIGHTING CHRISTIAN CLUB

Contributions to the Elon College athletic program for 1983-84 exceeded the $100,000 mark for the second consecutive year, according to Dr. Jerry R. Tolley, athletic scholarship fund director. Of this total, over $67,000 was donated to the general operating fund while $30,000 was designated to endowed scholarship funds. An additional $3,900 was donated to other special projects, bringing the total to $100,900. The Athletic Scholarship Fund also received fourteen additional gifts credited as gifts-in-kind, accounting for another $10,000.

For the June 1, 1983 - May 31, 1984 fiscal year, over 743 loyal alumni, parents, and friends placed their names on the honor roll of donors in the college's Fightin' Christian Club.

One very special pledge was made to the Elon College Athletic Department during the past fiscal year from the Bakstakis family of Burlington. The gift was obtained through George Bakstakis who was one of the first recruited soccer players at Elon. According to Jerry Tolley, the $50,000 contribution represents the second largest gift ever made to the Elon Department of Athletics. It will be used to develop a soccer-playing facility adjacent to the Koury Fieldhouse. The field will be named Bakstakis Field.

Two new athletic scholarship endowments were established. The John L. Rybe Scholarship was funded by Mr. John L. Rybe of Robbins, North Carolina, a student on the campus during the early '40s. The second endowment was established by the friends and family of Mr. L.J. "Hap" Perry. "Hap" was an all-state athlete at Elon and served his alma mater as a three-sport coach after World War II. Both of these scholarship endowments will be awarded for the first time in the spring of 1985.

In reviewing the year, Tolley issued his sincere thanks on behalf of the entire athletic staff to everyone who gave their support for the Elon College athletic program during the 1983-84 fiscal year. He also had special praise for Marvin Comer, who chaired the Athletic Scholarship Fund drive.

Thank goodness we sent the trunks ahead!

A typical scene takes place on opening day for freshmen — moving in. Over 2790 students enrolled for classes at Elon this fall — the eighth consecutive all-time high in enrollment. Thirty students were enrolled for classes in the new MBA program. President Fred Young reported that the opening was one of the smoothest in college history.

Rep. John Jordan pledges $200,000 to PRIDE II Campaign

State Rep. John M. Jordan has made a $200,000 pledge to the Elon College PRIDE II Campaign, college officials have announced.

Half the funds will be used to increase a scholarship fund he established in 1979, an endowment to provide annual scholarships to deserving students in Rep. Jordan's district. The additional $100,000 will be donated to meet the Kresge Challenge, a million-dollar fund raising effort to complete the proposed fine arts center planned for construction next year on the liberal arts campus, according to Elon President Fred Young.

"This generous gift by Rep. Jordan represents one of the largest donations by a single individual in Elon's 95-year history," Young said.

"Rep. Jordan has followed in the footsteps of his late father, U.S. Senator B. Everett Jordan, in providing major support to this institution. Sen. Jordan was a long-time supporter and trustee of Elon. He also provided funds to help build the new gym which bears his name. Rep. Jordan's brother-in-law, Roger Gant Jr., is currently serving as an Elon trustee. We are grateful for John's generosity and for continuing the family tradition."

Rep. Jordan said, "I have been a lifelong resident of Alamance County and know firsthand the outstanding job Elon has done in educating the young men and women of this area. Elon College is in my home county, and I will do anything I can to help local students have the advantage of studying at an educational institution of this caliber."

A native of Alamance County, Rep. Jordan represents Alamance, Rockingham and part of Stokes counties in the North Carolina House of Representatives. Jordan was first elected to the N.C. House in 1974. He was elected to the State Senate in the Democratic primary election in May and will begin serving the Alamance Caswell county district in that chamber in January. The past two sessions he has served as chairman of the House Committee on State Personnel.

President Young also said, "Rep. Jordan has made education a top priority as our representative for the eight years he has served in the House, and I know as our senator he will continue to support educational issues."

Rep. Jordan added, "We all pay taxes which support our public schools, but private educational institutions depend on individuals to help them. It is important that we have strong public and private schools as both are vital in the total scope of our educational systems."

For Fine Arts Center challenge

Kresge awards largest grant in Elon College history

The Kresge Foundation has awarded a $250,000 challenge grant to the Elon College PRIDE II Campaign. The grant is the largest foundation gift in the 95-year history of the college.

The funds will be awarded when the college raises an additional $750,000 to build a proposed fine arts center. The fine arts center is part of the $5.7 million capital campaign begun late last year and scheduled to run through 1985. At the end of June, over $4.7 million had been pledged. The challenge must be met by July 15, 1985.

College officials expressed confidence that the remaining $750,000 would be raised and the fine arts center would be completed on schedule. Groundbreaking is scheduled for this winter.

Dr. James B. Powell, chairman of the PRIDE II Campaign, which stands for "Providing Resources for Institutional Development at Elon," said the Kresge challenge would provide an impetus to complete the campaign on schedule.

"With over 80 percent of the campaign total raised in the first year and well over a year remaining, we feel confident that Elon College will meet this new challenge and qualify for The Kresge Foundation's quarter million dollars," Powell said at a news conference held on the coeducational campus Wednesday.

Elon College is one of 128 charitable institutions awarded new grant commitments from 1,275 proposals considered by The Kresge Foundation, located in Troy, Michigan. The majority of these grants were toward projects involving construction or renovation of facilities.

Like Elon, most grant recipients had raised initial funds toward their respective projects before requesting foundation assistance. Grants were then authorized on a challenge basis, requiring the raising of the remaining funds, thereby insuring completion of the projects.

The Kresge Foundation is an independent, private foundation created by the personal gifts of Sebastian S. Kresge, who amassed a fortune as founder and chairman of the board of the S.S. Kresge Company, now known as K-mart Corporation. Although not affiliated with any corporation or organization, the foundation ranks among the 10 largest in the country, and since its establishment in 1924 has authorized more than $484 million in grants.

The foundation makes grants to institutions in the areas of higher education, health care and related service, the arts and humanities, social services, science, conservation, religion, and public policy.

When completed, the proposed fine arts center, which will be constructed in phases, will house the entire Elon College Fine Arts Department, including art, music, and drama. Incorporated in the facility will be theaters, faculty offices, music library, practice rooms, a gallery, and general service areas.

The fine arts center has been referred to as "the most important cultural facility to be constructed in Alamance County during the remainder of this century" by Elon College President Fred Young.

Dr. Fred Young, right, thanks Rep. John M. Jordan for his pledge to the PRIDE II campaign. Jordan's gift is one of the largest in college history.

Friends of the Elon Library organize

Books are the "treasured wealth of the world, the fit inheritance of generations of nations," said Henry David Thoreau.

The newly organized Friends of the Library of Elon College hopes to store up some of that treasure at the Iris Holt McEwen Library through its various activities and sponsorships.

A board of eighteen men and women have joined forces to "promote the interests of the library and to provide enrichment for its total resources and facilities." To this end it will sponsor programs for its members, edit a newsletter, offer services to the community, and be a vehicle to receive support for the academic interests of the college.

Academic excellence will be the emphasis throughout. By encouraging total use of the library facilities, by inspiring student interest in library careers, by gaining support from faculty, retirees, staff and alumni who feel that academic excellence is a priority today, and by passing on to students this "treasured wealth" as a fit inheritance, the Friends will help insure that Elon College will have a facility of promise for academic achievement.

Invitations for membership are being mailed. If at this time you have not received yours, join now by filling in the coupon which is printed in this issue of The Centennial goals announced

Young says Elon will raise admissions requirements

President Fred Young has announced to the faculty a major policy change in admissions standards for Elon College.

At the first faculty meeting of the 1984-85 year, Young announced that over the next four years the college will gradually raise the requirements for admission.

Young said he wanted the college to be generally recognized as "an excellent school for highly motivated young men and women" by 1989, when Elon will celebrate its 100th birthday.

"We are not a university, nor should we aspire to be," said Young. "Neither is it our role to educate solely the academically elite. But we can and should aim for the top among the private institutions in the state with missions similar to ours. It is a position that is not clearly occupied by anyone, and it is a position that Elon can conceivably reach."

Young said he had approved stricter admissions standards for entering freshmen next year. A slightly higher admission standard this year resulted in a substantial increase in the number of students rejected, although a record enrollment was set for the eighth year in a row.

Enrollment for 1984-85 stands at 2,790 men and women.

"Tightening admissions standards in a time of a 20 percent decrease in the high school population, an ever-widening tuition gap and the continued expansion by the state system is an ambitious goal," said Young. "There is a strong possibility that the goal simply cannot be achieved. All of us must be psychologically prepared for that possibility."

To achieve the goal, said Young, Elon must attract more good students and retain more of those students who are enrolled.

"The best way to attract new students is to provide a satisfactory program for those who are already here," he said, noting that surveys show that most students decide to enroll at Elon because their friends at the college are satisfied and recommend it to them.

"We must keep current students satisfied by enabling them to succeed," he said. "We enable students to succeed, not by lowering standards, which is false success, but by placing them in appropriate and effective programs, helping them to see the purpose of education, establishing mentor relationships with them, and involving them in student activities."

The president told the faculty members that they held the key to the success of such an ambitious undertaking.

"Success in education can only be measured by the quality of experience the individual student has, and that experience is chiefly in faculty hands. You are doing an outstanding job.

"We advertise mentor relationships as a strength, and, obviously, our claims are justified," he said.

Young stated that he did not envision any significant growth in size for Elon by 1989, and, consequently, the college should not need much additional space.

In terms of facilities, he said that by the Centennial Year the fine arts center should be completed and the college should be "well on the way toward upgrading the science facilities."

Young also proposed other goals for the Centennial Year. They include a fully operational general studies program, a comprehensive cultural and intellectual affairs program, an expanded religious life program, an enhanced career placement program, an Annual Fund of $500,000, and an endowment of $10 million.

He also expressed a hope that by 1989 the North Carolina Legislative Tuition Grant would be tied by formula to the subsidy for students in public institutions.

"Unless this goal is achieved," said Young, "It is unlikely Elon can achieve its other goals because the tuition gap may well become insurmountable."

David Pardue makes gift to Fine Arts Center

David E. Pardue, Jr. of Burlington has made a gift of $50,000 to the proposed Elon College Fine Arts Center.

A patron of the arts, Pardue is actively involved in fine arts in the community. He plays tuba in the Elon College Community Orchestra and supports this and other organizations.

The fine arts center will house the music, art, and drama programs at Elon. Construction of the first phase of the complex is scheduled to begin this fall.

Pardue graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with a bachelor of science degree in business administration. He is currently president of the Dacourt Group, Inc., a real estate investment firm.

Pardue has two children, Courtney and David, and is a member of the Elon College Board of Advisers.

Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice-president for development at Elon College, said the college was delighted with the Pardue gift. "We thank Mr. Pardue for his generous support and interest in our Fine Arts Center," said Williams.

intellectual activities.

The weekly show, an ambitious project, is the result of the efforts of Ray Johnson, coordinator of television services and assistant professor of communications, and a handful of staff and student assistants. Johnson is a former member of the history faculty at Williams High School in Burlington, N.C., where he also served as videotape coordinator.

Johnson produces the weekly show using equipment recently purchased by the college which allows location video recording. The equipment will eventually be used in television communications courses.

Elon makes cable debut with weekly show

"Rituals" may be the first association you make between Elon College and fall television, but for many North Carolina residents it won't be the last.

"Elon in Review," a weekly cablevision program featuring the people and events of Elon College, is now being shown over the local access cablevision channels in Alamance and Guilford counties every Thursday evening.

In Alamance County, "Elon in Review" is shown on channel 32 at 7:30 p.m. Other nearby local channels have also expressed an interest in the show.

The show features interviews with campus personalities, highlights of athletic events, campus news, and coverage of the cultural and

Elder and Comer spearhead annual giving drives

Two distinguished Elon College award winners will lead the 1984-85 annual giving drives, according to Dr. Jerry R. Tolley, Elon Director of Annual Giving.

James P. Elder, Jr., 1983 Alumnus of the Year, will chair the college's Annual Fund drive. Dr. Elder, a Burlington native, graduated from Elon College in 1960 with a bachelor of arts degree in history. He received his master's and doctorate degrees in English History from the University of North Carolina—Chapel Hill.

Dr. Elder served as a history professor at Elon College from 1963 to 1973 and was selected three times by the student body to receive the Outstanding Professor Award. He was also noted for his sponsorship of the Liberal Arts Forum at Elon College. Dr. Elder presently serves as the chief executive officer of The James P. Elder and Company consulting firm in Washington, D.C.

Marvin Comer, a former recipient of the college's Citizen's Service Award, will again lead the Athletic Scholarship Fund Drive. He was elected president of the Fighting Christian Club Advisory Board for the 1984-85 fiscal year. He will be assisted by president-elect Haywood Simpson and second-vice president Anne Morrison. Mr. Comer also serves the college as a member of the Presidential Board of Advisers.

Comer, who is now retired, had a distinguished career in the textile industry. During his career he has been active in community and civic affairs. He is a member and former chairman of the Burlington Recreation Commission, and a member and former officer of the Burlington YMCA.

"We are extremely grateful to these two outstanding men for agreeing to serve in these vital functions," said Dr. Jerry R. Tolley, Director of Annual Giving. "Elon is fortunate to have dedicated supporters like Jim Elder and Marvin Comer."

MOVE OVER WAKE FOREST— HERE COME THE ELON ALUMNI

A high goal has been established for the 1984-85 Elon College Annual Fund according to Dr. Jerry Tolley, director of annual giving. Simply stated, Elon intends to capture the number two position in alumni participation among all North Carolina colleges and universities.

Two years ago the percentage of alumni making gifts to Elon College stood at 15%. By the end of the 1984 fiscal year, however, the figure had surged to 30%, ranking Elon third in the state in alumni participation surpassed only by Wake Forest University and Davidson College.

The goal of this year is to overtake Wake Forest and assume the number two spot. "Exactly how high we will have to go to surpass Wake Forest remains to be seen," says Tolley. "Right now we don't have their figures from last year. But whatever it takes, I know that Elon alumni can do it."

"In 1985 we will go after Davidson's number one spot," he added, "but that is another challenge. Right now we are full steam ahead after Wake Forest."

During the last two annual fund drives Elon has added a phenomenal 1850 new alumni donors, Tolley reported. This year, 1984-85, he expects to add another 1,000.

"The only disappointment of last year's campaign," says Tolley, "was that a significant number of past contributors failed to make a gift. If Elon is to achieve its ultimate goal of becoming number one, every Elon alumnus and alumna would have to consider making a gift on an annual basis."

In a recent letter former Elon professor and 1984-85 Annual Giving Chairman, Dr. James P. Elder '60, called on all Elon alumni to accept the challenge to pass Wake Forest for the number two position in alumni participation among colleges and universities in North Carolina.

Four accept administrative appointments

Four persons have been named to key administrative posts at Elon College this fall.

Robert G. Anderson has been named college planning officer. He will develop and implement a marketing plan and assist faculty committees and academic departments with advancement programs. Anderson holds a B.A. in history and political science from St. Andrews Presbyterian College and an M.A. in African Studies from American University in Washington, D.C. where he has also completed course work for a Ph.D. in International Studies and Foreign Policy. He has served in a variety of administrative roles at St. Andrews and has also been chairman of the Department of Political Science at Presbyterian College in South Carolina.

Richard McBride has been appointed college chaplain and coordinator of counseling. A native of Roanoke, Virginia, and an ordained Baptist minister, McBride has served as college minister at Gardner-Webb College and as assistant chaplain at Wake-Forest University. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia, the Union Theological Seminary in New York and Duke Divinity School.

Steven C. Reinhartsen has accepted the position of director of cooperative education. He is a graduate of Valparaiso University in Indiana and holds an M.E.D. from UNC-Greensboro. He is a former director of career planning and placement at Elizabeth City State University.

Robert A. Wood has been named director of adult education and special programs. Wood received his E.D.D. degree from UNC-Greensboro. He also holds an E.D.S., M.E.D. and B.S. from East Carolina University and is an experienced public school administrator. At Elon he will be in charge of the M.B.A. program, Elon in the Evening, and all other continuing education programs.

New faculty members arrive for fall term

Thirteen new full-time faculty members, representing an impressive range of talents, educational backgrounds and experience joined the Elon College faculty this fall.

Herman Brock has accepted the position of assistant professor of accounting. Brock, a certified public accountant, holds a B.A. and M.A. from Roosevelt University in Chicago. He has extensive experience in financial management.

George A. Coltrane has been appointed associate professor of accounting and business administration. He is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Duke University where he received his J.D. degree and is the former chairman of the department of economics and accounting at Converse College.

Debra Sheila Dwyer, instructor in foreign languages, holds a B.A. degree from St. Joseph's College in Connecticut and an M.A. from UNC, Chapel Hill. She has extensive experience in teaching German.

Don C. Gibson, Jr. has been named associate professor and chairman of the department of fine arts. He is a talented flutist and former chairman of the division of instrumental studies at UNC, Greensboro. He received his B.A. and M.A. from Duquesne University and his Ph.D. in music theory from Florida State University.

Arten Dale Keefling has been appointed assistant professor of economics. He received a B.S. and M.S. from the University of Arkansas and an M.A. in economics from Virginia Polytechnic Institute. He has taught economics on a college level for eight years.

Leonard Ray Johnson is a new instructor in military science. He is a native of Cincinnati, Ohio, and a staff sergeant in the U.S. Army, specializing in personal administration.

William Ray Johnson has been named coordinator of television services and assistant professor of communications. Johnson holds a B.S. degree from Appalachian State University and a M.E.D. from UNC-Greensboro. He was employed by Burlington City Schools for 13 years, teaching advanced placement history and television production.

Richard C. Mroz is the new director of the medical lab technician program. He holds a B.S. from the University of Maryland and is a candidate for the doctoral degree in the Catholic University of America Medical Technology Program. He was previously education coordinator of the St. Joseph Hospital of Medical Technology in Baltimore, Maryland.

James L. Murphy has accepted the position of instructor in mathematics and computer information science. He holds a B.S. degree from Campbell University and has 18 years experience in public school teaching.

Susan L. Pieple has accepted a position as instructor in foreign languages. She holds a B.A. from SUNY-Albany, an M.S. from the University of Rochester, and an M.A. from Middlebury College in Connecticut from which she is now working towards a doctoral degree.

Rosalind Reichard, assistant professor of mathematics, has extensive experience teaching math on the college level. She received her bachelor's degree from Harpur College in Binghamton, New York, and her master's and Ph.D. degrees from Michigan State University.

Thomas K. Tieeman has been named associate professor of economics. He graduated from Darlington College and received his Ph.D. from Vanderbilt University. He is a former member and acting chairman of the department of economics at Washburn College.

Willem C. Wood has been named assistant professor of business administration. He holds degrees from Lenoir-Rhyne, the Lutheran Theological Southern Seminary, and master's and Ph.D. degrees in engineering from the University of Virginia. He is the former assistant director of the Center for Interactive Management at the School of Engineering and Applied Science of the University of Virginia.

Regional meetings

Four Elon alumni chapters enjoy summer gatherings

Four alumni chapters have sponsored regional gatherings in recent months. A committee of local alumni organized each function, and the college's Office of Alumni & Parent Programs provided organizational assistance. For more information on how to become involved in future chapter events, contact the president of the respective chapter at the telephone number listed below or the Office of Alumni & Parent Programs.

Sanford/Lee County

In March, the SANFORD/LEE COUNTY ALUMNI CHAPTER sponsored a dinner at the Golden Corral Restaurant in Sanford. About 45 alumni, parents and prospective students attended. After dinner the gathering heard remarks from J. King White '80, director of alumni & parent programs; Brank Proffitt, director of planned giving; and Marydell R. Bright, dean of admissions and financial aid. Mrs. Bright showed the admissions slide show, "Elon: A Place of Infinite Possibilities" and conducted a question and answer session. Don Dollar '70, Lisa Roberts Foushee '81 and Irene Hook Covington '41 were responsible for the arrangements. (Chapter President: Don Dollar, 919/774-4447.)

Forsyth County

Friday, July 13, proved to be a lucky day for about 70 Elon alumni who gathered for an informal poolside social at Old Town Club in Winston-Salem. Delicious hors d'oeuvres were prepared by Lynn Moore Stewart '81, Kathy Gilliam Ruffin '81 and Tim Stevenson '75. Complimentary refreshments were served, and a disc jockey provided the entertainment throughout the evening. Jack Locicero '81, Anna & Gene Walker '82, Bob Ruffin '81, Barbara Stokes '82 and Wally Vinton '79 were the chief organizers of the event, which was hosted by Carl and Lynn Stewart. Members of the college staff present were Scott Stevenson '82, associate director of admissions, and King White '80. This function reestablished the FORSYTH COUNTY ALUMNI CHAPTER, and plans are being made to sponsor future gatherings. (Chapter President: Jack Locicero 919/761-5587.)

Suffolk/Tidewater

The first social sponsored by the SUFFOLK/TIDEWATER

VIRGINIA CHAPTER in over a year proved to be well worth the wait as nearly 75 area alumni enjoyed a pool party at the Suffolk (Va.) Swimming Pool on Saturday evening, July 28. Although rain had been predicted, clear skies prevailed throughout the evening while college friends socialized and enjoyed the refreshments. The arrangements were made by Betty Jean Riddick Crigger '76, and her husband, Terry '71. King White '80 represented the college. Others present who helped to "spread the word" were Steve '82 & Marcia '80 Humphrey, Sally O'Neill '70, Henry '75 & Mopsi '72 Pittman, Don Goldberg '69, John '71 & Nina '70 McConnell, Jay '78 & Debbie '77 Butler, and Wellington Saecker '41. (Chapter President: Betty Jean Crigger 804/934-0250.)

Greater Richmond area

A group of local alumni sponsored the fourth annual summer social, a "T.G.I.F." party, for the GREATER RICHMOND ALUMNI CHAPTER on Friday, August 24. The get-together, held at The Columbian Center, attracted a number of current and prospective students, many of whom would travel to Elon for the beginning of the fall semester the following weekend. More than 65 recent graduates and their guests socialized at the outdoor shelter while enjoying refreshments and music provided by a local DJ. The local alumni who assisted in promoting the function were Bonny Smith '81, Pete Roughton '80, Bill Day '81, Dee Dee Saunders '83, Sheila Callis '83, Toni Napoli '82, Billy Street '83, Julie Talley '84, Lowell Smith '83, and Jane and Chris Board '84. Nancy Redd Penick '81 (804/747-1405) made the arrangements. (Chapter President: Linda May Shields '67 804/379-1402.)

The GREATER WASHINGTON ALUMNI CHAPTER is currently reorganizing and welcomes input from area alumni who want to become involved in chapter activities. For more details, contact Chapter President Bob Pafe '75 by calling (703)998-4037.

Over 700 Elon alumni live in the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area, which is the only major metropolitan area in North Carolina without an active alumni chapter. Tim & Linda Bartlett Moore (both '78) recently mailed a questionnaire

(Kappa Sigma)

I remember it clearly, as if it happened yesterday. It was the spring of “78” and most of the Elon sororities were enjoying their yearly banquet one weekend night. It just so happened that nothing was going on at Elon that night or at “Bill’s Blue Room” and the “Lighthouse.” What to do? With our bellies full of “ale” and women on the brain, “Leeper” and I decided to have some fun. Our master plan was to “worry” the sisters of the Tri-Sigma sorority. That meant access to their house was necessary. Little did they know what we were about to do while they were away! “Leeper” and I grabbed two pillowcases and walked the three blocks to the Tri-Sigma house. Upon entry we stumbled in the dark, but did manage to “borrow” every last piece of underwear we could find. Our mission accomplished, we felt elated.

Back at the Kappa Sigma Fraternity house we sifted through our find like a prospector having just found gold. Our bounty was not just limited to regular run-of-the-mill underwear, but ones with zippers, lace, see-thru fabric and an assortment of wild colors. A couple of fraternity brothers joined us and we laughed hysterically while trying to match each piece with the girls who lived in the house. Later on, we separated the boring stuff from the juicy incriminating evidence, then returned to the bar. While discussing our treasure, we came up with the idea of tacking the good stuff around the perimeter of the bar. After all, our fraternity had a scheduled mixer with Tri-Sigma the next weekend. What more perfect way to stretch a good prank? When Saturday finally arrived, “Leeper” and I sat in our room prior to the mixer and made predictions as to which piece of “evidence” belonged to which sister. After the girls arrived and settled in, they could be seen whispering softly among themselves, as they managed to put two and two together. It wasn’t long before the sisters began to open up, but not until a couple of doses of “liquid courage” had been administered. Eventually, they came forward and claimed their personal items.

As for our predictions — who would have ever guessed that the quietest, most reserved, and well-mannered girl in the sorority would wear hot pink, zippered, laced, see-thru panties. I guess the old saying, “You can’t judge a book by its cover,” certainly applied here. Only at Elon!

FORGING A DREAM

DAVID BREWIN ENJOYS CAREER AS BLACKSMITH

By Tom DeTitta

Dreams are something most people save for a quiet moment away from whatever job they happened to have fallen into.

David Brewin, Elon '69, fell into careers as a high school Spanish instructor, and then an elementary school guidance counselor.

Deep down inside, however, Brewin maintained a fascination for forging metal. The dream of being a blacksmith had first taken root in him at 11 years of age, when his father took him to see the movie "Moby Dick."

He vividly remembers the scene in which Captain Ahab, played by Gregory Peck, forged a harpoon to kill the great white whale and quenched it in blood he collected from his shipmates.

"Boy, I just fell in love with that," Brewin said. "It struck a chord in me that just stayed in the back of my mind; I really loved forged metal work."

Still, a man who graduates from college with a Spanish major ought to teach Spanish, and so Brewin returned to his native Eastern North Carolina to teach in an elementary school.

Dissatisfaction caused Brewin to try another direction; this time a master's degree in counseling from East Carolina University which led to a job as an elementary school guidance counselor.

But that didn't last long.

"I remember the year I quit, I was bored one day watching kids take tests in the library when I looked down into the garbage can and saw this thing that said, 'Campbell (John C. Campbell Folk School in Brasstown, N.C.) offers blacksmithing courses,'" Brewin said.

Brewin reached down and fished the piece of paper out of the trash — at whatever risk to his status among the test-takers.

"When the testing was over I went right back to my office and called up the Folk School," Brewin said. "They had a course in blacksmithing coming up in the summer."

"I came out to the school and just fell in love with the place. The preservation of traditional crafts, the folk music and dances at night. The Folk School was one of the most amazing places I had ever seen."

Brewin's instructor for his second class at the school was the world-famous blacksmith Francis Whitaker from Aspen, Colorado. About halfway through the two-week class session, Whitaker called the class together to talk with them.

"He said, 'I can sense that a lot of people are unhappy with their lives and their jobs,'" Brewin said. "Then he said, 'I'm not sure what to tell you about that. I can gratefully say that never happened to me. I've been a blacksmith now for 40 some years and I've loved every day of it.'"

That message, in light of the satisfaction he found in banging a hammer on metal in the beautiful Smokey Mountains, had a very powerful effect on Brewin.

David Brewin '69, a blacksmith at the John C. Campbell Folk School in Brasstown, N.C., inspects a ram's head poker.

"I was convinced I had an ability to blacksmith," Brewin said.

Within a year, Brewin quit his job at the school and started his own blacksmithing shop in his native Hertford, N.C. Soon a position became available at the Folk School, where Brewin has worked as the resident blacksmith for five years now.

Brewin has been perfecting his skill from Whitaker and others in the trade.

"Being a blacksmith is a life-long process," he said. "You keep learning all the time."

When he's not learning or teaching, Brewin is creating fine, commissioned metalwork. He was recently asked to do all the hardware for the oldest brick home in North Carolina listed in the National Historical Register — the Newbould-White House in Hertford, N.C. Blacksmithing is one of the few methods of production left in which a person can ask for something to be made the way he or she wants it.

"You can't call up a factory and get a personal touch," Brewin said. "They make it the way they make it, and if you don't like it — well that's tough."

Brewin recalls how, as a child, he forged little harpoons on his parents' patio grill using a tractor weight as an anvil.

The summers he worked in his grandfather's shipyards on the coast, he remembered talking for hours to one of the ship's old blacksmiths, trying to get as much information from him as he could on the art.

Now he works eight hours a day at the thing he dreamed of doing all those years.

"I think everybody's got a purpose in life and I hadn't found it [teaching Spanish or counseling]," Brewin said. "But when I'm blacksmithing, I really feel like I'm doing what I'm supposed to be doing."

"I really feel like I'm doing what I'm supposed to be doing."

Brewin takes a rest to gaze into the fire.

ELON IS CHOSEN AS LOCALE FOR TV SERIES "RITUALS" AND CONTROLLED CHAOS RESULTS

By Tim McDowell

The lines on Jörn Winther's face were showing the strain of having been awake all night on the "red eye" flight from Los Angeles. His words were coarse in their heavy Swiss accent.

"The Elon College campus is perfect," the executive producer of "Rituals," a new dramatic serial shown nationwide on television this fall, was telling Elon College President Fred Young in an early morning meeting. "It is just what we have been looking for."

Thus began a long series of negotiations that would bring Hollywood to the peaceful setting of Elon College for a tumultuous 10-day sprint which would excite, anger, motivate, frustrate and challenge the facilities of a college hardly prepared for the invasion.

Exactly one week after the first telephone inquiry from the North Carolina Film Commission, a small army of technicians, hairdressers, cameramen, audio specialists, makeup artists, and cast members — including Joanne Pflug of the movie "M*A*S*H," Dennis Patrick of "Dallas," and Monte Markham of "The New Perry Mason" — were joking with students, faculty and administrators next to Alamance Building.

Winther was relieved. At least something was being filmed, after months of research, writing, selling, rewriting, and casting for a new show that many critics said would never see celluloid. Although the pilot program had been a success, "Rituals," with a theme similar to "Dallas" and "Dynasty," would be a 30-minute, five-nights-a-week dramatic serial, something never attempted in commercial television.

Now, after securing time slots on 104 stations — a whopping 90 percent of the television market — the director was shouting "Quiet on the set, please! Film speed! Go!"

The absence of the word "action" was apparent only to those of us unfamiliar with the Winther style.

The previous week had been especially hard on Winther. Since the series revolved around a Southern girls' school, all efforts were concentrated on selecting a college campus. Other scenes would be filmed in the same area and would be located later. The cast and crew were scheduled to arrive in less than a week to begin work, and a thousand details had to be worked through before they came. Several episodes needed to be completed before the series began, a date less than two months away.

Two days into the negotiations, President Young said the college would not participate. Too many questions remained about the impact the series and the filming would have on the reputation of the college.

Set designer Jack McAdam and location manager Kim Winther, son of the producer, flew from Los Angeles that same night and spent the next day agreeing to all of Young's objections. By Thursday, a new contract had been written. Only exterior shots would be allowed, and any signs identifying the Elon campus or buildings were to be changed. Scenes filmed on campus would not be used in any other productions, and "Rituals" had to comply with the prime time standards of the National Association of Broadcasters television code, which meant the program would be rated for general audiences if it were a motion picture.

In addition, Elon would have access to the scripts of scenes filmed on campus, and a credit for the college location would follow each program, if the college desired. The college was to be paid an undisclosed sum for use of the campus.

As part of the contract, I was to be the college representative who would stay with the production company during their visit and approve all campus filming. The production company, Telepictures Corp., was to reimburse the college for my salary while I was on loan to them. What I thought would be an exciting week turned into a laborious marathon of 16-hour days in the boiling sun with little time for anything but hard work.

Following a hastily called news conference Friday to announce the campus site, the crew set up headquarters in the Ramada Inn and began the task of finding other locations. Especially elusive was a country mansion with stables and white columns, the type of plantation home the Chapin textile family — the central characters in the series — would own. After showing Winther every mansion I knew in the area, a helicopter was borrowed from N.C. Governor Jim Hunt, and the crew covered the state visiting sites recommended by the North Carolina Film Commission.

Finally, after three days of searching, a pilot volunteered that he knew a beautiful old home in southern Alamance County, and Winther knew after the first flyover he had found the site — the F.D. Hornaday Jr. home near Snow Camp. Contacted late Sunday, the gracious Hornadays agreed to open their home to the crew.

A church across the road provided the graveyard scene although the "graves" had to be created (using Styrofoam tombstones), and Glen Raven Mills, Inc. agreed to let one of their textile plants serve as the center of the Chapin family wealth. A Rolls Royce, Jaguar, Jeep, and other specialized cars were located and borrowed.

By late Sunday night, the cast and crew had arrived in Burlington, and an 11 p.m. production meeting in the deserted lobby of the Ramada Inn brought the "Rituals" family together for the first time. I assumed everyone would know each other, but that was not the case. Like the opening day of school, the 40 or so strangers — from actors to prop men, stretched out on the floor, stairs, and lounging in the few chairs available — introduced themselves around the room.

Winther had brought this group together, a mixture of Hollywood and New York, and their loyalty to the producer was evident from the beginning.

The daily shooting schedule seemed commonplace to everyone but me. The cast would be in makeup and wardrobe at 7 a.m., 30 minutes after the crew was on location setting up equipment. Lunch would be a 30-minute break sometime between 1 o'clock and 3 p.m., and filming often continued until well after dark. Dinner was early if before 11 p.m., and a midnight production meeting would decide the next day's schedule. There was little time for play.

Even though the temperatures hovered in the upper 90s, and the crew had to dress in sweaters and jackets because of the fall showing, I never heard a complaint. Once, when a sudden shower halted filming, the crew raced to cover the cameras and equipment, then enjoyed a basketball game in the pouring rain. Other than a dressing room game of Trivial Pursuit, it was the only recreation I witnessed.

The cast and crew seemed truly appreciative of the hospitality they received on the Elon campus. When not involved in a scene, they were glad to sit for interviews with the local press, and most of the stars taped segments for an Elon College television program. The conference room in Powell Building became a makeup room, and the college made Wilkins Lounge available for the cast to rest. It became a popular place for Pflug, Markham, Patrick and the other actors to find some peace and enjoy a sandwich.

The actor creating perhaps the most excitement on campus was not involved in "Rituals". Mark LaMura, who plays Mark Dalton on ABC's "All My Children," is engaged to Andrea Moar, who plays a Chapin sibling in "Rituals". With "All My Children" on break because of ABC's Olympic coverage, LaMura — an old friend of Winther from the producer's "All My Children" days — stayed with the crew throughout their visit. With Moar moving to the West Coast set of "Rituals", it was the last opportunity the couple had together before LaMura returned to the ABC studios in New York.

College students comprise a large part of the daytime serial audience, and LaMura was recognized wherever he went. He graciously gave autographs and posed for photographs while trying to learn from Winther the production end of television.

On one occasion, LaMura and I were dispatched to a country store to get soft drinks for the crew, which was filming scenes at the country mansion. Always ready to joke, the actor persuaded a Coke truck driver making a delivery at the store to drive the huge truck onto the set to distribute free Cokes. It obviously disrupted filming. "You said you wanted a Coke," LaMura shrugged to the producer, whose rage quickly turned to laughter.

"Rituals" began syndicated television showing September 10, with plans for 30 percent of the show to be filmed on location and 70 percent shot at Telepictures' Hollywood soundstage. The cast and crew will return to the Elon College campus this fall and again next spring, if the show's ratings remain high. With the college now in full enrollment, more students will get an opportunity to see a television production company at work, and more than a few will dream of being "discovered" by Hollywood.

TUNE IN TOMORROW

"Rituals" is seen nationwide on these stations.

THREE PATRONS SHARE THE COLLEGE VISION AND CARRY THE ELON FINE ARTS CENTER CLOSER TO REALITY

It will be using the Elon College Fine Arts Center three or four times a week," says businessman David E. Pardue, who heads a nationwide estate investment group headquartered in Burlington, N.C.

Pardue is a tuba player who regularly dashes over to the college to practice with the band and to play in the Community Orchestra and the Brass Quintet. Each year he plays in five or six orchestra concerts, at least two programs by the Brass Quintet, and eight or ten other recitals or concerts for churches or community groups.

A $2 million fund-raising campaign is currently being conducted for Phase I of the fine arts center, and Pardue voices keen enthusiasm for the multi-faceted building. He has also made a substantial contribution to the building fund.

"I am proud of what the center will do for the community and area, but mainly I'm interested in what it will do for the college," Pardue says. "This facility with its recital halls, practice rooms, studios, and lecture rooms will mean that the college can attract more good, serious music students. They will benefit the whole music program. A stronger fine arts program will further strengthen the college. It will set a positive tone."

Pardue began playing in the band in the fifth grade. By the time he entered Williams High in Burlington, he was serious about trumpet and tuba, but the tuba won out as his primary instrument. He played in all-state bands, and as a senior in 1964 he was chosen for the High School Band of America which played at the New York World's Fair and toured Canada for 22 concerts.

"I went to the University of North Carolina for a degree in business administration, and I dropped out of music. I now think that was pretty stupid," he admits. "About four years ago I bought a new horn and started playing again. I went out to Elon College and took lessons with Joe Belk, the brass instructor from Hickory, and got back into playing."

"I am very busy with business and raising two children, but I find playing in the orchestra and the quintet challenging and satisfying," Pardue says. "Malvin Arlley is a demanding conductor. We work hard. Then we have a great sense of accomplishment, of working together to produce a good performance."

Pardue says that the jazz group, the Emanons, does a great job of recruiting for music and the whole college. "To combine that kind of recruiting with this new facility will improve the quality of music and of the school," he believes.

Music is not Pardue's only interest in the arts, although it is obviously his choice for participation. His contemporary home with its solarium, skylights, and inviting reception areas shows off a collection of modern paintings to advantage. A commissioned sculpture of a ballet dancer symbolizes his own and his daughter Courtney's interest in ballet. Pardue included in his new home a room with a special resilient floor for dance practice and performance.

Given the open architectural style of his home and the forte tones of the tuba, he has chosen for his practice room that can be closed off — the master bathroom!

David Pardue is one of many friends of the college and alumni who see the fine arts — music, drama, the dance, painting, printmaking, sculpture, ceramics, and the history of these arts — as a necessary ingredient of education. These friends and alumni are helping to make a dream come true. When completed, the planned Fine Arts Center will bring together the teaching, practice, performing, and library facilities that now are scattered around the campus in classrooms, studios, and an auditorium constructed years ago when student numbers totaled fewer than 400.

Today's enrollment of more than 2,700 means that major productions must be performed in the gym. What is great for basketball is a poor makeshift for opera, symphony, chorus or band. Plays must take to the boards in Whitley Auditorium or upstairs Mooney. The college has no place for an exhibition of student paintings, prints, or ceramics except for the classroom or temporary space in the library. The Priestley Collection of oil paintings, watercolors, and original prints given to the college now hangs in administration corridors, entrance halls and public offices. A well lighted, temperature-controlled and secure gallery will offer all students and the community a place to enjoy permanent and rotating art exhibitions.

One alumna who believes in strengthening the fine arts as an integral part of the liberal education offered at Elon is Isabella Walton Cannon, B.A. '24, first and only woman mayor of Raleigh (the capital city of North Carolina), perpetual volunteer and inexhaustible worker for good causes and organizations. The list of her current activities rivals that of workaholics half her age. Mrs. Cannon has made a major contribution to the Fine Arts Center, and the art gallery/board of trustees room will be named in her honor.

"I wanted to make a contribution to Elon College, and when I learned of the multi-purpose area for the art gallery, the Elon College board meetings, and for various receptions, I wanted to help on that," she says. "I felt this was a place where different interests and cross disciplines could come together."

Mrs. Cannon serves on the Board of Directors for the Humanities Foundation at North Carolina State University, where she strives to keep the humanities as an integral part of technical and professional education. She says that "history, political science, English, languages, and the arts are not adjuncts to education; they should be part of every educated person's experience, continuing through life."

Her own interest in speech and drama began in Wincoff High in Kamaoapoli, North Carolina, and continued at Elon College. Debating gave her added interest in politics and social issues. Drama carried over to her life in Raleigh where she was on the board which decided to build the Raleigh Little Theatre. She played in the first production and in 16 other plays, one at the Chapel Hill Drama Festival.

A sense of the dramatic adds color to her speeches and writings. Her biographical notes tell of the robbery of the Elon Banking and Trust Company when she, the cashier, was locked in the vault. Fortunately, she was soon able to free herself and the robbers were caught and convicted. One of her popular lectures is on Dracula, about whom she read and did research in Romania. She holds the honorary black belt in karate, awarded after she presided at a demonstration. And surely her best piece of living drama was campaigning for mayor of Raleigh as "the little gray lady in tennis shoes." Her tennis shoes proved to be running shoes, for she won and presided over the city government for two years.

While mayor, Mrs. Cannon started a rotating art exhibit for her office. She wanted to give emerging and lesser known artists the opportunity to show their works. The rotating exhibition was the basis for fine arts displays in Raleigh's new Municipal Building.

Her novel campaign was grist for the media. Major national magazines and all national newspapers ran articles as she ran in her tennis shoes. National television networks featured her. Reuters (a British news service) picked up the story for British and Continental coverage, partly because she had been born in Scotland and spent her first 12 years there. The mail and the personal friendships that developed with people around the world — especially with mayors, governors, and President and Mrs. Carter — are among her happiest memories.

Mrs. Cannon has collected fine art, chiefly Chinese, Middle Eastern, and African. She and her husband Claude M. Cannon, a Foreign Service officer (who was for many years registrar and business manager of Elon College and also served as mayor of the Town of Elon), lived in India and China; Liberia, West Africa; and Baghdad, Iraq. Her later travels have taken her to Mexico, South America, Nova Scotia, Scandinavia and the USSR, and back to Scotland many times. She is giving her collection of fine scrolls, screens, and other works of art to the North Carolina Museum of Art.

With David Pardue and Isabella Cannon, another enthusiastic supporter of the fine arts at Elon College is Alyse Smith Cooper of Burlington, leader in musical circles of the Piedmont and the state. Mrs. Cooper serves as chairman of the Elon College Presidential Board of Advisers, and in this office brings a lifetime of experience to discussions on the arts. For many years she has also served on the Board of Trustees of Duke University.

Alyse Smith attended Randolph Macon College, but appendicitis interrupted her sophomore year and she returned home to Burlington. The rest of the semester she studied piano with C. J. Velie at Elon College. Then she went to Duke and completed an A.B. in English. During this time, her love of music brought her to the Elon campus for piano, voice, organ, and harmony.

Isabella Walton Cannon '24 is an energetic arts enthusiast.

into worldwide journeys. When she graduated from Duke, her parents gave her a trip to Europe. This taste of travel developed later.

Her next step in education was taken at Teachers College, Columbia University, where she received the M.A. in English. This was during the Great Depression, and she felt fortunate to get an offer to teach at the Burlington High School. She taught, but she also practiced organ during the afternoons and piano at night. Exhaustion soon overcame ambition. Her parents suggested that she either teach or devote herself to music. She chose music and in 1933 became organist at the Front Street Methodist Church in Burlington, a position she held until 1975.

Again she returned to Elon for lessons in piano, followed by study

a look at history in the college archives

story by Chris Quad

Years ago, every house had an attic which was usually stuffed to overflowing. Most of us can remember poking around at some time or another in that wonderful haven filled with old clothes, trunks, books, photographs, odd pieces of furniture, dishes, and boxes loaded with curious knick-knacks. The attic was usually a catch-all room and the heart of the house, a silent guardian of memories.

Elon College also has an "attic," in the basement of the McEwen Library. The Elon College archives are located there, along with an odd assortment of miscellany that has accumulated over the years.

Dr. Durward T. Stokes, Elon College historian, is the unofficial authority on the Elon archives. Almost hidden behind stacks of papers, filing cabinets, and banners, is Stokes' desk, also covered with various articles.

"When anyone from the College finds something they don't know what to do with, they put it on this desk," said Stokes. "I come over here periodically to look through things, but everything is just thrown in here. It should all be organized and catalogued," he said.

Indeed, just about every available space is filled with everything from a painting of a nude to a glass jar filled with ashes. Metal shelves line the walls, stacked with old annals, catalogues, periodicals, books, photographs, and letters.

"The only thing down here in the way of organization is a metal fire-proof filing cabinet," said Stokes. "It was expensive, took a long time to get, and contains 22 items, mostly important documents I've put in there that are irreplaceable," he said.

Among these items are records of faculty proceedings from 1893-1924, a registration book dated 1890-1902, a book of student records reconstructed from the 1923 fire at Elon, and catalogues from 1897-1903.

In one corner of the small room is a box marked "crystal chandelier" put there, according to Stokes, because the College had no appropriate place for it. Another box is labeled "beveled gold leaf mirror," also there for lack of a better location.

On the floor, a box marked "old pictures" contains old photographic dry plates (plate glass negatives), and old pictures, including one, dated 1875 of the Rev. W.S. Long, W.W. Staley, and J.W. Wellons.

On another shelf is a copy of the Burlington Daily Times-News, with the headline "Dr. Danieley Installed as President of Elon College." This was written when the Elon student body numbered 1,469, and a copy of the Times-News was five cents.

"Guy R. Lambert, a librarian at Elon, set out to organize this room while he was here," said Stokes. "He straightened it up some, but died suddenly and no one has added Stokes. "What he did manage to accomplish in the short period of time he worked down here was a tremendous improvement," he said.

In Elon's "attic," memorabilia from nearly 100 years is in desperate need of cataloging and organizing.

ELON ATHLETICS

Former athletes and coach inducted into Hall of Fame

Elon College honored four former athletes and a former coach who have contributed much to the school's rich athletic heritage in a tradition-filled ceremony held during Homecoming Weekend.

Glenn Ray Ellis '74, Robert Donald Halthcox '53, Carroll Irvin Reid, Jr. '53, Lawrence John Trautwein '73, and Shirley S. "Red" Wilson were inducted into the Elon College Sports Hall of Fame in Whitley Auditorium on the Elon College campus at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 6. The four were also recognized between the first and second quarters of the football game played at Burlington Memorial Stadium that afternoon.

Glenn Ray Ellis '74

Glenn Ellis was an All-American standout at Elon College in 1973. The Eden, N.C. native was a coaches' All-Conference lineman and Greensboro Daily News Player of the Year, who gained All-District, All-State, and NAIA All-American status as well. He was a Kodak All-American, was selected to the third team of the AP Little All-America team, and was selected to play in the North-South All-Star game.

During his senior year, Ellis tied the school record for fumble recoveries in a single game, sacked the quarterback 16 times, batted down 18 passes, and was the team leader in individual tackles. Considered a team leader, Ellis received the 1973-74 Basnight Award, which is presented annually to the college's most outstanding athlete.

Upon graduation from Elon, Ellis was chosen in the 10th round of the National Football League draft by the Los Angeles Rams, then immediately acquired by the Baltimore Colts.

Ellis now lives in Eden and is head football coach, history teacher, golf coach, and athletic director at Stoneville Senior High School. He was inducted by Dwight D. "Mickey" Brown of Elon College, N.C.

Donald John Halthcox '53

"Big Don" Halthcox was Elon's first basketball player to score 1000 points during his college career. He was also excellent on defense, averaging 12.6 rebounds per game during the regular season. In 1952 he became the first Elon player to score 600 points in a season, becoming one of only 6 players in North Carolina history to score over 600 points. Halthcox was a four year letterman for Elon and was the team's leading scorer three of those years, averaging 13.1 points per game. At the end of his career, he held Elon records for career free-throws, career field goals, and career points scored.

A native of Guilford College, N.C., Halthcox played under coaches Harold Pope (1949) and "Doc" Mathis (1950-52). The 1952 team won 25 games during the season, a record that still stands today. That Elon team was also the first to score over 2000 points in one season.

Halthcox now resides in Sheridan, Montana, where he owns the Sunrider Ranch and is the owner of a construction company. He was inducted by C. Benjamin Kendall '57 of Danville, Va.

Carroll Irvin Reid, Jr. '53

Carroll Reid was a baseball and football standout at Elon College. As co-captain of the 1953 baseball team, Reid set the all-time Elon record for career RBI's with 68, breaking Walter Hobson's 11-year mark.

A native of Ashland, Va., Reid was voted All-Conference in 1952-53 and All-State in 1953. Playing under Coach Jim Mallory, he set many records before graduating, some of which still stand today. He ranked first in career runs scored (99), hits (112), RBI's (68), and stolen bases (41); second in career doubles (19); third in homers (6); and 12th in career batting average (.323). He lettered all four years.

In football, he played four years as a kicker, kick returner, and on the defense. He lettered three years and was a leader in pass interceptions, in kickoff returns, and in points scored after touchdowns.

Reid and his wife, the former Virginia Mae Poythress, reside in Smithsburg, Md. where he teaches and coaches at Smithsburg High School. He initiated the school's football and track programs, and his football squads boast an overall record of 101-49-2. Reid was inducted by Dr. Joseph E. Bryson '52 of Greensboro, N.C.

Lawrence John Trautwein '73

Larry "Traut" Trautwein was a four-year basketball starter for Elon under Coach Bill Miller. A native of Richwood, N.J., he was named to the All-Conference team three years, was twice an All-District 26 choice, and was a NAIA All-American Honorable Mention in 1973. Elon won over 20 games in each of the four seasons Trautwein was with the Fighting Christians.

At graduation, Trautwein stood as the fifth leading scorer in Elon history, and he was the 11th player to hit 1,000 career points. He accumulated a total of 1738 points in his four seasons for the Maroon and Gold, averaging 14.7 points per game. His 1446 career rebounds ranks him among Elon's all-time leaders. He averaged 12.3 rebounds for each of the 118 games he played for the Fighting Christians.

His career totals include a 49.6 percent shooting average from the floor and a 61.5 percent average from the charity stripe.

Trautwein coaches varsity basketball for Paulsboro High School in Paulsboro, N.J., where he initiated the school's basketball program in 1977. His teams won conference championships in 1982 and 1984. Trautwein lives with his wife, Diann, in Richwood, N.J. He was inducted by T. William Morningstar '64 of Burlington, N.C.

Shirley S. Wilson

"Red" Wilson, a native of Madison, N.C., ranks as one of Elon's all-time top football coaches. The Christians advanced to the National NAIA championship game in 1973 and returned to the NAIA semifinals in 1974 and 1976. Elon College was nationally ranked #2 in '73, #4 in '74, and #3 in '76. His teams garnered six conference championships (1969, 1971, 1972, 1973, 1974, and 1976).

His overall coaching record is indicative of his abilities. He won 266, lost 99, and tied 14 between 1950 and 1982, which includes impressive coaching records at high schools in North Carolina and Virginia, at Elon, and at Duke University. At Elon he was 72-34-2, finishing his tenure as the winningest coach in Elon football history.

Wilson is a member of the American Football Coaches Association and was the winner three times ('73, '74, '76) of the National Kodak "Coach of the Year" award.

After leaving Elon, Wilson served as Assistant Football Coach at Duke University before becoming Head Football Coach in 1979. He led his the first back-to-back winning records at that institution in 20 years.

Wilson is Director of Human Relations and Development, Department of Medicine, at the Duke University Medical Center. He and his wife, Katie, live in Durham, N.C. Wilson was inducted by Dr. John R. Kernode '35 of Burlington, N.C.

Ricky Jones named head baseball coach

Charles Ricky Jones has been named Elon's head baseball coach to fill the vacancy that was created when Dr. Bob McBeir resigned to pursue other professional interests.

Elon College Director of Athletics Dr. Alan White made the announcement. "We are delighted to have secured the services of Ricky Jones as our new head baseball coach at Elon College," said White. "He has demonstrated the ability to have a successful program at both the high school and collegiate levels. In so doing, he has proven himself particularly adept at recruiting quality athletes, organizing and managing highly competitive teams. I look forward to our work together here."

Jones has coached baseball and instructed in Physical Education at Ferrum College in Virginia since 1981. During that tenure, his teams compiled a 102-33 overall record, including a 39-9 record this past season and a seventh place ranking nationally.

He taught and coached at E.E. Smith High School in Fayetteville from August of 1978 to July of 1981. Prior to Smith, Jones was with the Chatham County School System as a teacher and coach for three years.

"It's a great opportunity and a step up professionally for me to join an athletic program such as Elon's," stated Jones. "I look forward to the challenge and to my association with Elon College," he added.

Jones, 30, received his A.A. degree from Sandhills Community College, N.C., and was a two-year letterman in baseball. He earned his B.A. degree in Physical Education from UNC-Wilmington in 1975 where he also earned two letters. Jones received his Master's in Physical Education at North Carolina A & T University in 1977.

Jones and his wife, Regina Zwan Jones, will reside in Burlington.

Carden predicts successful year on gridiron

Elon College is well underway with its 1984 football season and the season is looking to be a big success, due in large part to a strong nucleus returning on defense and a good recruiting year.

Head coach Macky Carden begins his first year at the helm and he is optimistic when talking about his team's chances. "We will be strong on defense," says Carden. "Royce Fentress is going to be one of the premiers players in the conference and district this year. He just is an outstanding athlete as well as an outstanding individual."

"The offense should develop into a first-rate unit. Sam Fromhart has looked very confident in early season scrimmages. I think the whole team will do well once we get into the season."

The defense is anchored by All-American candidate Royce Fentress, who is joined by an all-star cast. On the defensive line is Lewin Bullock, Grady Williams, and Ken Takko. Bob LeBlanc and Tony Settles are at the defensive ends. Russell Evans and Jack Arnold are also capable at linebacker. The secondary is headed by Al Hendricks, Kenny Angel, Jake Welbourn, and Jeff Knox.

On offense, Fromhart is under center. Also in the backfield, Jonas Davis is at tailback and Terry Patterson is looking good at fullback. The offensive line is headed by a strong group that is still not sure of its starters for the entire season. The coaching staff feels confident, however, that whoever is on the field will do a very capable job.

The receiving corps will be headed by Jay Simmons. Stanly Hairston and Chuck Ward are also promising. Jeff Lauenby is speed-demon on the outside positions.

Clay Hassard, Bullock, Angel, and Fentress are the captains on this year's squad, with Fentress serving as the head captain. Hassard was an All-District 26 performer last year as a guard. This year he will be moved to tackle but is expected to reap such laurels again. Fentress and Angel also garnered the same honors. Grady Williams was on the second team.

Fentress was the only performer to return to Elon from the All-SAC-8 team. Williams, Hassard, Fromhart, and Kilcrease were on the second team.

"We're hoping to take the conference title this year. We feel we have the team to do it," Carden says. "We have a tough schedule since we open up so late but that's just part of the game. We will be okay. If our kicking game comes around and the offensive line gives us the protection we need, and we can stay away from injuries, I hope we will be in the picture."

Soccer team set sights for play-offs again

The 1984 soccer team has already begun its season and despite a losing performance in its opener against Averett, the Fighting' Christians are showing definite signs of promise. The Christians lost 2-1 in overtime but rebounded with a strong 7-1 win over Mars Hill. Elon has also already faced defending NCAA Division III national champion UNC-Greensboro, losing in overtime.

This year's team will have a new look, even without the new transfers and freshmen. The Bakasias Field was dedicated before the Averett game. The funds for the field were part of a generous donation by the Bakasias brothers and family.

George Bakasias spoke in behalf of the family at the dedication ceremonies which included President Dr. Fred Young and Athletic Director Dr. Alan White. Head coach Steve Ballard also spoke on behalf of the soccer team to show their appreciation.

Elon is led by senior captains Joe Bartlinski and Andy Schaefer. Also back from last year's 12-5-2 team is senior forward Paul Lawson. Lawson led the team in goals scored last year. Sean Flanagan and Anthony Sherwood are other seniors on the team who will contribute to Elon's success.

"We started slowly but it was against some strong competition," Ballard said recently. "We will be okay. We have played with two fine teams already and we showed we can play with anybody. We expect to return to the district playoffs again."

As Lawson said in a television interview, "We want all wins. We should be able to compete at all levels. We have the team to do it."

Women's volleyball team full of talent

The volleyball team of head coach Karen Carden has already kicked off its season and the coach feels her 1984 edition could be strong and full of talent. "We have a strong nucleus returning and with the strength of our incoming freshmen, we should do well in the conference race," Carden said.

The spikers will be led by senior Susan Overby. Overby is a setter from Durham, N.C. Last season, she garnered All-Conference and All-District 26 honors. Joining Overby as a captain on this year's squad is senior Alicia Gaddy. Gaddy is a hitter and plays a lot taller than her listed 5-5 1/2. "Alicia is one of the strongest hitters around," Carden commented. "We'll rely on her to do a lot of the hitting."

Faith Pitts returns for another year in the Elon program. Pitts comes out of Winston-Salem Parkland High, as does Gaddy. "She has shown lots of improvement each year and will be counted on with her 6-0 height. She is excellent on defense."

The incoming freshmen crop is loaded with talent. The list is headed by highly touted Bett Mattox from Alta Vista, Va. Angie McRae will give Elon three players who played prep ball at Parkland High in Winston-Salem. Also coming in are Pam Cason and Dianne Schronce.

Christians win opener against top-ranked C-N

season opener, and first game under head coach Macky Carden, a 1965 Elon graduate. The Christians were ranked 8th going into the game, but have since advanced to number three. Linebacker and team captain Royce Fentress was voted top defensive player of the week in the NAIA nationwide as a result of his performance in the game.

'73 alum featured in Sports Illustrated

1973 Elon grad Joe West was featured in the September 24, 1984 issue of Sports Illustrated magazine. Now a major league baseball umpire, West is embarking on a singing career and has a new single out entitled, "Mamas, Don't Let Your Babies Grow up to be Umpires."

West was quarterback on the 1973 Fighting Christian football team, which was the first to play for the national championship. At last year's reunion of that team, he entertained his former teammates.

NOMINATIONS SOUGHT FOR 1985 ALUMNI AWARDS

YOUNG ALUMNUS OF THE YEAR

The award is presented to a maximum of two alumni who have been graduated for a period not to exceed fifteen years and have distinguished themselves in their professions and communities. (Alumni who graduated in 1970 or later are eligible in 1985.)

DISTINGUISHED ALUMNUS AWARD

The award is presented to a maximum of two alumni who have distinguished themselves in their professions or communities and thereby brought honor to their Alma Mater.

CITIZEN'S SERVICE AWARD

The award is presented to a maximum of two individuals (normally not alumni) who have been instrumental in the advancement of the College through the giving of their time and energy.

SERVICE AWARD

The award is presented to one organization that has been instrumental in the advancement of the college through the giving of time and energy.

Alumni who have gained prominence in business, education, the ministry, science, social service, the arts, law or politics might be nominated, but qualified nominees from other fields are also eligible for consideration. To make a nomination, complete this form and return it to:

Learning by writing

Elon leads the way with writing across the curriculum

By Nao Perkins

The students in Dr. Whitney Vanderwerff's English III class look like typical college freshmen, but the course itself is far from average. For one thing, the students write their themes on such topics as recombinant DNA, genetic engineering, and the toxic effects of environmental pollutants. In the library they do their research in journals like Science and American Naturalist. And in class, they spend more time talking with each other about their writing projects than they do with Dr. Vanderwerff.

What's going on? Writing across the curriculum, a new teaching concept that encourages the use of writing as a way of learning in all disciplines. The writing across the curriculum movement has swept across the United States, Canada and Britain in recent years, and proponents hail it as the most promising avenue to producing better student thinkers and therefore better writers. Institutions as different as Yale, the University of Texas, Michigan Technological University and many small colleges have adopted college-wide writing across the curriculum programs. Elon is the first college in the area to adopt the program on a large scale.

The students in Dr. Vanderwerff's English III class at Elon are in a writing across the curriculum experiment, a paired English-biology section. All of them are also in a section of Biology III taught by Dr. Nancy Harris. The two professors work together to plan writing assignments based on the experiments and subjects being covered in the biology class. Through the assignments the students deepen their understanding of the biology material and work on improving their writing skills as well.

The course is just one of many experiments currently being conducted at Elon as part of a three-year writing across the curriculum program under the direction of Dr. Vanderwerff, assistant professor of English and director of composition. Dr. Vanderwerff first became interested in the writing across the curriculum movement three years ago and has attended a number of national conferences and workshops on the subject.

The Elon program was launched by a two-day faculty workshop in August conducted by national writing consultant Elaine Maimon, associate vice president and professor of English at Beaver College, Glenside, Pa., and a leading proponent of the national writing across the curriculum movement. Attending the workshop were 33 faculty members representing the humanities, mathematics, science, physical education, business and the ROTC.

During the workshop the faculty learned new teaching techniques and were given dozens of suggestions of short-term writing assignments designed to encourage speculative and analytical thinking and to teach writing as a process. Maimon also shattered a few idols.

"The instructor has no responsibility to correct every error on a student's paper," she asserted. "Forget about circling the P's and Q's and get used to asking, as a matter of course, for students to look at what they're doing and rewrite."

Forget about grading everything too, Maimon advised. "In the past we have regarded every piece of student writing as a performance to be judged. Students should write more; we should grade less." Methods such as these are basics in the writing across the curriculum movement, which emphasizes writing as a means of learning. The idea is to teach students social studies by having them write about social studies, to teach them science by having them write about science and in the process to teach them to write without focusing on the teaching and writing.

Writing as a process is another notion basic to the concept. The traditional method of making an assignment, collecting the papers on the day they are due and then marking and grading them emphasizes writing as a product. The professor focuses on the product and what is wrong with it, rather than on how the student arrived at that product. Writing across the curriculum teaches writing as a process which includes such steps as exploring a topic, identifying a problem or issue, collecting and organizing data, formulating arguments or solutions, writing a rough draft, and revising, revising, revising.

Collaborative learning methods enforce the concept of writing as a process. Vanderwerff uses variations of peer review, a collaborative learning technique, at various points during the completion of a writing assignment. A typical peer review session might work like this: Students divide into pairs. Without looking at his rough draft, one student explains to the other the thesis of his paper, his main arguments, and which sources of research have been most helpful. The listener then repeats what he has heard and asks questions if necessary. Then, knowing what the writer is trying to say, the listener reads the rough draft and comments on the writer's success in conveying his argument. After discussion of strengths and needed improvements, the process is reversed. The students then use the insights they have gained in writing a final draft.

Frequent, short, ungraded writing assignments are the rule in a class which is involved in writing across the curriculum. Professors use writing assignments to encourage students to think and question, to generate discussion, to ensure understanding, and to teach thinking skills like analogy, inference and deduction. Typical assignments include brief summaries of assigned reading at the beginning of class; writing two or three questions about the class at the end of a period comparing two different sources on a critical point in the subject; a sentence-by-sentence rewriting of a difficult paragraph; writing inferences from a list of headlines; and writing one paragraph using all of the terms employed in a scientific process.

Daily journals and writing portfolios are other typical requirements. "I'm keeping a portfolio in three different classes," complained one student. "I'm doing so much writing I can hardly lug it all around."

The program is demanding on

Board seeks ways to build entire fine arts center

President Fred Young told the Elon College Board of Trustees at their annual fall meeting that it may be possible to raise the $6.5 million needed to build both phases of the proposed fine arts center. The board in turn authorized architects to complete working drawings for Phase II of the center, which includes art classrooms and an auditorium. Drawings are already completed for Phase I, the music wing.

The president's report to the Board followed a report from Dr. James B. Powell, general chairman of the PRIDE II campaign, that over $300,000 had been received or pledged toward meeting the Kresge Challenge.

Young told the trustees that if the Kresge Challenge can be met, the college will have the $2.5 million necessary to build Phase I of the center. A financial procedure known as sale-leaseback could yield another $2.5 million, he said, leaving $1.5 million which would have to come from one or more large gifts.

The architects' drawings for Phase II of the center will not be completed before June, 1985. The board will review the status of the fund-raising efforts at the March, 1985 meeting and decide what course to pursue. It is possible, said Young, that construction could begin next year.

In other matters, the board heard a report from the president on the proposed legislative strategy for securing increased state support for North Carolina students attending the state's private colleges. "In light of the tuition gap, the declining number of high school graduates and the expansion of the state system, increased state support is the most crucial issue facing Elon and other private colleges today," Young told the trustees, who will be participating in the legislative efforts.

Naomi A. Garber funds memorial scholarship

A Washington, D.C. woman has established a $25,000 scholarship at Elon College honoring her late brother.

Mrs. Naomi Allen Garber has endowed the Simeon Lee Allen Scholarship Fund. The endowment fund will provide annual financial aid for students, preferably from the Elon Home for Children.

Mr. Allen was a graduate of Elon College. Mrs. Allen lives in the Elon community, and their son, Noel Allen, a Raleigh attorney, is an Elon College alumnus. He is currently serving as first vice president of the Elon College Alumni Association.

"This memorial gift honoring the life of Mr. Allen will provide assistance to Elon College students for years to come," said Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development.

Maness scholarship funded at Elon

The W.L. and Beulah Maness

Scholarship Fund has been established at Elon College to provide assistance for worthy and needy students pursuing a career in Christian service. The scholarship is in honor of the Rev. W.L. Maness, and in memory of Beulah McNeill Maness.

W.L. Maness, 94, is a 1918 graduate of Elon College. He decided to pursue a career in the ministry, and served in this capacity for 41 years before his retirement in 1956. He served several churches after his retirement and is currently the oldest living minister in the North Carolina Conference.

Both Maness and the late Beulah McNeill Maness are natives of Moore County. Two of their five children were born during the time they were at Elon College, and since then two sons and a daughter have attended Elon.

"My mother and all her family were members of the United Church of Christ, which is affiliated with Elon College," said eldest son Dr. Paul F. Maness of Burlington. "Dad had gotten so many benefits from Elon College and the United Church of Christ, that he felt it was appropriate to set up a scholarship for future Elon students."

Rev. W.L. Maness

The Josh Brooks' legacy: help for other families

Tiny Josh Brooks' struggle for life caught the attention of millions last year, and the help — emotional and financial — came pouring in. Now his parents, June Clark Brooks '77 and Ricky Brooks '76 of Laurinburg, N.C., have formed the Josh Brooks Living Memorial Transplant Association to support other families faced with similar crises.

The association's purpose is to educate the public about the need for organ donors, to try to establish a national system for matching donors and recipients, and, most of all, to help families with children in need of transplants.

The donations the Brooks received which were not needed to pay for Josh's transplant were transferred to the association, and several fund-raising activities have been held as well.

The association thus far has given assistance to 30 families, 10 of them from North Carolina. The help has included emotional support and funds to pay transportation, lodging and meals for families who must travel great distances to hospitals.

Anyone interested in information about transplants or organ donations should write June at P.O. Box 2018, Laurinburg, N.C. 28352.

Announcing the 1985 Phonathon

We are going after Davidson and Wake Forest

After two straight record-setting years, the ELON ALUMNI now rank behind only DAVIDSON and WAKE FOREST in the state of North Carolina in the percentage of alumni who make an ANNUAL DONATION to their ALMA MATER. Two years ago ELON ranked near the bottom in the state with only 15% of its alumni making an annual gift. For 1983-84 the percentage of participation stands at 30%.

As director of ANNUAL GIVING, I have committed the college to surpass both WAKE FOREST and DAVIDSON and become the leader in North Carolina. To achieve this goal, Elon will have to gain 1,000 new alumni donors. This number was added in each of the past two years, and I am confident that if every alumnus will seriously consider supporting the college, we will add that many again this year and become number one in North Carolina.

February 11 - March 7, 1985 has been set as the date for the sixth annual ELON COLLEGE NATIONAL PHONATHON. Mark your calendar now! As has been the Elon College tradition, our student volunteers will be making calls Sunday through Thursday between the hours of 6:30 p.m. and 9:45 p.m. Selected calls will also be made on Saturday mornings throughout the Phonathon. Our student callers are already making plans for this year's "Let's beat Wake Forest and Davidson" phonathon theme. Campus organizations who plan to participate are Tau Kappa Epsilon, Sigma Pi, Kappa Alpha, Sigma Sigma, Sigma Zeta, Tau Alpha, Alpha Sigma Alpha, Phi Mu, Kappa Sigma, Black Cultural Society, ROTC, SGA, and New Area. It's really going to be something. I get excited just thinking about it.

Jimmy Talley

P.S. Persons who make gifts before January 15, 1985 will not be called to the Phonathon. Send your contribution now and save Elon the cost of the call.

Barbara Day Bass '61 wins presidential award for teaching

"I have no illusion that I am the best, but I am proud to have been selected to represent the best," Barbara Day Bass, winner of a 1984 presidential award for excellence in teaching mathematics, said recently.

A 1961 graduate of Elon College, Mrs. Bass teaches mathematics and computer science at St. Catherine's School in Richmond, Va. She is one of 104 science and mathematics teachers representing every state, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico who were selected to receive the 1984 Presidential Awards for Excellence in Science and Mathematics Teaching. The award carries with it a $5000 grant from the National Science Foundation to be used to supplement or increase the program of each teacher's school.

Mrs. Bass was nominated last year for the coveted award this year received it. Along with the other recipients she traveled to Washington in October to pick up the award and attend a five-day series of workshops, seminars, receptions and banquets. The awards were presented at the White House and the teachers had a chance to talk with the president.

"It was a wonderful, stimulating experience," she says of the week. "It is gratifying to know that teachers are being recognized for what they are contributing. The whole week's events seem to say 'you are important, what you're doing is important both for our country and the people.' Teachers work hard, and they need to hear that."

Mrs. Bass plans to use a portion of the grant which St. Catherine's will receive to buy a spectrophotometer for the school's science department. Some of the money may also be used to bring women who have achieved prominence in their fields to speak at St. Catherine's, a girls' school. In addition, she estimates she will be donating to the school at least another $5000 worth of gifts which she is receiving from the public sector as a result of the award. She has already received a computer, a modem, several software programs, a set of encyclopedias and a number of books.

Mrs. Bass joined St. Catherine's faculty in 1970 and has been chairman of the math department for about 11 years. In addition she serves as coordinator of the computer program.

After graduating from Elon in three years, she went straight into teaching. ("It was the only thing they were interviewing women for then.") She has taught at three other Virginia high schools during her 25-year teaching career and has earned a master's degree in math education from the University of Virginia.

Mrs. Bass's husband, Walter, is also an Elon alumnus, and the two have been generous in their contributions to the school. They have funded the Walter H. and Barbara Day Bass Scholarship Fund which is awarded annually to students who have financial need and a record of high academic achievement. They have also pledged $100,000 to the school through the Elon Life for Endowment program.

"Walter and I both received scholarships and loans while we were at Elon," she says. "If it hadn't been for the people who endowed those funds, we wouldn't have been able to attend. We try not to forget that."

"Besides," she adds, stating her admirable philosophy, "what you keep your nose. Only what you give away remains your own."

Two Elon alumni serve on six-man national committee

When John Sparks '50 was appointed to serve on the Insurance Trust Committee of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, he discovered that he was the second Elon College alumnus on the prestigious six-man national committee.

The committee members are selected from among the more than 215,000 members of the nationwide organization. They supervise the largest insurance trust in the world — $18 billion worth of insurance covering over 150,000 persons.

George C. Taylor '36 is the other Elon alumnus on the committee. Taylor was comptroller of the American Institute for 16 years from 1963 until 1979 when he retired. He has been an appointee to the Trust Committee for the past three years. Taylor was captain of the tennis team at Elon, a member of Kappa Psi Nu, and the college's first Rhodes scholar nominee. Since he retired, he and his wife make their home in Columbia, Tenn. They are the parents of one daughter.

Sparks is a CPA in Greensboro, N.C., where he has operated his own accounting firm for 25 years. He also served as chairman of the Board of Trustees of the North Carolina Association of Certified

George C. Taylor '36

Public Accountants.

He is married, has one child and two grandchildren, and enjoys the reputation of being an authority on old motion pictures.

Both Sparks and Taylor are looking forward to meeting each other and exchanging Elon stories when the committee next meets in New York City.

Hall's new book tells how to get on the right track

Even if I knew where I wanted to go, could I get there from here?"

Dr. Lacy G. Hall '58 says "Yes!" In his new book, Switch Track, Hall says you can learn how to "throw switches" (make choices) that will take your life in the direction you want it to go. The secret lies in making life choices that will put you on the right track.

Hall has developed a four-level model of choice-making styles: dependence on others, dependence of the facts, value/need fulfillment, and shaping your life with self-direction. "It's not one extra biscuit that makes you gain weight, it's your style of eating. Your style of making choices affects the choice you make," says Hall.

Douglas H. Cox has a map of North Carolina on which he traced with a magic marker every highway he traveled during his year and three months with the Jim Hunt for Senate campaign. The map is practically solid black.

Since August, 1983, Cox, a 1978 graduate of Elon, has been state director of the small contributors fund-raising program for the Hunt campaign. Small contributors give $25 or less, but make up 75% of all donors. The Hunt campaign relied chiefly on volunteer canvassing for small contributions, and Cox criss-crossed the state many times helping county leaders organize solicitation efforts. Approximately one-half million dollars was raised.

In addition to his degree from Elon, Cox holds a degree in political science from East Carolina University and is working on a master's degree in political science and public administration from N.C. State University. His goal is a career in politics. In January, 1983 he began working with the North Carolina Campaign Fund, a fund-raising effort for Democratic candidates. When that organization became non functional in the summer of 1983, Cox switched to the Hunt campaign. From then until the election he has worked 15-16 hours a day, weekdays and weekends — by choice.

He loved it. "Nothing is more exciting than sitting across from the governor in an airplane. I got to know him well and he is a super, personable human being. It was a great year."

Naturally Cox is disappointed with the outcome of the election. He will spend several more weeks wrapping up the campaign, writing thank-you letters to the hundreds of people he met during his travels, and closing down the office. After that he plans to finish his degree.

"I feel a little like the retiring Miss America, I suppose," he reflects. "It's been a great year, but now you have to turn it over to someone else."

Undoubtedly, politics has not heard the last of Doug Cox.

On election night, Allen Page should have been celebrating. After all his candidate for the U.S. Senate from North Carolina, Jesse Helms, was winning. But instead, Page found himself stuck on the phone until nearly 3:00 a.m. trying to monitor the vote count situation in several counties where the voting machines had broken down.

The celebration came later, however, and it was well-earned. Since May, 1983, Page had worked diligently for the Helms campaign, first with special events and then as a field representative responsible for setting up campaign organizations in 17 counties. In the process he traveled over 105,000 miles and went through three cars. Near the end of the campaign, he was working 15 hour days, six days a week.

You hear no complaints from Page, however. A native of Elon College, he has been interested in politics since high school. In the 1976 presidential campaign, he was a volunteer for Ronald Reagan. While a student at Elon, he was a precinct chairman and vice-chairman of the Alamance County Republican party. In his senior year he ran for the North Carolina House of Representatives. He graduated from Elon in 1981 with a degree in political science and history.

Page will not comment on his plans for the future, but it's hard to believe they will not include politics.

Occupational Orientation Inventory, which is widely used with people of all ages to measure career values. In his 25 years of counseling and testing experiences, he says, he has learned how surprisingly often people feel they are "stuck on the side tracks of life." High school and college students feel lost and unsure about what career to pursue, the middle-aged feel they are locked into a life of dull, meaningless routines and retired people stare blankly at endless soap operas. Hall maintains it doesn't have to be that way, and his new book tells the reader how to get on the right track psychologically.

The book is available for $8.95 at area bookstores or may be ordered from Winston Press, 430 Oak Grove, Minneapolis, MN 55403.

ALUMNI ACTIVITIES

Alumni Ski Trip Planned

The Elon College Alumni Association has reserved a block of condominiums at WINTERPLACE Ski Resort in Flat Top, West Virginia for the weekend of February 9-10, 1985. Interested parties should contact WINTERPLACE (304/787-3221) by December 14 to make reservations. Call the college's Alumni Office (919/584-2380) for additional details.

Emanons To Play For Alumni

Elon's touring jazz band, The Emanons of Elon College, will entertain at several alumni chapter gatherings beginning in January. Tentative appearances are scheduled in Virginia Beach, Richmond, Greensboro, and Charlotte. Alumni and friends of the college who live in these areas are invited to watch their mail for additional details.

Greater Atlanta Alumni Chapter

Allen Bush '68, chapter president, is currently making tentative plans to sponsor the chapter's second annual Super Bowl party on Sunday, January 20. Call him at 404/777-8397 for the details.

Triangle, N.C. Alumni Chapter

Tim and Linda Moore, both 1978 graduates, are currently reorganizing the chapter serving the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area in hopes of sponsoring a major chapter function in early 1985. Local alumni should call them at 919/469-9376 for more information.

Homecoming

Homecoming '84, the weekend of October 5-6, brought a large number of alumni and friends of Elon College back to the campus for an exciting weekend of activities for Elonites of all ages.

To kick off the weekend, the 11th Annual Alumni Golf Tournament was held on Friday at the Alamance Country Club. The 80 alumni, friends of the college and their guests enjoyed perfect golf weather. The division winners were Coy Justice (winner, men's low gross), Frank Webster '69 (1st runnerup, men's low gross), Jerry Richardson '71 (winner, men's callaway), Tim Stevenson '75 (1st runnerup, men's callaway), and Karen Wall (ladies' callaway). The winners of the "closest-to-the-hole" contests on the par 3 holes were Richard Sneed '60, Mike Ray '67, Joe Lee '68 and Cal Michaels '54.

Saturday's events began at 9 a.m. on Scott Plaza. After enjoying refreshments, a large and attentive audience filled Whitley Auditorium to watch as former Elon athletes Glenn Ellis '74, Don Heathcock '53, Larry Trautwein '73, Carroll Reid '53, and former head football coach and athletic director S.S. "Red" Wilson were inducted into the Elon College Sports Hall of Fame.

Campus radio station WSOE-FM sponsored an open house in Harper Center on Saturday morning. Former station manager Bill Zint '79, student station manager Jim Cahill '85 and current faculty adviser Gerald Gibson organized the reunion.

Following a picnic lunch held on the lawn in front of McEwen Dining Hall, the Fighting Christian football team met a strong Guilford College squad, which came away with a one-point victory. Although the Quakers won the game, the pageantry of the Homecoming show overshadowed the football score. The "Showband of the Carolinas," conducted by Jack White, performed at halftime just before U.S. Army parachutists — one carrying the Elon College flag — landed on the playing field. To climax the halftime ceremonies, Melinda Brown, a senior representing Sigma Pi fraternity, was crowned Homecoming Queen.

The highlight of the weekend was the traditional Homecoming Dance held in Rumors Lounge at the Burlington Ramada Inn. All 500 tickets were sold several days prior to Homecoming, making this the third time in as many years that the dance was a sellout.

Parents Weekend

The warm days of an extended summer gave way to a seasonally cool fall on the weekend of Parents Weekend, November 2-4.

The largest turnout of families ever to return to campus began their Parents Weekend experience on Friday evening at the annual Talent Show, produced by the Student Union Board. A packed house in Whitley Auditorium enjoyed 11 student-produced acts before the judges proclaimed senior Cathie Wright the winner of the grand prize.

On Saturday morning the families congregated in the rotunda of Alamaance Building and on Scott Plaza for registration and to purchase their tickets for the day's events. At 10 a.m. Dr. Fred Young, president, and Ronald A. Klepcyk, dean of student affairs, conducted a short program in Whitley Auditorium before adjourning the assembly to McEwen Library where the faculty was assembled by departments. Box lunches were available for pickup immediately following "Meet The Faculty" at McEwen Dining Hall.

At 2 p.m. the Elon "Fighting Christians" met a tough Newberry College squad at Burlington Memorial Stadium and came away with a 9-7 win.

A variety of Parents Weekend socials were held by several Greek organizations. Notable occasions were a cocktail party at the Gibsonville home of Camille Kivette '41 and Florence Olga Kivette Childress '37 for the parents and members of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity and a full-fledged "pig-pickin'" at the Kappa Sigma fraternity house made possible through the efforts of Dr. Roderick C. Jordan. His daughter, Julie, graduated from Elon in May.

A dance to honor the parents called the "5th Quarter Social" was held at the Alamaance Country Club to conclude the day's events. More than 500 persons enjoyed the affair, which featured music by "Haven." The hosts for the evening were Student Government Association officers Bob Moser (president), Mike Nutt (vice president), Martha Downey '84 and King White '80, director of alumni and parent programs.

After a worship service on Sunday at Elon College Community Church and a brunch in McEwen Dining Hall, a concert featuring the "Emanons of Elon College" was performed in Whitley Auditorium.

ELON ATHLETICS

Soccer season closes with playoff loss

Although Elon's soccer season ended on an unhappy note, a 3-1 playoff loss to High Point on Oct. 30, consolation prizes of post-season individual honors have been rolling in for Coach Steve Ballard and several of his players.

Ballard was named Co-Coach of the Year in the Carolinas Conference along with Catawba Coach Ralph Wager. Elon and Catawba were conference co-champions with 5-1-1 records in the league.

Ballard, Wager and Woody Gibson of High Point were selected as Tri-Coaches of the Year in District 26.

Sweeper Joe Nepay, a 5-foot-10, 170-pound junior from Monrovia, Liberia, was voted Player of the Year. In 18 games, Nepay scored seven goals and had six assists for 20 points and a 1.11 per-game average. A first-teamer on the National Junior College All-American team in 1982, Nepay is a former member of the Liberian national team. He did not play in 1983.

Nepay and senior forward Paul Lawson made both the All-District 26 and All-Conference teams. Seniors Andy Schaefer, Anthony Shurwood and Joe Bartlinski made honorable mention All-Conference.

Reflecting on the 1984 season, Ballard said, "We had a lot of talent, probably more than High Point or any other team in this league, but if you don't play to your potential every time you step on the field, you'll get beat. That's what happened against High Point."

The Fightin' Christians' 11-7-1 mark this year followed a mark of 12-5-2 in 1983.

Men's Basketball

Bill Morningstar's cagers returned to the winning column last year with a 17-11 record. And this year's returnees and recruits could bring Elon its first Carolinas Conference Championship since 1972.

Three starting seniors head the list of returners. Robert Leak, 6-6 forward from Charlotte, averaged 11.3 points per game and 6.5 rebounds per game despite missing 12 games early in the season with an ankle injury. Center Mike Allen, 6-6 230-lb., averaged 10.1 points per game and 5.3 rebounds per game in '84. Ricky Larry, 6-0 point guard, averaged 10.1 points per game, and dished out 101 assists.

Also returning are 6-7 swingman Eric Hairston and senior Jay Lee. Heading the list of signees for this year is junior Rafael Hernandez, who averaged 10.0 points per game and 8.5 rebounds per game with Davidson. Redshirt freshman Eric Blair and Bernard Torain will also join Elon.

Freshman recruits include 6-3 Chris Calton and 6-4 Jerry Russell, both of Western Guilford in Greensboro. Calton was All-Conference, All-Metro, Conference All-Tournament, and District Tournament MVP. He averaged 16.2 points per game, 8.9 rebounds per game, and shot 60 percent from the floor. Russell was All-State in three sports: football, basketball, and baseball. He averaged 18 points per game, 9.2 rebounds per game, and shot 54% from the floor.

Vincent Richardson, 6-4 guard from Newport News, Va., joins Elon after leading Homer Ferguson High School to a No. 1 ranking in the state. He averaged 15.7 points per game and 4.5 assists. Donnell Sugars, 6-2 guard from Chollito High School in Tucson, Ariz, led his team to 20-6 and 18-8 records his senior and junior years, respectively. He also garnered All-Conference while playing for Arizona's largest prep school.

Elon Women's Basketball

The Golden Girls, under the direction of Mary Jackson, are looking to get into the national playoffs. All-American candidate

Donna Trollinger will be leading the way.

Last year, Trollinger averaged 17.9 points a game in leading Elon to a 17-11 record. She was All-Conference, CIAC Co-Player of the Year, and All-District 26. She also had a team-leading 101 assists and 111 steals.

Jamie McNeeley, 5-11 forward from Icard, was also an All-Conference selection. She averaged almost 12 points a game and was third in rebounding. Cathy Jones, 6-0 center from Greensboro, returns for her senior year. She was an honorable mention choice for All-Conference. Jones hauled in 233 rebounds a year ago while shooting over 50% from the floor. She averaged 12.4.

Returning at the point will be 5-6 sophomore guard Lisa Briggs of Graham. Briggs dished out 74 assists while getting 34 steals in averaging 9.1 points per game.

Heading the list of recruits is junior transfer Theresa Sandell. The 5-5 guard from Charlottesville, Va. could push Briggs for a spot in the line-up. Lisa Hairston, 6-1 center from Eden, comes to Elon after a sparkling career in high school where she was All-Conference and the top rebounder in 1984. Greensboro's Ann Byrd, 5-5 guard, Marleen Jansen, a 6-3 freshman center from Castircum, The Netherlands, complete the list.

"We will have excellent experience and some super new talent on the floor this year," Jackson says "I am looking forward to a great year. We could win it all!"

Elon College Wrestling

Elon's wrestling program begins its second year under the direction of Jim Richardson. Richardson helped

LIONS MAUL CHRISTIANS

The Mars Hill Lions upset the Elon Fighting Christians football team 17-7 on Saturday, Nov. 17 in a game marred by seven Elon turnovers, many of which came at crucial times. The frustrating defeat cost the Christians a share of the SAC-8 crown and a chance to play in the NAIA playoffs. In the final NAIA poll, the Christians were ranked 13th nationally.

guide last year's grapplers to a second place finish in the Carolinas Conference behind powerful Pembroke State. However, things should be improved this year.

Leading the way will be Jeff May and Johnny Travis, competitors in last year's NAIA National Championship. May, 134-pound junior from Burlington, was a runner-up in the Conference Championship. Travis, 190-pound junior from Walnut Cove, finished third in the District 26 Championships.

Also returning will be junior Jimmy Ambrose. The Myrtle Beach, S.C. native was Conference Champion at 118 pounds. Ron Budd, 150-pound sophomore from Woodbury, NJ was a Conference runner-up; Jay Gros, sophomore from Alexandria, Va. was Conference runner-up at 177-pounds; Windy McCoy, 158-pound senior from Cove City, was also a Conference runner-up.

The list of newcomers is impressive and includes 20 freshmen.

Fentress named player of the year

Royce Fentress (11), blocks the ball carrier during the Guilford College game. Fentress was selected as NAIA District 26 Player of the Year. Sixteen players were named to the All-District team.

NOMINATIONS SOUGHT FOR 1985 ALUMNI AWARDS

YOUNG ALUMNUS OF THE YEAR

The award is presented to a maximum of two alumni who have been graduated for a period not to exceed fifteen years and have distinguished themselves in their professions and communities. (Alumni who graduated in 1970 or later are eligible in 1985.)

DISTINGUISHED ALUMNUS AWARD

The award is presented to a maximum of two alumni who have distinguished themselves in their professions or communities and thereby brought honor to their Alma Mater.

CITIZEN'S SERVICE AWARD

The award is presented to a maximum of two individuals (normally not alumni) who have been instrumental in the advancement of the College through the giving of their time and energy.

SERVICE AWARD

The award is presented to one organization that has been instrumental in the advancement of the college through the giving of time and energy.

Alumni who have gained prominence in business, education, the ministry, science, social service, the arts, law or politics might be nominated, but qualified nominees from other fields are also eligible for consideration. To make a nomination, complete this form and return it to:

professors and students. Dr. Vanderwerff allows, "Students are doing more writing than they have ever done before, and professors, who are already loaded with work, are being asked to try new ideas, to shift occasionally from the lecture mode to a more active, participatory classroom atmosphere."

Vanderwerff reports that response has been good, however. Nearly all the faculty members who attended the fall workshop are experimenting with new writing techniques in their classes, and many are elated with the results. Vanderwerff keeps in close contact with all participating faculty, works with anyone who needs help, and tries to keep participants informed about what others are doing. Her future plans for the program include other workshops by nationally known experts, a spring writing fair in which participating faculty describe their successful writing assignments, and a broadening of the network to include other faculty members. She will also be encouraging faculty members who develop "writing as a means of learning" techniques to deliver papers at national conferences and submit them to appropriate journals.

The Elon writing across the curriculum program has already attracted the attention of other colleges. The Piedmont Independent Colleges Association of North Carolina, of which Elon is a member, has adopted writing across the curriculum as a project for the year. Dr. Vanderwerff will spearhead the effort. In November she held an initial workshop for the writing directors of the other five colleges. In January Elon will host a workshop for the directors and 30 key faculty members from their institutions.

Vanderwerff is enthusiastic about writing across the curriculum and its future. "Many of the critics of our educational process today say that increasing student involvement in learning is essential. Students have been just sitting in class, listening to the lecture and playing it back on the exams, quickly forgetting anything they have learned."

"Writing across the curriculum gets students involved. It forces them to think and they become better writers in the process. What we're really talking about here is creative teaching, creative learning and students respond to that."

WOULD A GIFT OF CLOSELY HELD STOCK BE RIGHT FOR YOU?

We are proud of our graduates in all walks of life but we want to call attention to the increasing number who are successful in their own businesses.

If you are one of these, you may find that GIVING CLOSELY HELD STOCK is one of the best ways to help Elon.

If the gift is properly transacted, the donor obtains a tax deduction for fair market value of stock without realizing either taxable income or capital gain.

EXAMPLE

We will be glad to give you information about this charitable giving concept. Write today to:

Brank Proffitt
Director of Planned Giving
Elon College, Campus Box 2116
Elon College, N.C. 27244

Please send me free information on how to make a tax deductible gift of closely held stock. I understand that there is no obligation.

Holland Family Makes $100,000 Gift to Elon

Members of the family of the late Shirley Thomas Holland of Windsor, Va., have pledged $100,000 to Elon College in memory of their husband and father who served for more than 30 years on the college's board of trustees.

The gift comes as part of the college's $5.7 million PRIDE II campaign. In recognition of the gift, the Elon Board of Trustees executive committee has voted to name the president's home "Holland House."

Those of the Holland family participating in the memorial gift are Mrs. Holland and sons, Dr. Clarence A. Holland of Virginia Beach, Va.; Dr. William E. Holland of Middlethorpe, Va., and Sen. Richard J. Holland of Windsor. The funds will be used for capital unrestricted expenditures as a part of the PRIDE II campaign.

Shirley T. Holland

Funds raised in the campaign will go to the college's endowment scholarships and physical plant improvements including a new fine arts classroom building.

The late Mr. Holland served as a trustee emeritus of the college from 1946 until the time of his death in May 1983. He was a student at the college prior to World War I. Mr. Holland was a leading businessman in Windsor. He helped organize the Farmers Bank of Windsor in 1919 and served as chief executive until 1968 when his son, Richard J. Holland, was elected president. The elder Holland then continued to serve as chairman of the bank's board of directors. He also was president of the Shirley T. Holland Insurance Agency and served on the Windsor Town Council.

Mr. Holland was veteran of two decades of service in the Virginia House of Delegates, representing Isle of Wight and Nansemond counties and Suffolk in the legislature. He was chairman of the House Insurance and Banking Committee and sponsored a number of major banking bills during his tenure.

He also introduced the bill that created the Virginia Industrial Development Corp. and served as secretary and director of the corporation. Another of his bills enables state employees, including teachers, to retire at age 60.

After leaving the legislature in 1966, Mr. Holland was appointed by Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. to do legislative liaison work during the General Assembly sessions. He was credited by Governor Godwin with being instrumental in upgrading public education, creating the community college system and in getting the state retail sales tax bill passed.

"Few persons have given more of themselves to Elon College than Shirley Holland," said President Fred Young. "In addition to his leadership, he had the longest record of annual giving to the college, having contributed every year since records were kept. We are pleased to have this visible tribute to Shirley Holland on the Elon Campus."

Elon Tuition Remains Low

While the cost of a private college education continues to increase in North Carolina, Elon College has managed to keep tuition low. A recent comparison among 18 similar colleges and universities in N.C. shows Elon to be third from the bottom in tuition and fees.

The figures come from a recent issue of "The Chronicle of Higher Education" and were collected by the College Board for a survey, "The College Cost Book, 1984-85." Most colleges and universities in the state participated in the survey.

Elon's tuition and fees of $3,290 for the 1984-85 school year ranked just above those of two other N.C. colleges when compared with private, coeducational, four-year, predominantly white institutions. Fifteen similar colleges and universities in the state charged higher tuition and fees than Elon.

The figures range from a low of $2,800 to a high of $7,681. Elon's cost of $3,290 is well below the average cost of $4,442. All North Carolina residents receive a $750 legislative tuition grant, reducing Elon's tuition for in-state students to $2,540.

Elon College President Fred Young said the college maintains a low tuition through two primary programs - a cost consciousness on the part of all Elon employees and an aggressive fund-raising plan.

"First, and most important, Elon College has maintained a balanced budget for over 20 years," Young said, "by making a conscientious effort to keep expenses as low as possible. Our faculty and staff work hard to make Elon affordable."

Smile when you say Elon! The 1985 Elon Phonathon was a success as alumni, parents and friends made pledges in record numbers. Alumni responded enthusiastically to the "Let's Beat Davidson and Wake Forest Challenge," and, if all pledges are paid, Elon may well become the leader among the state's private colleges in alumni participation. Pledges are due May 1, 1985.

"Second, Elon's Development Office raises over $3 million a year, about a fourth of the $12 million budget at the college. These outside funds, from alumni, businesses and other groups, allow students to receive a college education for about three-fourths of the actual cost," Young noted.

Contributions to the college have made possible several improvements in the beautification of the 150-acre campus in the past few years. Most of these projects have been completed through the generosity of individuals in the Elon College community and alumni from throughout the nation.

"We have found that an environment conducive to learning attracts students and builds pride in the institution," Young said.

Elon's successes have not been without problems. With 2,800 students, the coeducational college has the third largest private undergraduate enrollment in the state. The growth has created overcrowding, and six new residence halls have been constructed in the past three years, a time when other colleges are struggling to maintain enrollments.

Even with the new dorms, the college began the year with dozens of students in a local motel, although most overcrowding in rooms was eliminated.

As word of Elon's academic reputation and low tuition spreads, the number of applications increases. In Virginia, for instance, where Elon's academic reputation and low costs are well known among high school students, more students who left the state attended Elon than any other college in the nation.

Earlier this year, the admission requirements were increased for the first time in several years, and already applications for next year are ahead at the college, which has rejected more students for next year than it had this time last year.

"We're not complaining," Young pointed out. "These are problems many schools would like to have. But they are not without a cost."

A part of that cost is a faculty that is overburdened and some classes larger than school officials would like.

"Still, we find on surveys that 97 percent of our graduates list a close mentor relationship with a faculty member as the thing they like best about Elon College. We're very proud of that, and we want to continue offering personalized attention at a reasonable price."

Duncans Endow Scholarship

William H. and Kathryn M. Duncan, of Greensboro, N.C., have established an endowed scholarship at Elon College to aid visually-impaired students. The Duncan Scholarship Fund will be restricted to deserving students who are legally blind or are low vision patients.

New Majors Added

Elon Enters Television Age

A new major in Mass Communication, which will prepare students for careers in radio and television, has been added to the Elon College curriculum. The faculty approved the new program in February and at the same time approved a major in Journalism to replace the existing English/Journalism major.

The new Mass Communication major is made possible by the recent addition of a television production studio on the first floor of Mooney Building and the purchase of television equipment. The college already has a campus radio station, WSOE-FM, which was increased to 500 watts last year.

According to Dr. Chris White, vice president for academic and student affairs, Elon first began building a television program in the summer of 1984 after Cablevision of Alamance approached the college with a proposal to lay cable for an internal campus television channel and asking the college to provide programming for the local access cablevision channel. At that time W. Ray Johnson was hired as coordinator of television services and communication, and basic television equipment was added.

Beginning in the fall semester Johnson and a group of interested students produced a weekly cablevision show entitled "Elon in Review" which is shown over the Alamance and Guilford county local access channels. In January, more equipment was purchased and the Mooney videotaping classroom was converted into a television production studio. Johnson and Gerald Gibson, assistant professor of communications, are currently using the studio to teach Elon's first production course.

"Elon now has video facilities equivalent to that of most small television studios and many larger institutions," said Johnson. "And we have some added advantages."

"At most larger universities the students never get to touch the sophisticated equipment. That privilege is reserved for graduate students and professors only. Our students will get to use everything."

"Also, in most other schools, even in graduate programs, the tapes that are created are never seen by anyone other than the class and the professor. We will have the ability to broadcast live from the studio, Whitley Auditorium, Alumni Gymnasium and the new fine arts center, and our programs will actually be seen by an audience either over the campus channel or the local access channel."

Mr. Meiselman, a native of Fayetteville who has lived in Charlotte most of his life, is a graduate of the Wharton School of Business of the University of Pennsylvania. His wife Jenny is a graduate of Duke University with a master's degree and a doctorate from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is a licensed practicing psychologist. The couple has two children.

"Loyal alumni like Bill Maness and generous benefactors like Ira Meiselman are two of the chief reasons Elon can continually upgrade the quality of its program," said President Fred Young. "We are grateful to both these men for this gift."

Three alumni for Elon: Dr. Jo Watts Williams '55, vice president for development at Elon, accepts a Northwestern Bank gift of $10,000 for the new fine arts center from Walt Jennette '66, left, senior vice president, trust division, and Bob Skinner '60, executive vice president.

Francis Named To Dean's Post

Dr. Gerald L. Francis, former professor of mathematics, has been named dean of academic affairs at Elon College.

Dr. Francis has served as associate dean of academic affairs since June, 1983. As dean he will be responsible to the vice president for academic and student affairs for the supervision and development of the academic program of the college.

"Dr. Francis has done an excellent job as professor, department chairman, and associate dean," said Vice President Chris White. "He has tremendous support from the faculty and I am convinced that this appointment will be a positive step for Elon College."

Dr. Francis, a native of the Washington, D.C. area, graduated from Appalachian State University. He received his master's degree from ASU and his Ph.D. degree from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Before joining the Elon faculty in 1974, Dr. Francis taught in the Virginia public school system and at ASU. From 1978-84 he served as chairman of the Elon Math Department and was instrumental in the formation of the Computer Information Science Program.

BI Foundation Gives To PRIDE

Burlington Industries Foundation has pledged $50,000 to the Elon College PRIDE II Campaign, college officials have announced. The funds will be used toward the construction of the proposed fine arts center.

"We are cognizant of the fine work being done at Elon and the large number of employees' children who have benefited from the college and its services over recent years," said Park R. Davidson, executive director of the foundation.

The fine arts center will be constructed on Williamston Avenue near the site of the present track. A new all-weather track and soccer field have been built on the northern end of the campus near the Koury Field House.

"This grant from the Burlington Industries Foundation will go a long way towards helping Elon College provide this needed addition to our fine arts program," Elon College President Fred Young said. "We are grateful for the sense of community needs the Burlington Industries Foundation has recognized in making this substantial gift."

Cytotechnology Gift Received

Hoffmann-La Roche, a major research-oriented health care company, has given $3,500 to Elon College, which will go directly toward the Cytotechnology Program.

The Cytotechnology Program at Elon offers both bachelor and associate degrees in cooperation with Roche Biomedical Laboratories, Inc. of Burlington, a subsidiary of Hoffmann-La Roche. The program is designed to meet the needs of students preparing for positions as cytotechnologists in hospitals, clinics, commercial laboratories, and private physicians' laboratories. The work of seniors in the program is done primarily at Roche Biomedical Laboratories in Burlington.

"On behalf of all of us associated with Elon College, I would like to thank Hoffmann-La Roche for their generous gift," said Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development at Elon.

Meiselman Gives Land To Elon

A Charlotte businessman has contributed a gift of real estate appraised at $235,000 to the Elon College PRIDE II campaign. The donation came as a result of a suggestion by an alumnus living in Jacksonville, Fla.

The businessman who made the gift, one of the major donations to the Elon PRIDE II campaign, is Ira S. Meiselman, 42-year-old president of Eastern Federal Corp. Eastern Federal operates approximately 100 theaters in the southeastern United States.

The Elon alumnus who influenced Mr. Meiselman to make the gift is William H. Maness, class of 1938, and an attorney and partner in the firm of Maness and Kachergus of Jacksonville, Fla.

"We have identified a number of land parcels over the last few years that we felt would make suitable gifts," Mr. Meiselman explained. "One of these was the site in Jacksonville. Our firm has been represented by Bill Maness over a period of years. When discussion arose concerning several parcels of land, including the one in Jacksonville, and possible recipients were mentioned, including the City of Jacksonville, Bill Maness lobbied for Elon in a friendly but persistent manner. We are pleased to make the donation to Elon."

CONFIDENCE OF THE PEOPLE

The Jewel in His Crown

From mayor of Winton, N.C. to Secretary of State, Thad Eure, chairman of Elon Board of Trustees, has been in elective office for 62 years - a U.S. record

By Mary Ellen Priestley

Thad Eure has been chairman of the Elon College Board of Trustees since 1955

The young boy walked with his father through the corridors of the state capitol in Raleigh. If memory is correct, the year was about 1913, and the pair had come by train from Gates County to see the sights, the first glimpse of the city for the boy. The highlight of the tour was the capitol, for the father admired and respected the elected government officials. He was showing his eldest child where these great men worked for the people of North Carolina.

In those days state officials, from the governor down, received their constituents, heard their problems or suggestions, and talked with them. As the boy and his father walked along the halls of the capitol, the boy saw "Governor" on one door, "Lt. Governor" on the next, "Secretary of State" on another, but all the doors were closed. He longed to see inside, to see these respected persons, but his father had no reason to knock on the doors, and they walked on. This experience impressed the boy. Why were the doors shut? What went on behind them?

At the end of the day, a foot-weary Tazewell Eure and his son Thad returned to the Gates County farm in eastern North Carolina, not far from the Virginia line. Tazewell Eure, an only child, had inherited the farm from his father, ownership by the family going back to an original land grant.

Thad had gone to a one-room, one-teacher school, trudging through all kinds of weather for the six-month school terms. He carried a tin lunch bucket holding a piece of side-meat, a sweet potato and a cold biscuit. During his six month vacations, he worked on his father's farm. For high school, he walked three miles to and from Gatesville, the county seat, for four years, 1913-1917. Here he studied, played football and thought about what he was going to do.

"I never thought of anything but practicing law," Thad Eure says. "So my father said I should go to the University in Chapel Hill where there was a law school. I'm satisfied that if Elon College had had one law book, he would have sent me there, for Elon College was a part of our family's life always. My grandfathers on both sides were devoted to Elon. An aunt of mine went there, and later my sister and two brothers, and four of my grandchildren."

Thad Eure attended the University of North Carolina two years for general studies and pre-law and two years for law. He traveled back and forth from home to university by train. One day as he returned to Chapel Hill, he met pretty Minta Banks, on her way back to St. Mary's College in Raleigh.

"No, I didn't visit her at St. Mary's," he recalls with a chuckle. "A man couldn't get inside the door at a girl's school in those days, we did write letters. And I saw her in Winston, her home in Hertford County about nine miles from our farm."

After graduation from law school, Eure remembers he did not wish to go too far from his father's garden and smokehouse, for there were hard times in the early 1920's. He happened to find space for a desk at a law office in Winston, however, and set out by mule cart for Winston with a desk, some books and clothing. When he reached the bank of the Chowan River, he had to pull the raft-type ferry across the river. Then he made his way to the office.

For the little things I did in my practice that first year, I was most often paid in hams, meat, vegetables from gardens or fish from the river," Eure says. "You may find this hard to believe now, but for the first year my cash receipts totaled less than $100. But I stuck it out."

A friendly, tall young lawyer who liked to talk with the residents of his new hometown, Eure decided to enter the 1923 race for mayor of Winston. He won. He was also chosen Hertford County attorney and was given an office in the courthouse.

Eure was seeing Minta Banks, and he knew that he wanted to marry her. But he had vowed that he would not marry until he was 25 years of age. "Minta says I am stubborn," he adds, but did agree to the first possible day, November 15, 1924, his 25th birthday! They were married in Winston.

Eure served as mayor of Winston until 1928 and county attorney until 1931. In the meantime, in 1929 he was elected to the N.C. House of Representatives. He was named principal clerk of the house for sessions of 1931, 1933, 1935 and the extra session in 1936. Already active in the Democratic Party, he was chosen Presidential elector for the First District, North Carolina, in 1932.

In 1936 Eure threw his hat into the ring for the office of secretary of state. He won and has won in every election since, through November 1984, for four-year terms. And so he is into his 49th year as secretary of state and his 62nd year of continuous elective office. According to the Council of State Governments, Secretary Eure's record tops all national records for longevity in elective office.

What is this man's secret for successful re-election? There are no secrets, he says, but he adds that certain events and persons taught him valuable lessons.

"I'll remember always that first trip to the capital with my father when I never saw an open door. It made an impression on me, that when I was elected secretary of state, I took the namelap off my office door and attached it to the inside and left the door open. With the door open, a person entering can see whose office this is and can see into the office. For 48 years—now into the 49th—no person has seen my door closed during office hours."

"I have served with 13 consecutive governors of North Carolina. I recall one governor's visit to my office. He came in, walked to a chair and started to sit. Just before hitting the bottom of the chair, he stood and walked to the door, took the doorknob, and I said, 'I've been here several years and that door has stayed open. Please, let's not close it now. If we must talk behind closed doors, could we go to your office?' The governor left the door open and came back to talk.

"Don't think others don't know about that open door," Eure continues. "This policy led to a related one. No secretary of mine ever asks, 'Who's calling?' when a telephone caller does not identify himself or herself. I will not permit that. You know the main purpose of asking is so you can decide whether you'll talk or not. I will talk to them. And no secretary brings me a calling card from a visitor. If a person wants to see me, and I am in my office, I see him regardless of his station in life. This policy has stood me in good stead through the years."

"A person who gave me valuable information was Governor Clyde R. Hoey. He was elected governor the same year I became secretary of state. This man looked the part of a statesman; he dressed the part, and he knew how to handle people and address the issues. In those days people came to see the governor and they saw him."

Eure recalls a revealing incident when a group of Gates County citizens thought they had an answer to a problem. They made appointment to see Governor Hoey. Before they visited the governor they told him why they had come to Raleigh. As they left for their appointment, Eure suggested they drop in before they left for home to let him know how the governor had taken their ideas.

"They did come by and all sat down," Eure says. "I asked them how things went. One person looked around at the rest, and then he said, 'Governor Hoey is one of the finest men we ever saw. He's a good man, too. You know, he has a lot of problems, and he's doing the best he can.' So they had not even mentioned why they had come. They all looked satisfied. They smiled, and they left."

"Now Governor Hoey knew what they were coming to see him about. He also knew he couldn't do anything. But he was a man who could play quarterback, call the plays, and run the ball. He understood people," Eure concludes.

Another policy that has helped maintain Eure's popular support, he believes, has been his attitude toward school children. When so many public officials do not want to be bothered with noisy, questioning, nosy children, Eure has always welcomed them. He invites them into his office, shakes their hands, asks about their visit to Raleigh and their hometowns. Then the last thing he says to them is "Remember me to your papas and mamas," and he says, "They've been doing that through the years."

Does the secretary spend much time campaigning for re-election? "Oh, yes," he says. "One friend said I start before sunrise the morning after election and never stop! I've never spent much money on getting elected though."

Today Eure presides over the Department of the Secretary of State with five divisions for its multitude of responsibilities. When he was elected in 1936, he headed a Department of State with seven members. In the first full year, 1937, for example, they issued charters to about 700 business corporations. In 1984, with 53 employees, the department issued more than 12,000 charters.

When he began as secretary, the department served as custodian of the state constitution and all the laws enacted. He was a member of the Council of State, he attested documents signed by the governor and the use of the great seal of the state, as well as issuing charters to businesses. The divisions of the department today are Publications, Corporations, Securities, Uniform Commercial Code and General Administration.

"It is interesting the way I found my deputy in the Uniform Commercial Code Division," says Eure. "I was at the Elon College graduation in 1970, sitting on the platform when a young man graduate attracted my attention. His name was Clyde M. Moore. After the ceremony I tried to find him in the crowd but couldn't, and so I telephoned him and offered him a job. He accepted. That young man had no vacation after graduation. Today he is in charge of the UCC Division."

Eure likes best those parts of his work that bring him into contact with people. Administering the oath of office, as for highway patrolmen and members of the general assembly, give him opportunities to meet a wide range of North Carolina people. Recently, he swore in the new commander of the highway patrol, and at the ceremony he noted that he had administered the oath of office to this officer at every promotion in his career. The same was true of the second officer in command.

Added to Thad Eure's numerous activities has been his service as a member of the Elon College Board of Trustees for 43 years and its chairman for 30. He has served during the presidencies of L.E. Smith, Earl Daniel, and Fred Young. With extensive family ties to the college and his own long and devoted service, he thinks now of its future.

"One thing worrying me is all independent college or university administrations is financing. The cuts in federal funds to students and institutions as well as the coming strain on state budgets makes financing more difficult. States are receiving added responsibilities and less funding to help carry out these responsibilities."

Eure thinks that Elon College is fortunate to have Fred Young as president of the North Carolina Association of Independent Colleges and Universities. "He enjoys a fine position among the state's institutions of higher learning, and he has given a lot to the association. North Carolina owes much to its independent colleges, and the state couldn't make it without them, couldn't pay for all the buildings, equipment, services and facilities they represent in order to educate qualified people. That's what the state would be required by law to do if we didn't have these independent schools."

As an active Democrat, Thad Eure was keynote speaker at the 1950 Democratic state convention. He served as its permanent chairman for the 1962, 1978 and 1982 state conventions. He still votes in Winston whose district named him Presidential elector in 1932.

Is the Democratic Party in North Carolina in disarray? No, he says, although it did suffer the biggest blow in his lifetime last fall, losing races for the U.S. Senate, governor, and two Congressmen. "The Democratic Party has always bounced back, and it will again. The party will be renewed rapidly, and the results will be seen in the next election," Eure says with the assurance of an elder statesman.

Thad Eure has come to be known by two personal trademarks—his red bow tie and his green ink pen. "I can't remember ever wearing a four-in-one tie," he says. "Well, maybe once. When I was at the Sir Walter Raleigh Hotel one day before the election, a man from Scotland County came up and said, 'Eure, my constituents won't vote for you if you wear that fool tie. Here, put this one on.' And he held a four-in-one tie around my neck while his friend took a picture of me."

"The trouble is that I can't find these bow ties in shops. My daughter Armetia (Mrs. Norman Black) has a friend who makes them and Armetia gives me a supply at Christmas."

Using green ink to sign his name on documents also began back when everyone used a fountain pen filled from a bottle of ink. One governor's secretary estimated that then, given a governor in four years executes about 50,000 official documents and all are attested by the secretary of state. Eure would have used more than five gallons of the green liquid just in signing his name!

Secretary Eure wears a hat while most of America goes hatless. He tops off his attire in the cold months with a felt hat. In the spring he dons a straw hat. "My father always started wearing his hard-straw sailor on April 5th, his birthday, as he went into the village of Eure or Eure's Station where my father's uncle had a store and the Atlantic Coast freight trains went through."

Last summer Thad and Minta Eure moved into their Raleigh home of 39 years to a pleasant one-story house with solarium and deck facing the woods. "We hated to give up our home, but Mrs. Eure has arthritis, Eure says, "and we needed to have a one-story house. Here on this quiet road we are close to Thad's 'home.'"

Thad Eure has been given numerous awards, citations, and accolades for his distinguished public service, but he takes greatest pride in the confidence people have shown him through re-elections for 62 years. This is the jewel in his crown.

BOUND TO BE THE BEST

Everybody's talking about educational excellence, but principal Wilma Parrish, Elon '57, is doing something about it. In a recent study, her middle school was named one of the top four in the nation.

By Mary Owens Fitzgerald

Amid squeals of delight the master of ceremonies at Western Middle School fervently announces, "Our next contestant is that lovely songbird, our very own principal, Mrs. Wilma Brown Parrish, bringing you 'The Flivver Song.'"

*Will you love me when my spark plugs have been tuned
And my inner tubes have lost their self-respect
When my radiator is leaking and my fenders are squeaking
Will you love me when my flivver is a wreck?"*

intones Wilma Parrish to the audience's delight.

Bedecked in her bright flapper costume, comfortable and at ease as a leading contestant on the Faculty Gong Show, Mrs. Parrish is an enthusiastic educator who knows that learning can and should be fun. Laughter, rewards, individual attention and mutual respect are a few of the components that make learning at Western Middle School in Alamance County, North Carolina, vital and nationally recognized. The creative force shaping this school into an extraordinary environment for learning is Wilma Brown Parrish, Elon '57.

The selection of Western Middle School in 1980 as one of the four outstanding schools in the nation for Joan Lipsitt's study, Successful Schools for Young Adolescents, is perhaps the most significant recognition of Mrs. Parrish's achievements. Mrs. Lipsitt, director of the Center for Early Adolescence at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill examines four effective and successful middle schools that foster healthy social development and academic achievement. Western Middle appears in Lipsitt's study as "Proud Country."

Born in 1922 to Olivia and Billy Brown, Wilma Brown finished Burlington High School in 1941 and married William E. Parrish in 1947. Shortly thereafter, the young couple bought a small home and invited her mother to live with them. A son, Lewis, and a daughter, Betty, were born and the years passed for Mrs. Parrish in the role of the traditional homemaker.

Fourteen years after finishing high school, Mrs. Parrish was asked to substitute for Betty's first grade teacher at Elon Elementary School. She delighted the children with a Christmas tale, stories and songs woven into their academic work. The principal, Dr. Hill, was so impressed with this natural born teacher he offered a job without hesitation, only to discover that her formal education ended with high school.

Determined to see her in the classroom, Dr. Hill pressured Mrs. Parrish to keep an appointment with the registrar at Elon College. She left the office slightly dazed, for she found herself enrolled to begin classes immediately.

Mrs. Parrish's determination took her soaring through music classes at Elon, and she completed the course work in three years. "Elon was good to me," she reminisces. She played the piano and worked in the student store to help with expenses. Her husband worked a second job. She majored in English and gravitated toward drama, art and music courses that complemented her natural talents and interests. Though a wife and mother, she was active on campus as a day student, served her sorority as president (wears her sorority pin in her lapel to this day) and participated in Drama Club activities.

At grad school, Mrs. Parrish landed only two drama courses for a double major. She plays the piano for pleasure and entertainment and readily admits, "I'm a ham." Coupled with her gift to make each student realize how special he is, the talents inherited from her mother provided the raw materials necessary for a superb teacher.

After eleven years at a teacher at Elon Elementary School, Mrs. Parrish was offered principalship at South Mebane Elementary School. Two and a half years later, she became principal at Altamahaw-Osage Elementary School. One of the most remarkable incidents in the Parrish's life occurred during this period. Grandparents themselves, they "adopted" a son.

Jimmy first appeared in Mrs. Parrish's day class at Altamahaw-Osage the day Social Services enrolled a curly-headed little fellow shrinking down into the scruffy fur collar on his worn grey coat. Fear and anxiety filled his clear blue eyes. Mrs. Parrish's gentle but firm hug dispelled his fears. Warm and relaxed, Jimmy eased into her heart and life. The bond between them grew.

However, in November 1972, Social Services planned to place Jimmy in a home out-of-state. Aware that he had been in eight foster homes in his brief nine years, Mrs. Parrish and her husband went to court, challenged Social Services on April 27, 1973, won the custody battle for Jimmy.

In 1978 Elon Elementary and Altamahaw-Osage merged into Western Middle School and Mrs. Parrish was appointed principal. She participated in the original planning, worked with architects, the School Board and educational committees to achieve a setting that would stimulate and invite learning. Today, six years later, the building is spicily, with only gentle signs of wear.

Nestled among the landscaped beds of azaleas and hollies is the plaque denoting Western Middle as the recipient of the Alamance Beautification Special Schools Pride Award. How are such extras funded? "Money is not a problem," comments Mrs. Parrish. Her willingness to solve a problem with her own energy and elbow grease as well as personal funds is inspirational to those around her. The entire community has been infused with a spirit of pride for Western Middle School. As one colleague noted, "Mrs. Parrish takes her resources and makes good when others only make tin."

Though Mrs. Parrish is completely in charge of her school, each of her teachers knows she is approachable, that they have freedom to function in the style best suited to them.

The curriculum is interdisciplinary and built around varied themes. Staff development is a priority. Developmental activities are a priority. Field trips include fascinating workbooks that incorporate fun into the academic requirements. Above all, basics are a priority: "Don't interrupt the basics!" Two block periods provide uninterrupted time for academic basics daily.

Undergirding all Mrs. Parrish's natural talent is a sound philosophy of education developed during her years at Elon and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro where she earned her Master's Degree in education in 1963. Deeply etched into her philosophy are these key words: Goals, organization and flexibility.

How does one account for Western Middle's success? Lipsitt quotes Mrs. Parrish as saying, "Anyone can do what we did with a united faculty, complete readiness on day one, and constant questioning: 'How can we be the best? How can we make it tonight?'"

Since the publication of Successful Schools for Young Adolescents, requests to speak have come steadily into Mrs. Parrish's office. Though she enthusiastically shares her concepts about adolescent education, the misses the time with her students and faculty. That is where her heart is, and that is what she loves; the interaction with her students. She knows them all by name. She loves them each for who they are. She taught James Turner at Elon Elementary. His son Rick is now at Western Middle. James says Mrs. Parrish is the "finest woman I've ever known. She likes her kids and takes time with them." Rick echoes his dad's remarks with "she's always your friend."

The greatest reward for Mrs. Parrish is the confidence and trust of her students. "Seeing the children build a good self-image and succeed" is her way of knowing that she has done her job, and done it well.

Mrs. Parrish cites lack of time as the most serious problem. "There just isn't time to do everything," she muses. "Maybe in retirement there will be time...time to do some writing, to edit my late mother's poetry."

For someone as vital and vigorous as Wilma Brown Parrish, retirement seems remote. It is inconceivable that her spark plugs would ever rust if her windshild wipers shed bitter tears. But from those whose lives she has touched, there is a resounding "YES" when she asks, "Will you still love me when my flivver is a wreck!"

John Sparks a man who knows movies

By Jim Schlosser

If you like movies, you'll love John Sparks.

His name doesn't appear on a movie marquee, only on a small directory in the lobby of the Green Valley Office Building.

He's a certified public accountant, age 60, a grandfather. In one corner of his office is a bookcase filled with such tomes as "Federal Taxes Affecting Real Estate," "Federal Income Gift and Estate Taxation" and "Tax Planning for Executive Compensation."

Sparks walks over to the bookcase, fishes around and pulls out "Dictionary of Film."

He was having trouble remembering 1969's movie of the year. He thought it was "The Graduate," but, no, the Dustin Hoffman classic was released in 1967 and was passed over for the top award that year by Rod Steiger's "In the Heat of the Night."

Ah, "Midnight Cowboy" - that's what won in 1969.

Such slips are rare for Sparks. Name any movie and he ticks off the year it was made, who starred, how many, if any, Academy Awards it won, and lots of other facts, figures and fascinating details.

Who is the only actor to win two Academy Awards back-to-back? Stumped? Stumped? Sparks isn't.

Not only does Sparks know his movies, but he can even tell the theaters he munched popcorn in while watching them.

Some examples:

"Mutiny on the Bounty" - "I caught that one at the Paramount in Burlington in 1935. It was voted the best movie in 1935. Three actors - Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone - all were nominated for the Academy Award. Victor McLaglen got it instead for 'The Informer.'"

"Gone With The Wind" - "It opened in Greensboro on Feb. 12, 1940, at the National Theatre. I remember that because my brother and I got confused and came over from Burlington a week early to see the movie. So we went back to Burlington and saw a film there."

"Which one?"
"It was 'Arizona' with William Holden and Jean Arthur. We saw it at the State Theatre. I liked it, my brother didn't. I finally saw 'Gone With The Wind' later, at the State."
"Manhattan Melodrama" - "I saw that in 1935 at the National in Greensboro. That was the movie John Dillinger had just left in Chicago when he was shot by the FBI. The movie starred Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and William Powell."

Sparks' favorite year for movies was 1939.

"I can sit right here and name 10 classics made that year," he says.

He winds up naming 12: "Destiny Rides Again," "Gone With The Wind," "Gunga Din," "Stanley & Livingstone," "Jesse James," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," "Union Pacific," "The Hound of the Baskervilles," "The Oklahoma Kid," ("One of the few westerns that James Cagney ever made"), "Dodge City," "The Wizard of Oz" and "Wuthering Heights."

By 1939, the talkies had been perfected. The big movie studios were in keen competition to make blockbusters. "And it's possible that 1939 was the last year that didn't feel the influence of World War II," Sparks says.

"World War II changed everything. That's why I think 'Gone With The Wind' was so popular. It depicted an era that was gone forever. And its appearance coincided with an era that was gone forever."

Before World War II, Sparks lived an idyllic life in Burlington, watching every shoot-'em-up western that played at the city's four movie houses: the Paramount, Alhambra, State and Carolina, plus the Graham, where he remembers seeing "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" in 1936.

"I would get the dime from somewhere," he says of the admission price. "When the newspaper came I remember I always turned to the movie section first."

Psychologists surely would diagnose Sparks as having a deep-seated desire to be a glamorous movie star. Not so. He says he just loves the movies. He doesn't think he's really any different from most Americans.

"This country is very movie-mad," he says. "What we wear is influenced by the movies. Our president is a former movie star. For a long time, actors have been in politics: Jane Fonda and Paul Newman. A long time ago, an actor named Edward Arnold was close to Eleanor Roosevelt."

Sparks has deep affection for old movies, but he doesn't turn his nose up at what's on the screen today.

"I think the movies now are just as good as any ever made," he says. He was enchanted with Barbra Streisand in "The Way We Were." He thinks "Ghandi" will become a classic. He thought Robert Redford's "The Natural" was outstanding. He loved "The World According to Garp." He liked the fast pace of "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

While he thinks older movies are charming because they leave something to the imagination regarding sex, he's not always offended by today's nudity or graphic language. "If it's handled right, it doesn't detract from the movie," he says.

He was, however, startled by the profanity in "On Golden Pond," although he liked the film. "I just wasn't used to Henry Fonda using that kind of language."

He prefers to remember Fonda in "My Darling Clementine," which Sparks rates as the top western ever. He says the best detective movie ever made was "The Maltese Falcon," the best musicals, "My Fair Lady" and "Cabaret," the best movies with social impact, "The Grapes of Wrath" and "From Here to Eternity," and the best adventure movie, "The Bridge on the River Kwai."

"Gone With The Wind" is the best overall film, he says.

At his home Sparks has a library containing 80 movie books. He has 50 films on cassette. He does most of the movie watching these days in front of the television. "I really don't go to the movies much anymore, maybe twice a year," he says.

He doesn't play "Trivial Pursuit," but he'd be unbeatable if he did.

Incidentally, the only actor to win back-to-back Academy Awards was Spencer Tracy for "Captains Courageous" in 1937 and "Boys Town" in 1938.

"I didn't see 'Courageous' until years later - on television," he says. "I saw 'Boys Town' the year it came out - in Mebane at 'The Mebane.'"

Morrison to Leave Elon

Danny Morrison, assistant basketball coach, tennis coach and assistant athletic director at Elon, will become athletic director at Wofford College, Spartanburg, S.C., at the end of the 1985 basketball season.

Morrison, 31, is a 1975 honors graduate of Wofford and was a star guard on the Terriers' basketball team. He will take over the athletic director's duties from Billy Parker, who resigned last Dec. 20 as AD and head football coach.

Morrison, who attended Walter Williams High School in Burlington, began his coaching career at Williams after graduating from Wofford. He joined the Elon staff in 1979 as tennis coach and assistant to head basketball coach Bill Morningstar. Three years ago Morrison began working as an assistant to athletic director Alan White.

Saying that he regretted leaving Elon, Morrison stated, "I look at my new job at Wofford as a challenge and an opportunity. As athletic director at Wofford, I look forward to a continuance of good relations with Elon College."

"I think Wofford made an excellent choice in picking Danny to help restructure their athletic program," said Elon AD White.

"Danny has done an outstanding job for us as an assistant basketball coach and recruiter. He was just as efficient with the tennis team, which he has turned into a winner. We hate to lose a man of his caliber, but we wish him well."

"Danny is one of the finest people I've been associated with, not only as a co-worker but as a friend," Morningstar said. "He's been very loyal to our basketball program at Elon, very dedicated in every respect. He's not a person you can really replace because of his many fine qualities."

Kelly Retires After 17 Years

An era in Elon College athletics ended on December 31, 1984 when Coach Don Kelly retired after 17 years.

Kelly was the last of former Coach "Red" Wilson's assistants to leave the college. Wilson and his staff are credited with first bringing national recognition to the Elon football program.

Kelly came to Elon in 1967 from Fayetteville (N.C.) High School as chairman of the physical education department and assistant football coach. He had previously coached at Winston-Salem Reynolds High School where his team earned two state titles.

Kelly began his Elon coaching career tutoring defensive and offensive end linebackers. As the coaching staff grew he became more specialized and dropped offensive ends. Since Wright Anderson's tenure he has coached inside linebackers only.

Kelly always maintained a heavy teaching load. One of his proudest accomplishments is the establishment of the aquatics program.

Under Kelly's guidance the program expanded greatly and now includes, among other courses, Water Safety Instruction and Scuba. Kelly has logged more than 2000 hours teaching these Red Cross programs. He has also been the coordinator of the skiing program.

Coach Don Kelly

Kelly will carry some great memories with him. "There have been so many," he says. "The playoff game with Hillsdale, Michigan at the stadium here was something. We won easily, the game was played in the cold downpour. I remember we spent lots of time on the sidelines clearing mud out of the players' noses and ears."

Elon faculty and students will have their share of Kelly memories too. Seniors from the football team will recall hot days during summer ball when Kelly would appear with a swim cap full of ice on his head, socks rolled down and shirt sleeves and shorts rolled up!

"Next to the word individual in the dictionary it says Don Kelly," athletic trainer Marty Baker often jokes.

After his retirement, Kelly plans to continue teaching part-time in Winston-Salem where his home is. He is also interested in developing his skill playing the organ and in travel.

"Lots of people will never know how much Don Kelly has meant to the Elon football program," said head coach Macky Carden. "And more than that he is one of the nicest persons you'll find anywhere."

"It will be difficult to find a person with the variety of abilities and the dedication of Coach Kelly," added Dr. Jamie Brown, head of the Department of Physical Education.

Men's Basketball

As of this writing the Elon men's basketball team stood at 17-6 overall and was leading the NAIA District 26 competition with four games remaining. Pembroke State University was a close second in the district competition, however, and the finish promised to be exciting.

The front line of Robert Leak, Eric Hairston, and Rafael Hernandez and the backcourt of Vince Richardson and Ricky Larry have led the way for the Christians this season.

Women's Basketball

The Elon Golden Girls have continued to have a few problems this year. Through Feb. 11, the team stood 5-15 overall and 3-12 in the district. They last won on January 21 when they defeated High Point in Alumni Gym by a 66-61 count.

Jamie McNeely leads the Elon scoring. The 5-11 junior forward from Icard, N.C., has blazed the nets for an 18.7 scoring average.

Wrestling

Elon College recently finished in second place in the Washington & Lee Wrestling Invitational in Lexington, Va. The Christians were spearheaded by the top performance of Bobby Brown in the 150 weight class.

Elon finished with 78 points, second to the host Generals 109½. In third was Hampden-Sydney with 48½, followed by Davidson 35, Pfeiffer 30, Washington & Lee "B" team 23½, and Lynchburg 4½.

Other top performances were turned in by Mike Fitzgerald at 118 where he took second place. Also taking second place was Scott Crater at 142, and Fred McMannus in the heavyweight division.

A week earlier, Elon hosted its own Southern Invitational in East Gym. The Christians finished third behind Pembroke State and Livingstone. PSU and Livingstone are ranked in the nation's top 20 for NCAA Division II. Top performances were turned in by Brown in the 142 class where he took first place. McMannus took second in the heavyweight division.

To start the year, Elon visited the prestigious Clemson Tiger 8 Invitational at Clemson, S.C. Elon finished in sixth place of the six teams but gained valuable knowledge because of the stiff competition.

Would you like to give more to Elon, but you are not sure you can spare the money?

There are some things you can do without causing a future risk for yourself.

- ☐ Set up joint accounts giving Elon College the right of survivorship when you establish savings accounts, money market accounts, certificates of deposits and IRAs.

- Receive the income yourself,
- Designate the income for someone else, or
- Give all or part of the income to Elon as you can afford it.

- ☐ Set up a revocable living trust.

- Money, securities, or other property is placed with a trustee for the benefit of Elon College.
- The trustee uses the trust assets and you (or a recipient of your choice) get the income from the trust.
- You can terminate or change the trust anytime you want or need to, but, if you never revoke it, the entire trust principal for whatever period you have designated becomes a gift from you to Elon College when you die.

Advantages of a Revocable Living Trust

1. It is prudent - that is, you continue to control it through the right to change or revoke it in case of illness or other emergency.
2. You can make the gift to Elon when your assets are high, knowing you have not lost the ability to take care of yourself.
3. The revocable living trust is easy to establish - some banks and most savings and loans associations can handle the whole transaction for you.

Let us help you if you are interested in following up on these ideas. Write for further information to:

Recent Alumni Activities

Virginia Beach and Suffolk Chapters

On Friday evening, January 11, over 175 Tidewater Virginia alumni and other friends of Elon College, the largest turnout for a local chapter event, enjoyed a party at the Cavalier Golf and Yacht Club in Virginia Beach. Music was provided by The Emanons. Members of the college staff attending included Dr. Fred Young, president, and his wife Phyllis; J. King White '80, director of alumni and parent programs; and Barry Bradberry '75, associate dean of admissions and financial planning. Bob '52 and Faye '52 Smithwick hosted the social, which was organized by Suffolk Alumni Chapter President Betty Jean Grigger '76 and Virginia Beach Alumni Chapter President Henry Pittman '72.

Greater Richmond Chapter

Following a delicious dinner served at The Downtown Club, about 80 members of the Richmond chapter were entertained by The Emanons while admiring the view of the capital city high atop the Ross Building. Attending from the college with President and Mrs. Young, King White and Barry Bradberry were Vice President for Development Dr. Jo Watts Williams '55, FRIDE II Campaign Coordinator Dr. Jerry Tolley, and Assistant Director of Admissions Scott Stevenson '82. Joe and Nancy Redd Penick '80, who hosted the gathering, were assisted by several local alumni, including Chapter President Linda Shields '67 and her husband, Bill.

Greater Atlanta Chapter

On January 20, the Greater Atlanta Alumni Chapter sponsored their second annual gathering at the Foxfire Food and Spirits Lounge in northeast Atlanta to coincide with Super Bowl XIX. A snowstorm earlier in the day, coupled with subzero temperatures and a wind-chill factor of minus 45 degrees at kickoff time kept many Atlantans away; nevertheless, an enthusiastic group of primarily 49ers fans watched on a big screen TV as San Francisco defeated the Miami Dolphins. Director of Alumni and Parent Programs J. King White '80 represented the college. Chapter President Allen Bush '68 and a local committee of alumni promoted the event.

Elon Alumni Ski Weekend

The first "Elon Alumni Ski Weekend" at WinterPlace Ski Area in West Virginia was hailed as an outstanding success by over 40 alumni and friends who participated during the weekend of February 9-10. The event involved alumni from as far away as Raleigh, Charlotte, the District of Columbia, and Ohio. Director of Alumni and Parent Programs J. King White led the group with assistance from Jack Locicero '81 and Tim Moore '78, who serve on the Alumni Association's Executive Committee.

Alamance County Chapter

To celebrate their return from another successful tour of the East Coast, the Emanons performed their annual "Welcome Back Concert" in Whitley Auditorium on the Elon campus for the Alamance County Alumni Chapter on Valentine's Day, February 14. The band performed an hour long show to a packed house. A reception followed in West Down Parlor. Tom Bass '71 is president of the chapter.

Guilford and Forsyth County Chapters

For the second time in as many years, a highly successful chapter function was held at the Greensboro Country Club in Greensboro, N.C. The Guilford and Forsyth County chapters, presided over by Ashburn Kirby '57 and Jack Locicero '81, respectively, cosponsored this event featuring music by The Emanons. Several members of the Executive Committee of the Elon College Alumni Association, who met in Greensboro on the following day, were among those present.

Triangle Area Chapter

The newly organized chapter serving Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill and the surrounding communities cordially invites local alumni and friends to enjoy an elegant evening at the exclusive Capital City Club, located high atop the Center Plaza Building on the Fayetteville Street Mall in Raleigh on Saturday evening, March 16. The Emanons will provide dance music as guests enjoy the skyline while sampling a delicious assortment of heavy hors d'oeuvres and socializing with local Elonites. Local dignitaries are expected to join in the fun at this gala event. For more details contact Chapter President Tim Moore '78 at 919/469-9376.

Alumni Football Game

Plans are in the works for a football game between Elon's varsity football team and the football alumni at Burlington Memorial Stadium on Saturday, March 16. Alumni who want to suit up should contact Jeff MacKense '78 (Home: 919/449-6031; Work: 919/227-2979) or John Muir '76 (Home: 919/282-4599; Work: 704/782-4135) as soon as possible.

Greater Charlotte Chapter

The Myers Park Country Club in Charlotte will again be the site of a dance on Saturday, March 23 featuring The Emanons. Sandy and Fred '67 Bright will host the social. Chapter President Stan Butler '78, assisted by Jeanne '45 and Ace '48 Harrell and a local committee of fellow alumni, are making the arrangements. Call Stan at 704/523-0078 for more details.

Fayetteville Chapter

Cooper Mattoccos '79 and a group of local alumni are making plans to organize a new alumni chapter to serve the Fayetteville (N.C.) area. Those who are interested in becoming involved should contact him by calling 919/822-2888.

A Great Comeback

In 1967, during his senior year at Elon, Randy Warren and several friends attended what began as a normal college party. As they were "pranking around" on the host's porch, Warren misjudged the depth of an eight-inch step to the ground, lost his balance and went sprawling.

He knew immediately something was wrong, but it was 24 hours later before he discovered the worst: his neck was broken and he was paralyzed from the neck down.

A star athlete in high school and at Elon, Warren had dreamed of playing professionally in the Canadian Football League after graduation. The accident put an end to those dreams. But since that time he has worked toward other goals with the same determination that made him a success on the playing fields.

Warren spent two years in hospitals following his injury. During that time he surprised his Elon coach, George Tucker, with a portrait of Tucker—an amazing likeness—that he had drawn by holding a paint brush in his teeth.

Within 18 months, Warren had regained some use of his arms and hands. He returned to college and completed his degree in 1968. Today he says, "I can do just about anything except walk and climb a tree—and I could probably climb a tree if a bear got after me."

Having worked in a variety of positions, Warren is now a self-

The Zoo Crew

By Johnnie Allen Renick '78

One of the most precious memories of Elon for me is a group of girls on second floor of Staley Dorm. We called ourselves the "Zoo Crew" because it was a name well chosen. We were devoted to each other and enjoyed ourselves totally. We did wild things like organizing "pick tanks," touring the campus parties, and creating a slogan for telephone use (not printable).

Once in the middle of December, before our Christmas break, we dressed up for Halloween and ran frantically through the boys' dorms. I'll never forget the Halloween we charged freshmen 10¢ to view our eternally dead sleeper, Barb. During the night she slept with her eyes opened on her back with her hands clasped on her chest. We helped the effect with flares stuffed in her hands.

Our group had tee-shirts made with our nick-names on the back. We even had our picture taken for the year book. This July we have planned for our ten year reunion. We met 10 years ago this fall. The love and friendship we had may never come again. With each year, we remember our times together.

FACULTY AND STAFF

Charles Gilbert Latham, retired faculty member of Elon College, died on November 4. He was a native of Tennessee and a member of First Presbyterian Church of Burlington.

Zebulon H. Lynch, 83, of 306 W. Lebanon Ave., Elon College, N.C., died Tuesday Feb. 5, at Skilled Nursing Division of Memorial Hospital of Alamance. Funeral was held Friday, Feb. 10, at Beverly Hills United Church of Christ. Mr. Lynch, father of alumnus Dr. Betty Bowman '44 of Burlington, will be remembered by Elon graduates of the early 1940s as the first superintendent of an experiment in college farming instituted by then president Dr. L.E. Smith. Mr. Lynch oversaw the operations on three tracts of land totaling 290.11 acres. He cleared a profit on the project which was established in 1941 to furnish food for the college's dining halls.

However, because of the scarcity of help during the war years, he left the project in 1943 to become a rural mail carrier. Faced with mounting costs, the farm was abandoned in 1954 but much of the land has been used to advantage by the college since that time.

A placement office that works

Elon's Career Planning and Placement offices prepare undergrads for life after college

by Carol Nix

Elon College now has a Placement Office—and a new set of goals for helping students and alumni find jobs. Whereas before, the Elon career planning and placement services were combined, they are now separate offices. This will allow each office to concentrate on specific goals and plans in preparing Elon students for seeking employment. The Career Planning Office works with students early in their academic lives at Elon by helping them decide on a major and on general career plans. As they become more specific about educational and career goals, they can begin to take advantage of placement services.

Karen Thompson, Director of Placement, is planning to extend these services by expanding on-campus interviewing and by teaching students interviewing skills. "By the time a student comes to me, he should have a good idea of what he wants to do," she said. "I can give them the tools, but unless they sell themselves in an interview, they won't get the job."

Thompson stresses the importance of being prepared for an interview. "Employers have different techniques. They want to see how you react in different situations." She suggests that students schedule a meeting with her before making contacts with employers through the Placement Office so that she can get to know them and know their personal needs as well as the company's specifications for the job. "I want a company to look at me as if I were their personal recruiter," Thompson said. "I want their respect as well as Elon College's having their respect."

Thompson seeks to instill professionalism in every student she sends to an interview. "I mean business, and I don't let our students interview unless they mean business." On-campus interviews are a reflection of Elon College, and Thompson sees that each student is well-dressed and well-prepared. The Placement Office holds workshops to improve students' skills in interviewing and to make them aware of the importance of the impressions they make on employers.

Karen Thompson, Elon's new director of placement, is charged with helping Elon graduates find good jobs in their fields. She has a variety of plans underway.

Not only is it imperative that students look professional, but the Placement Office must also reflect an air of corporate style. Renovations such as the addition of an interview room are planned. This will make it possible for more than one student to interview at a time. Computer hardware will be added so that Elon students and alumni records can be kept on file. This will also make it possible for students to find job listings in their field and current job openings.

The Placement Office plans to make "constant contact" with employers as well as alumni who may be able to hire Elon students. "Because Elon is small, we have to go to greater lengths to create an air of professionalism and offer things that other major universities do not," Thompson said. "We have to look like we mean business." Thompson added that they intend to have the Placement Office "look as professional as it would be at any company."

Dean of Academic Affairs, Dr. Gerald Francis, also explained the changes being made in the Placement Office. "We want to take the concept of a standard placement office at a university and the concept of a professional placement office in a business community and come up with an aggressive, professional placement office at Elon," Francis said that Elon does not want to forget about its students after they graduate. "We aggressively recruit students and we want to aggressively help students find positions."

The Placement Office also plans to utilize the efforts of parents, friends, and alumni who may own their own company or are affiliated with a company to help a student get a position. This may also give the office some contacts with these companies as well as with the people "who have a special place in their heart for Elon." Furthermore, these contacts hopefully will advertise the intentions and capabilities of Elon's Placement Office to those who share an interest in the future of Elon and the continued improvements in its programs in all areas. By exercising all possible entries into the professional community, Elon sets itself apart from other college placement programs. Thompson feels that these contacts, as well as those on-campus interviews, make the difference by preparing students for interview situations. "I think you not only have to be concerned with how many get jobs, but how to go about getting a job," she said. "It's very competitive."

Elon is a small college, but its new placement program is a unique one. Many schools still have combined career planning and placement services. Elon's concentration in the direction of job preparation and placement for students is part of its continued efforts to have a good percentage of its graduates employed. This primary goal has launched a quest for the combination of education and professionalism. "Employers will see that our students are well prepared, that they want the jobs, that they have a focus on what they want to do—and they are serious," Thompson said. "If we stay along those lines, we should be successful." Elon is prepared to "give students the tools" as they seek the trade.

Robb Speaks at 1985 Elon Commencement

Governor Charles S. Robb of Virginia delivered the commencement address at Elon College on May 19 when approximately 427 seniors received their diplomas.

Commencement exercises began at 10:30 a.m. in Alumni Memorial Gymnasium and were open to the public.

Governor Robb also received the honorary doctor of laws degree.

Robb, a lawyer, was elected lieutenant governor in 1977 and in 1981 was chosen governor, receiving more votes than any candidate for state office in Virginia's history.

Robb was born in Phoenix, Ariz. He was graduated from Mount Vernon High School in Fairfax, Va., in 1957. He attended Cornell University on a regional scholarship and the University of Wisconsin on an ROTC scholarship. He received his bachelor of business administration degree at Wisconsin in 1961 and his law degree from the University of Virginia in 1973. He holds honorary degrees from a number of colleges.

Governor Robb has been affiliated with the military since 1957. He was student commander of all ROTC units on campus as an undergraduate and began active duty with the U.S. Marine Corps in 1961. He served as commander of an infantry company in combat in Vietnam, where he received 10 decorations. He remains a lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve.

Gov. Charles S. Robb of Virginia

Governor Robb is married to Lynda Johnson Robb, daughter of former President Lyndon B. Johnson. They have three daughters.

Commencement weekend activities began Saturday with the college worship service at 4 p.m. in the Elon College Community Church. Dr. Winfred Bray, pastor of the First Christian Church of the United Church of Christ in Burlington delivered the sermon. His daughter, Darla, was one of the graduating seniors.

A reception for the candidates for graduation, their families and friends was scheduled for 5 p.m. on the second floor of McEwen Dining Hall. The Elon College Alumni Association and the college faculty served as hosts.

Following graduation exercises, graduates, their families, and guests were invited to greet the governor on Scott Plaza.

Dr. J. Earl Danieley, president of Elon College from 1957-1973 and now Thomas E. Powell Jr. professor of chemistry, delivered the key address of tribute at the luncheon.

Donor Endows Scholarship

A gift of $100,000 has been made to Elon College by a donor who wishes to remain anonymous.

The gift will be divided equally for use in constructing a fine arts center on the Elon campus and for establishing an endowment fund for students from Virginia.

The scholarship will be known as the Mills E. and Katherine E. Godwin Scholarship Fund, honoring the former Virginia governor and his wife. Godwin is the only person to have served two terms as governor of Virginia. He was a member of the Elon board of trustee for more than 25 years dating back to 1950 and now serves as trustee emeritus. In 1954 he was awarded an honorary doctoral degree from Elon.

Board Names New Trustees

Five new members were elected to the Elon College Board of Trustees at its spring meeting recently. In addition, a new youth trustee was named, a trustee emeritus was chosen and eight members whose terms were expiring were reappointed.

The new trustees are Noel Lee Allen of Raleigh, Barbara Day Bass of Richmond, Va., and William A. Hawks, James W. Maynard and David E. Pardue, Jr., all of Burlington.

The new youth trustee is Amy Leonore Burch, a senior at Elon from Woodstock, Va. She will serve for two years.

Rex G. Powell of Fuquay-Varina, whose term expired this term was named trustee emeritus.

The eight appointed for four-year terms are Wallace L. Chandler of Richmond, Va., Rev. Joseph M. Copeland of Portsmouth, Va., Dr. John R. Kernode of Burlington, Ernest A. Koury, Sr., of Burlington, Dr. G. Melvin Palmer of Greensboro, Emily Harris Freyer of Greensboro, Ralph H. Scott of Burlington and C. Max Ward of Burlington.

Allen, an Elon graduate of 1968, has been a partner in the Raleigh law firm of Barringer, Allen and Annix since 1977. He has served on the North Carolina Milk Commission and the State Board of Ethics. He is a former member of the Board of Directors of the Southern Conference of the United Church of Christ.

Bass, a 1961 graduate of Elon, has been teaching for approximately 25 years and is now chairman of the math department at St. Catherine's School, a dayboarding school for girls in Richmond, Va. In 1984, she received a Presidential Award for Teaching in Mathematics, one of 104 awarded nationwide.

Hawks is chairman of the board, a director and executive vice president of Falcon Industries, Falcon Communications, Unichem, Inc., and Alamance Fibers in Burlington. He is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is president of the Alamance Chapter of the University of North Carolina Educational Foundation. He also is president of Alamance Country Club and of Burlington Investment Association. He has been active in Elon's PRIDE II campaign.

Maynard is the son of Reid A. Maynard, a long-time trustee of Elon College until his death last year. The younger Maynard is president of Tower Mills Inc., and has served as a member of the Elon College Presidential Board of Advisors.

Pardue is president of The Dacourt Group, Inc., a real estate investment company. He is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is a member of the Elon College Presidential Board of Advisors. He has played in the Elon College Community Orchestra for a number of years and has been active in the College's PRIDE II campaign. Terms for Allen, Bass and Hawks will expire May 31, 1986; for Maynard, May 31, 1988; and for Pardue, May 31, 1989.

Will Elon Be Number One?

The 1985 Elon College Phonathon ended with a total of $141,258 pledged to the college, the largest amount in the six-year history of the Phonathon.

A special challenge was issued this year, pitting Elon against Davidson College and Wake Forest University. Last year Elon alumni ranked third behind these two schools in the percentage of alumni who make an annual donation to their alma mater, out of 55 private and public colleges and universities in the state.

According to Dr. Jerry Tolley, director of corporate and annual resources and Phonathon organizer, it is still too early to tell whether Elon has taken over the number one spot in alumni giving. "Results are not in from Davidson and Wake Forest yet," said Tolley, "but I feel Elon has a strong chance of becoming first in the state in alumni giving."

"This was a great year of achievement for Elon College," he said. "In order for us to meet our challenge, however, we need to collect monies on all of our 5,584 pledges."

"I am pleased with the dedication and support of Elon alumni," added Tolley. "Two years ago Elon ranked near the bottom in the state with only 15% of its alumni making an annual gift. For 1983-84, the percentage of participation was 30%, and this year looks even better."

The Phonathon, an annual winter event at Elon, raises money for the Annual Fund, which helps to pay for general operating expenses. By offsetting the rising costs of day-to-day operations, donations to the Annual Fund also help to keep tuition costs down.

The race in the Greek Phonathon alumni participation challenge is going to be close! As of this writing, Kappa Sigma and Zeta Tau Alpha have marginal leads. All other Greek organizations are closing in on the front runners.

"As of May 1, 1985, the college has received 4,300 alumni gifts, as compared to 3,300 at the same time last year," said Tolley. "There is still one month left for us to collect outstanding gifts, as we will close our books on May 31," he added.

"I would like to thank every alumnus who has made a contribution to this very special and important fund," said Tolley. "Elon has one of the highest percentages in the state in alumni giving, and we want everybody to know about it."

Thad Eure Recognized by Elon Board

Thad Eure, North Carolina's longtime secretary of state who also has been chairman of the Board of Trustees of Elon College for 30 years, was honored during the annual spring meeting of the Board when a chair of political science at the college was named for him.

Establishment of the Thad Eure Chair of Political Science, "to be occupied in perpetuity by an outstanding member of the college faculty," was announced by Royall Speck, Jr., of Greensboro, vice chairman of the board, at a luncheon in Eure's honor.

Eure was named a member of the Elon College Board of Trustees in 1942. He was made chairman in 1955. His ancestors were among the pioneer members of the Christian Church which founded Elon, and it was through the church, now the United Church of Christ, that Eure became interested in the college.

Alumni

Three Awards Presented on Alumni Day

The Elon College Alumni Association presented special awards to a pair of alumni and recognized a major industry during the annual Alumni Awards Luncheon held on Alumni Day, May 4, 1985.

Dr. Don L. Allen, dean of the University of Texas Dental Branch at Houston, received the Distinguished Alumnus Award for 1985, and Deborah A. Yow, head basketball coach at the University of Florida, received the Young Alumnus of the Year Award.

Burlington Industries, which had its beginning in the nearby town of Burlington, received the Elon College Service Award, presented for the first time. The award recognizes one organization that has been instrumental in the advancement of the college through the giving of time and energy.

Burlington Industries, now headquartered in Greensboro, and the Burlington Industries Foundation have contributed generously to Elon since 1945, the years when the company founded by Spencer Love has had its greatest growth. It is now the world's largest textile manufacturer.

Altogether, Elon has benefited by more than $500,000 in gifts from Burlington. A number of Elon graduates are also employed by the firm.

The Distinguished Alumnus Award, presented to Dr. Allen, is awarded annually to a maximum of two alumni who have distinguished themselves in their professions and communities, bringing honor to their alma mater.

A native of Burlington and an alumnus of Elon with the class of 1956, Dr. Allen is a former associate dean for administrative affairs in the School of Dentistry at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Dr. Allen spent 10 years at Chapel Hill in the School of Dentistry after he obtained his D.D.S. degree there in 1959. He earned his M.S. degree in periodontics at the University of Michigan in 1964.

Dr. Allen joined the University of Florida College of Dentistry in 1970 and served as associate dean, interim dean and then dean in the Department of Periodontology. He also was a professor in the College of Dentistry.

He moved to the University of Texas at Houston, Dental Branch, in 1982 and since that time has served as dean and professor in the Department of Periodontics.

Dr. Allen currently is chairman of the Commission on Dental Accreditation and chairman of the Council on Dental Education for the American Dental Association. He also is chairman of the visiting scholars committee, International College of Dentists. He is a fellow of the American College of Dentists and the International College of Dentists. Dr. Allen has written extensively on technical subjects in the profession.

Dr. Don Allen

Debbie Yow

Dr. Allen is married to the former Martha Winifred Rouse, a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The Young Alumnus of the Year Award is presented to a maximum of two alumni who have been graduated for a period not exceeding 15 years and who have attained honor and recognition for themselves through their activities, thereby reflecting credit to the college.

Deborah Yow, this year's recipient, is a native of Gibsonville and an alumnus with the class of 1974. She has served as women's head basketball coach at the University of Florida. She is married to Dr. William Bowden, dean of special instructional programs at the university.

Ms. Yow captained the Elon women's team to the North Carolina State Championship in 1974. She became women's head coach at Williams High School in Burlington that fall, the inaugural year for the sport. The next year she taught and coached in the Guilford County school system, guiding her Eastern Guilford team to a 25-3 record and a third-place finish in an open state tournament.

She was named women's coach at the University of Kentucky in the fall of 1976 where she put the program on a sound footing before leaving to go to Oral Roberts University in 1981. Her 1982-83 team there posted a 26-1 record and went unbeaten during the regular season.

She moved to the University of Florida in 1983 and the 1989 record of the 1983-84 team was the best in the school's history up to that point.

Recent Alumni Activities

Triangle Area Chapter Several months of planning resulted in the largest turnout of alumni ever to meet for a local Alumni Association event on Saturday evening, March 16, at the Capital City Club in Raleigh. More than 150 alumni from the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area celebrated the return of an active alumni chapter to the capital city by kicking up their heels to music performed by The Emanons at this gala occasion. Among

'79, Jeanne '45 and Ace '48 Harrell, and a committee of local alumni. Fred '67 and Sandy Bright hosted the party. Plans are underway to sponsor an informal alumni gathering in late June. For information regarding chapter activities, contact Stan and Martha Butler at 704/523-0078.

Fayetteville Chapter The Green Valley Golf & Yacht Club in Fayetteville will be the site of the area's first alumni gathering in many years. A committee of local alumni headed up by Cooper Mattocks '79 has reserved the club for a party on Saturday, June 1. Invitations will be mailed to area the assortment of food sampled by the guests was a five layer cake decorated with the Elon College seal and "Fighting Christian." Sandy '72 and Noel Allen '69 hosted the gathering, and a committee of more than a dozen local alumni headed by Chapter President Tim Moore '78 and his wife, Linda '78, promoted the event.

For more information regarding chapter activities, contact Tim and Linda Moore at 919/469-9376.

Greater Charlotte Chapter For the second year in a row the Myers Park Country Club was the site of a well-attended alumni chapter dance featuring The Emanons. Members of the college staff who socialized with the more than 100 Elon supporters included Jo Williams, King White and assistant director of admissions, Gretchen Kasting '84. The gathering was organized and promoted by Chapter President Stan Butler '78 and his wife, Martha alumni and friends of the college in May. Judging from the interest received so far, a large turnout is anticipated. For more details, call Cooper Mattocks at 919/822-2888.

Upcoming Chapter Events As in previous years, several alumni chapters, including those serving the Suffolk, Virginia Beach, Richmond, and Washington, D.C. areas are planning to sponsor gatherings over the summer. Alumni and friends should watch their mail for the details.

Parham Named Assistant AD

Tom Parham has been named assistant athletic director and tennis coach at Elon College, athletic director Dr. Alan White recently announced.

Parham will succeed Danny Morrison, who accepted a position with Wofford College as fulltime athletic director.

Besides his coaching and administrative work, Parham will also be a member of the Physical Education Department staff as a teacher. Parham, 44, comes from Atlantic Christian College, where he has been involved with athletic administration, teaching and coaching.

Tom Parham

Parham has been chosen the Carolinas Conference or NAIA District 26 Coach of the Year a record 19 times and was the first coach ever selected National Coach of the year twice, those honors coming in 1977 and 1979.

Parham's tennis teams at Atlantic Christian won two national championships in 1979 and again last year. Through the years, his teams have compiled 16 straight winning seasons as well.

Parham graduated from Atlantic Christian in 1963 with a B.S. in English and physical education and a minor in history. He received his M.Ed. from the University of North Carolina in 1964.

Hassard Named Academic All-American

Clay Hassard of Charlotte, N.C., a senior offensive tackle for the Fightin' Christian football team, was named to the NAIA Academic All-America team for 1984. Hassard has a cumulative 3.24 grade point average in business administration. He had previously been named to the All-South Atlantic Conference team for Elon.

Hassard is one of only four players chosen for the Academic All-America team. Twenty-five Elon athletes were named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at Elon College.

"We are very proud of Clay," said head coach Macky Carden. "It is just great when a player achieves excellence on the field and in the classroom. This is the kind of thing that makes you appreciate the student-athlete."

Fall Recruits Bolster Elon

Even head coach Macky Carden, a decidedly low-key individual, seems excited about the quality of recruits and transfers for Elon and Fighting Christian football next fall.

"We have a banner year," said Carden in releasing all Elon recruits to date, including transfers. "We've signed 35 kids so far, 26 of them freshmen, and we'll probably sign four or five more freshmen."

Heading the list of stellar recruits is transfer Perry Cuda, 6-4, 190 pound former Alabama quarterback. Cuda was recruited by the late Bear Bryant in his final year at Alabama, was red-shirted in 1982, saw some action in 1983 when he led the Crimson Tide to three touchdowns in a victory over Vanderbilt.

After a back injury and some personal difficulties with the Alabama quarterback coach, Cuda transferred to South Carolina last year, but had academic problems and dropped out of school. In the meantime he had back surgery which was deemed successful.

Despite Cuda's acknowledged talent, Carden is adopting a wait-and-see attitude toward the starting quarterback position.

"We've got four good quarterbacks in Garrett Robinson, Mike Brodowicz, Craig Taylor, and Gary Minson," said Carden. "Cuda has some catching up to do, and he'll have to beat out our returnees to win a starting job."

Among the transfers are Donnie Donovan, a 6-8, 265-pound defensive tackle who was at Duke, and John Duffell, a 5-10, 175-pound runningback who was at UNC.

NAIA Area Results

The Elon baseball team lost to Northern Kentucky 3-2 in the championship game of the NAIA Area Tournament in Bluefield, W. Va., Sunday, May 12. The Christians had defeated Northern Kentucky 13-9 in an earlier game.

There is still a possibility that the Elon team will receive an at-large bid to the NAIA Nationals in Idaho, May 27-June 1.

Elon Nine Wins Conference District Titles

The Elon College baseball team wrapped up their first regular season under Coach Rick Jones with championships in Carolinas Conference and NAIA District 26 play.

Jones has also been named Coach of the Year in both the conference and the district.

The team finished 33-5 overall, 22-3 in District 26 and 15-3 in the conference. They entered the District Championship held at Greensboro's War Memorial Stadium on May 3-4 as the top seed, scheduled to play fourth-seeded Atlantic Christian College in the opener.

The winner of the District 26 tournament will advance to NAIA area finals in Bluefield, W. Va., May 17-18. The national championship tournament is scheduled for May 27-June 1 at Lewis Clark State College in Lewiston, Idaho. Should the team make it to that tournament, they would be the first from Elon to do so.

Four players received post-season conference and district honors. Maurice "Mort" Monro, Jeff Neufang, John Driscoll, and Greg Harris were named to the All-Conference team. Monro, Driscoll, and Harris were cited for All-District honors.

Second baseman Jeff Neufang at bat in Newsome Field.

Tennis, Golf Wrap-up

Golf

The Elon golf team, coached by Bill Meringer and led by senior Barry Pilson, had a fine season, finishing in second place in both conference and district tournaments.

In the district tournament held at Campbell College April 14-16, the Christians were in second place going into the final round and after nine holes had captured the lead. Rain, however, forced the cancellation of the day's round, and scores were reverted to the previous day, leaving the team with a second place finish.

The season's record was still good enough to make an alternate's bid to the NAIA National Championship tournament a possibility for the Elon team. The Christians won the national title in 1982.

Men's Tennis

The Fighting Christian men's tennis team wrapped up their regular season with a fourth place finish in both district and conference tournaments.

Players Jeff Hooks and Duane Johnson advanced to the semi-finals in doubles in the District tournament and were named to the All-District team.

Coached by Steve Rickard, filling in for Danny Morrison, who resigned to accept a post at Wofford College, the team finished with a respectable 12-4-1 record for the season.

Women's Tennis

Coach Karen Carden's women's tennis team placed fourth in the Carolinas Conference tournament and tied for fifth in the District 26 playoff.

The doubles team of Cindy Wall and Missy Jones placed second in the third flight of District tournament doubles play.

The team's overall record for the season was 9-7. They were 4-3 in conference play and 6-5 in the district.

The war to end all wars

W.B. Terrell '25 recounts suffering and terror of World War I

By Craig Shaffer

"You're in the presence of antiquity," jokes W.B. "Bill" Terrell.

Those who fought in World War I are indeed living relics, and Terrell is one of the oldest veterans in Alamance County.

Though he'll be 89 years old this month, many exact dates and details about his Army days are still clear as fresh water. Few war memories are murky to the former principal, school superintendent, Elon College alumni director and soldier.

With coaxing, he puts on his rusty old green Army helmet. "Does it look silly?" he asks, mildly embarrassed. Then he sits for the young photographer with proud dignity, holding his olive green battle blouse in front of his chest. It's so old it is about to fall apart.

There's a box of memorabilia: aerial photographs of landscapes pockmarked by shelling; pictures of ships he sailed on; a huge canvas map showing troop movements in Belgium. Several "confidential" manuals. Two old rolled legends.

Decades before the hearing aid and slight limp, long before his days in education, a 21-year-old Terrell was working in a west Burlington hosiery mill.

America called; the first world war had begun. "There wasn't much choice," Terrell recalls, eyes sparkling behind his glasses. "I was subject to the draft. Instead of waiting for it I took the realistic view. I felt I would be in one way or another."

He also remembers the "patriotic fervor" at a high level. We felt we had to go.

One easy date for the Cedar Grove native to remember is May 26, 1917, when he joined the 120th Infantry unit under Capt. Don E. Scott of Graham. Scott later became a general before leaving duty.

The Alamance County company headquarters was on the third floor of the Moser-McDonald Building, he remembers.

Though he didn't have any musical experience, Terrell was recruited to play the alto horn in the infantry band. "The bass horn goes BOOM and the alto goes poof," he chuckles. "I wasn't much of a musician."

Few of the band members could read sheet music. They practiced by parading up and down the streets of Graham. "Peoples cars are still hurtin'," Terrell laughs.

That September the 120th was sent to Camp Sevier in Greenville, S.C., to join the "Old Hickory" 30th Division for training. Terrell also spent time in Company M in Durham where he was selected for army intelligence as part of a team of observers.

Terrell was shipped out to England and by June 1918, he joined the 30th Divisional Headquarters in Calais, France. That July, he began observation work in Ypres, Belgium. By August he was promoted to corporal.

Terrell's job was to report enemy activity, including troop movements, planes or balloons during the day or signal lights at night. Observers set up posts in trenches or abandoned French chateaus.

The first night they were assigned to a British unit in Ypres for observation duty, they saw the British soldier in charge of the carrier pigeons get killed. Ypres was shelled heavily throughout the remainder of the war, he notes.

The 30th Division later took part in the most decisive operation of the war, the Sept. 29, 1918, assault on the Hindenburg Line. Until the Allies broke through, the Germans considered it impregnable.

Terrell's strongest memories of the war came from that day when troops, tanks, and artillery rallied to the assault.

He clearly recalls "the terrible slaughter that day," he said. "I saw many of my former buddies in Company M pretty well shot up."

"It was terrible seeing not only our wounded come back but the German prisoners who were also wounded," he continued. "When you reflect on it, it was the worst part of the war."

From that day on, the Allies advanced under withering fire from German machine-gunners covering their troops' retreat.

"They're supposed to stick with the machine guns until they died," he added. "Those gunners were something else."

The 30th Division soon saw continued action during the Battle of Montbrehan and the Battle of La Selle River.

Some days they trudged along with the battle units or rode bicycles, burdened with telescopes, maps and field glasses, and .45-caliber handguns.

"So far as I know, I never killed anyone," he says, with a hint of pride. "I hope I never did."

But he admits being afraid. "Oh yes," he says, nodding. "You always felt you were in a situation where anything could happen."

A doughboy remembers: W.B. Terrell with World War I.

During war, the enemy is usually perceived as inhuman. But Terrell discovered otherwise when he guarded some German prisoners.

"Most of them could speak English. They didn't want war anymore than we did," he remembers. "No country wanted it. Most of the people didn't want war. But there was no way to help it."

He paused peering out the window of his Elon College home.

"When it was over, we thought it would never happen again—that people would be too smart."

The worst experience he had was chemical warfare. He remembers mustard gas was "terrible...it eats your skin."

The war ended April 8, 1919, for Terrell when he was discharged at Camp Jackson, S.C. He returned to the hosiery mill and later entered Elon College, graduating in 1925 to become principal of a Gaston County high school.

By the time World War II again embroiled the globe in conflict, he was principal of Elon High School, where he met his second wife. By the end of the "Big One," he was superintendent of Wadesboro City Schools and later of Warren County Schools.

He then came to Elon College as director of alumni affairs and after retirement was appointed a magistrate, serving at the Burlington Police station for five years. He also served as a small claims court judge for three years until 1976.

Terrell is also a Mason, a Shriner, and a member of both the Woodmen of the World and the Scottish Rite Order.

Elon's Mother Superior

Emma Lewis, friend and confidante to a generation, plans to retire

By Moses Crutchfield

For more than a quarter of a century, Emma Lewis' door — and heart — has been open to confused or discouraged students seeking answers to their questions and solutions to their problems. During that time, a generation of Elon students discovered they could turn to her to find the loving, caring advice they sought.

In her quiet, low-key way, the slender lady, now graying and showing only slight effects from a bad fall several years ago, has given them the help — the big smile — they needed.

It might have been only a matter of straightening out a mixed-up schedule. It might have been simply checking on an income tax return. It could have been helping a student find a campus job, or it might have been locating scholarship funds for a distressed student in need of financial aid. Or it could have been just the act of patting someone on the shoulder and offering them a few well-chosen words of cheer.

Whatever — and there were times when the wisdom of a "Dear Abby" was required — Emma Lewis has loved every moment of those years she's spent at Elon looking after her "children." The frequency with which alumni, back on campus, come by to exchange greetings is proof enough that these "children" remember and are grateful for the help and advice she offered them years ago.

Remembered David Vaughn, a former student and friend: "She always was effective, pleasant and encouraging in her relationships with students. She always had the time to listen to a student's problems. And she knew how to get something done. If she couldn't do it herself, she knew where to go to get it done."

"A lot of students may not have known her by name, but they knew her by sight — her office was in Alamance Building at the time — and they felt free to call upon her."

"She was very much a people-oriented person. She thrived on contact with people. I would say she was a very effective ambassador for the college."

That spirit of interest and caring which leaves such an indelible impression upon young people still is there as Mrs. Lewis approaches retirement. If her target date holds up, she'll be closing her desk in the Office of Development on September 30, 1985 to join her husband, Charles Lewis, who is scheduled for retirement from Burlington Industries on the same day. There is a possibility that Mrs. Lewis may stick around another week to make it an even 27 years at Elon. She and her husband both have timed their retirements for the moment when annual reports and fiscal years are behind them. She has no definite plans for retirement. "The first six months," she said, "I'll spend cleaning out my house from the basement up. After that's done, then I'll be ready to think about something else."

In her years at Elon, Mrs. Lewis has watched thousands of students come and go. And time, she has observed, has brought notable changes in the make-up of Elon's student body, in its faculty and in the nature of the campus atmosphere. She was witness to the unrest of the Vietnam years, to the breaking of new ground with integration on campus and to the dramatic shift in attitudes that marks today's student. Elon weathered the many crises well, she said.

"During those early years of the 1960's, there were a lot of desperate boys on campus because of the Vietnam war," said Mrs. Lewis. There were also a lot of night school students, veterans on the GI bill. Then came the unrest of the late '60's and '70's.

"Elon was fortunate," Mrs. Lewis noted. "We had only a minimum of disturbance." That she credits, in large part, to the "firm hand" of Dr. J. Earl Danieley, Elon's president.

Since the uncertainty of those days, she's witnessed students make a "180-degree turn in their attitudes." She watched integration work to the point that a black was elected president of a student body that not too many years before was completely white.

She has seen requirements for both students and faculty strengthened, and she has seen changes in the nature of the college's mission and in its connections with the church.

Since 1979 Emma Lewis has been assigned to the Office of Development located in the Powell Administration Building. She has missed the direct contact with students that she once had because the Powell Building is off their beaten path.

"For years I was in The Alamance Building where students passed all the time. My door was never closed and students were dropping in all along. It isn't that way now because the Development Office is out of the area where students circulate," she said.

Along the way, Mrs. Lewis once was responsible for all the duplicating done by the college, including faculty and staff.

A classic Emma Lewis pose: listening to a student

"I really was popular in those days," she said with a laugh, "because I had copies of all the exams."

Mrs. Lewis also served as secretary to the faculty in the days when she was doing the duplicating job.

For the last several years, she has carried the title of Records and Research secretary. Her job has been to research and establish records for the alumni association, for endowments, and for scholarships.

"There was a need for more complete scholarship and endowment records when I came in here," she said. "I went back and checked all the files. I read folders of all the college's presidents and I talked to people in an effort to get additional information," she said. Today, Elon has files for all those things.

Mrs. Lewis, a native of Dunn, N.C., and the youngest of five sisters, attended the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and took the secretarial course offered there. (It was known as Woman's College then.) She went to work for Burlington Mills in the Burlington transportation office in 1940, met her husband-to-be there and was married in January 1942. Six months later, her husband was called into service and she went to Wilmington to live with a sister and work in the personnel department of the North Carolina Shipbuilding Company. They returned to Burlington, January 1, 1946. Then, following the birth of children Jane and John, she went to work on a part-time basis for Dr. Robert Benson, then dean of students, in 1958.

That, of course, led to a full-time job.

Of all the people Mrs. Lewis has encountered at Elon, the fondest memories are of Dr. A.L. Hook — as they are for many others who have attended and worked at Elon.

"Fessor Hook certainly left him imprint upon Elon," she said. "He loved the school. Alumni always looked for him when they came back. His loss was a tremendous blow, both in the strength of his own personality and in the ties he represented for those generations which he knew in the span of the years he was here."

The college annual of 1970 was dedicated to Emma Lewis.

"In recognition and appreciation of an individual's service to Elon, the Phi Psi Chi editors have set aside this page. The award is made in tribute to one who has made an exceptional effort in promoting understanding, good will and knowledge...in furthering the goals of Elon College."

It was a fine tribute in 1970, and still is today. Emma Lewis will be missed when she retires.

NOMINATIONS SOUGHT FOR 1986 ALUMNI AWARDS

You are invited to submit nominations for one of these four Elon College Alumni Association awards:

Young Alumnus Of The Year

Presented to a maximum of two alumni who have graduated for a period not to exceed fifteen years and who have distinguished themselves in their professions and communities. (Alumni who graduated in 1971 or later are eligible in 1986.)

Distinguished Alumnus Award

Presented to a maximum of two alumni who have distinguished themselves in their professions or communities and thereby brought honor to their Alma Mater.

Citizen's Service Award

Presented to a maximum of two individuals (normally not alumni) who have been instrumental in the advancement of the college through the giving of their time and energy.

Elon College Service Award

Presented to one organization that has been instrumental in the advancement of the college through the giving of time and energy.

Members of the Elon College Alumni Association who have gained prominence in business, education, the ministry, science, social service, the arts, law or politics are typically nominated for these awards. However, qualified nominees from other fields are also eligible for consideration.

All alumni, regardless of standing as 'graduate' or 'nongraduate', are evaluated equally when being considered for an Elon College Alumni Award by the Alumni Awards Subcommittee. However, those alumni who are nominated should have completed a substantial portion of their undergraduate studies at Elon College to receive serious consideration for an award.

LIFE IMITATES ART?

Second Powell Professorship Is Endowed

A new endowed professorship has been established at Elon College, and Dr. John Sullivan has been named to the position.

The Maude Sharpe Powell Professorship was endowed by gifts from Dr. Thomas E. Powell, III, John S. Powell, J.D., and Dr. James B. Powell in memory of their mother, the late Maude Sharpe Powell, a 1921 graduate of the college. It is the second Powell professorship at Elon. The Thomas E. Powell, Jr. Professorship, currently held by Dr. J. Earl Dancley, was established in 1978 by gifts from Dr. Powell, Jr. and members of his family.

In establishing the new professorship, the brothers are also honoring their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hinton Rountree. Mrs. Rountree, the former Clara ("Joan") Sharpe, is the sister of Maude Sharpe Powell. Mr. Rountree has been an influential member of the college's Board of Trustees since 1953 and served for many years as chairman of the Financial Affairs Committee. Both were graduated from Elon, he in 1933 and she in 1931.

"We are once again indebted to the Powell family for their generosity, vision and commitment," said Dr. Fred Young, president of Elon, in announcing the professorship. "In continuing the tradition of leadership, service and philanthropy begun by their father and mother, they ensure vitality and quality for this institution."

A native of Bellemont in Alamance County, Sophia Maude Sharpe was a noted chemistry scholar and athlete while a student at Elon. After her marriage to Dr. Powell, Jr., she was a resident of the Town of Elon College for more than 20 years before her untimely death in September, 1944. A leader in religious, civic and social activities, she particularly enjoyed her membership in the Women's Missionary Society of the Elon College Community Church and served as that group's president for a number of years.

Dr. John Sullivan, professor of philosophy at Elon since 1970, has been selected by the college as the first to hold the Maude Sharpe Powell chair.

"Dr. Sullivan's credentials are impeccable," said Dr. Young in announcing the appointment. "As a scholar, thinker, and leader, he is superb. However, the primary factor in his selection was his effectiveness as a teacher. Willingly assuming the role of mentor, counselor and friend to his students, he exemplifies the ideal for a liberal arts institution."

Dr. Sullivan is a graduate of Catholic University, from which he earned both the B.A. and M.A. degrees. He also holds a J.C.D. degree from Lateran University in Rome, Italy, and a Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. In 1976-77 he was Lilly Scholar in the Humanities at Duke University. In 1980 he was awarded the Daniels-Dancley Award for Excellence in Teaching at Elon.

A noted speaker and lecturer, Dr. Sullivan has given over 60 talks, workshops and other public presentations throughout North Carolina and in other states. He has also acted as consultant for the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH), the N.C. Humanities Committee, the N.C. Nurses Association, the UNC-G Department of Education and the Traditional Acupuncture Institute of Columbia, Maryland.

He is the editor of The Starred World: A Medieval Reader, which was written as a part of the NEH Measure of Man project. He is also the author of two essays in Schools and Meanings: Essays on the Moral Nature of Schooling, edited by David Purpel and H. Svi Shapiro and published in 1984 by University Press of America.

Study Abroad Expands to Full Semester

By Meredith Lee '86

Beginning this fall, Elon College students will have the opportunity to live and study abroad for an entire semester. Through the Study Abroad Program, the fall semester 1985, beginning August 19 and ending December 16, will be spent in England.

"This is the 18th year of Elon's Winter Term Abroad Program," said Dr. Bill Rich, Coordinator of the Study Abroad Program. "We see the fall semester as expanding the opportunity for students to study abroad." Elon is working in conjunction with the Guilford College Study Abroad Program to provide an educational experience for 19 Elon students and 38 Guilford students. The program is designed to tap the artistic, historical, political, cultural as well as educational resources in London. It is offered for the regular cost of tuition, room and board, plus airfare.

Upon arriving in London, the students will begin their cultural experience with a five-day orientation to the city. Classes will begin the following Monday, August 26, at the London headquarters of the Friends of Society in the center of the city.

Students may enroll for 12 to 16 credit hours. Courses will be offered in fine arts, political science, English, philosophy, and history—all centered around British culture.

The courses will be taught by faculty members of the Courtauld Institute, London Polytechnic, University of London, Guilford College, Eastman's Polytechnic, Wellcome Institute and Elon College.

Under the leadership of Elon professor Will Magnuolo and Guilford professor Martha Cooley, the students will reside in the Hotel Edward and the Edward Apartments, near Hyde Park. Classes will be held four days a week providing three-day weekends. A two-week fall break is scheduled for October 11-27 to allow time for travel to the continent.

Rich said that his office has already begun to recruit students for the fall of '86. Students are accepted into the program if they have a sound grade point average and recommendation from a faculty member.

Waller Receives Faculty Award

"Teaching is the art of assisting discovery"—Mark van Doren

An inquiring mind, a thirst for truth, a respect for others—these are the methods Dr. Bruce Waller, assistant professor of philosophy, carries into the classroom and the methods that earned for him the 1984-85 Daniels-Dancley Award for Excellence in Teaching, Elon's most coveted award for faculty.

"His aim is always to share the knowledge and to encourage true learning," wrote one of Waller's students in nominating him for the award.

A colleague wrote, "Ever seeking to involve students in spirited discussion, he . . . displays the courage to follow arguments wherever they may lead."

Waller agrees that discussion suits his purposes best. "I am not so much concerned that the students who take my classes leave with a formed philosophy," he says. "I would prefer that they leave feeling less certain of what they believe."

"I hope the class will make them think more carefully and critically about their beliefs, will make them question whether their beliefs form a coherent and consistent set."

The classroom, in Waller's view, is "a good time to practice thinking." Hence, he uses discussion freely.

"I also find it worthwhile to listen to what the students have to say," he adds. "Very often they take angles on things that I hadn't seen before. They bring a different perspective."

Waller is a graduate of Louisiana Technical University. He received his master's and Ph.D. degrees in philosophy from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He has taught at Elon since 1978 and currently serves as chairman of the Department of Philosophy.

Waller retains an avid interest in research and writing. He has had several articles published in scholarly journals and is currently working on another, which, he says, is basically a defense of the logical-positivist approach to ethics.

Waller is the thirteenth recipient of the Daniels-Dancley Award, which was established by Dr. J. Earl Dancley and his wife, Verona Daniels Dancley, in honor of their parents.

Alumni Chapter News

Fayetteville Alumni

On Saturday evening, June 1, about 30 alumni gathered for a party at the Green Valley Golf and Country Club in Fayetteville, North Carolina. This was the first alumni social held in this area in nearly a decade and represented the first step in re-establishing a viable chapter to serve this part of the state.

Several guests at this social were contemporaries who were pleasantly surprised to greet classmates they had not seen since their days at Elon. The group enjoyed a variety of "munchies" and danced on the terrace overlooking the 18th fairway to music provided by a disc jockey.

This social was organized by Cooper Mattocks '79 and promoted by several other local alumni. Plans are being made to sponsor an informal get-together later this year.

Other Summer Socials

At preme the Suffolk and Virginia Beach chapters of the Elon College Alumni Association had filed plans to co-sponsor a social at the Suffolk Swimming Pool in Suffolk on Saturday evening, August 3. Suffolk Chapter President B.J. Riddick Crigger '76 and Virginia Beach President Henry Pittman '72 are in charge of the arrangements for this second annual affair for Tidewater Virginia Elon supporters. Chapter-sponsored gatherings may also be scheduled in Richmond, Charlotte, and Forsyth County, N.C. Alumni and friends of the college in all of these areas should watch their mail for the details.

Dr. John D. Messick '22 looks back on his long and distinguished career as an educator

By Moses Crutchfield

In the late 1930's and early 1940's when the main concern at Elon College was the ongoing fight for its financial life, one man was busy concentrating on preserving and enhancing academic standards, making certain that the vineyards of learning planted by the college's founders did not wither and die.

Ultimately, according to history's judgment, he achieved that goal, even surpassed it. Elon emerged from its financial tribulations with its academic standards intact. The groundwork was in place for the college to begin, when the time was propitious, a period of enormous growth, physically and academically.

The man whose work influenced Elon's future as a place of learning so greatly was Dr. John Decatur Messick, dean of his alma mater from 1935 until 1944. His service during those perilous times that encompassed the end of the Great Depression and the outbreak of World War II was a labor of love by his own words.

As testimony to his abilities as an educator, Dr. Messick later served a much larger institution as president for 13 years, was chairman of a highly important national collegiate committee and then capped a distinguished career in the field of higher education by planning and overseeing installation of the curriculum at one of America's unique universities. His record and achievements in education stand virtually alone among the list of Elon graduates who have chosen that field for a career.

Today, at age 87, Dr. Messick, by choice, lives alone in a two-bedroom apartment on the fringes of the Cape Fear Country Club golf course in Wilmington. His wife, the former Magdalene Robinson, died several years ago. Typical of his spirit of independence, he prefers his own residence to homes of his children. A daughter, Helen Margaret Willets (Mrs. Frederick), and son, John Messick, both live in Wilmington. Another daughter, Rose Melvin, (Mrs. Julius Lyman McElroy, Jr.), lives in Raleigh and another son, Norval, in San Francisco. A third son, a handicapped child, died in his teens.

Dr. Messick retains much of the erect and imposing bearing that was characteristic of him in younger days. In recent years, though, health problems have arisen. A detached retina cost sight in one eye. A year ago a congestive heart condition slowed his pace considerably. However, he still moves reasonably spryly and continues to drive his own car during daylight hours. The sharp, dry wit that one remembers from other days manifests itself from time to time at testing to his alertness.

In retrospect, Dr. Messick's responsibilities at Elon probably helped prepare him for greater ones later at what is now East Carolina University and at Oral Roberts University.

"Dr. (L.E.) Smith, Elon's president then, left the curriculum to me," said Dr. Messick. "I worked with each department separately, giving each man an opportunity to present his own ideas. After thorough evaluation, the ideas, if good enough, would be presented to the faculty which approved or rejected them. In this way we improved the curriculum. Most of the courses of study were good when I came to Elon but we made improvement a continuing process."

Dr. Messick commented, "We had a good faculty when I was at Elon. We had more than our share of doctorates. It was a strong faculty."

And, continuing, "Professor (A.L.) Hook served as dean before I went to Elon. He moved over to the office of registrar when I came. What his feelings were, I don't know, but there was never a cross word between the two of us. He certainly was one of the finest people I ever knew."

Dr. Messick tells the story of how he got back to Elon as a member of the faculty at the college he was graduated from in 1922 at the age of 25:

"In the summer of 1934, I was teaching at the Northern Presbyterian College in Asheville. Meanwhile, I was looking for a college position. I had heard of one in Florida and I visited there one weekend. They liked me and I liked them and I accepted an associate professorship to begin in the fall."

"When I returned to Asheville, I found a letter from Dr. Smith requesting that I meet him in a hotel in Salisbury the next Saturday afternoon, which I did. The job that was open was that of dean. When I arrived in Salisbury, Mrs. Smith was with her husband and we talked together for a while. Then she smiled broadly and excused herself so Dr. Smith and I could talk alone. Later, she told me the smile was to let Dr. Smith know that she approved. She was a great gal."

"Inasmuch as I was a graduate of Elon, the job was special to me. We were happy there. I loved Elon then and still do. I regarded the job of academic dean as a challenge."

That, quite possibly, was the reason Dr. Messick settled upon the Elon job when he might have sought and secured other positions that were higher in prestige and paid more than the $3,500 annual salary. After finishing at Elon, Dr. Messick did summer school work at UNC—Chapel Hill, Columbia and finally New York University where he received his doctorate in education in 1934. At NYU, he chalked up all "A" grades and received a letter stating that he was one of the best graduate students they had ever had. At that time, 31,000 students were enrolled in the university. Later on, Dr. Messick was president of the NYU Alumni Association.

Dr. Messick came to Elon as a student from Aurora in the eastern part of the state because at the time he wanted to become a minister. In turning through college magazines, he came across one on Elon, liked what he saw, arranged a conference with Dr. W.A. Harper, then president, and "lived him."

"The first year at Elon I took New Testament Greek and New Testament from the chairman of the department, Dr. (J.U.) Newman, probably as good a teacher as I ever knew," he noted.

When Dr. Messick left Elon in 1944 to become dean at New Jersey State Teachers college in Montclair, N.J., a situation was brewing at East Carolina Teachers College in Greenville that eventually would bring his return to his native state. East Carolina, once mainly a teachers' college for women, was experiencing all kinds of problems, including a financial scandal. Several educators were given a shot at straightening out the situation but none fully succeeded. Finally, when Dr. Dennis Cooke, a former president at High Point College, who had made some strides, gave up, Dr. Messick was called upon to take the job. He accepted and left Montclair, taking with him a former Marine, Leo Jenkins, who became his dean at East Carolina. Jenkins later succeeded Messick as president.

There is no question but what Dr. Messick laid out the course for East Carolina's emergence as a full-fledged university, complete with a four-year medical school. True, it was Dr. Jenkins who later aligned the political forces and battled the legislature for establishment of the medical school, but it was Dr. Messick who did the preliminary work. He was the first to envision a two-year medical school as a possibility, for example.

As early as 1953, he was telling the legislature that East Carolina should be permitted to assume the proportions of a university. He did succeed in getting the name changed from East Carolina Teachers College to East Carolina College. For the first time, master's degrees were offered in the liberal arts program. The basic science program was strengthened, and a huge extension service was instituted with special attention to the Cherry Point and Camp Lejeune Marine bases. Eventually, the off-campus program included 22 centers.

Admission standards were advanced during Dr. Messick's tenure and enrollment soared from 1,600 students to 6,500 in 13 years. The college became the first in the southeast to offer courses via commercial television. Dr. Messick, incidentally, was in the forefront of those participating in the successful effort to get Voice of America transmitters located in Greenville.

Obstacles frequently popped up to hinder Dr. Messick's efforts to bring adequate facilities to the East Carolina campus. For example, early on he was able to get funds for a new library. That was fine, but, because of the war, no structural steel was available on the market. After Gov. Kerr Scott and his administrative assistant D.S. Coltrane, were unable to do anything about the situation, Dr. Messick approached an acquaintance and friend in high government circles. The result was East Carolina's first new building under Dr. Messick.

Getting money out of the legislature frequently was a hassle, too. On one occasion, Dr. Messick sent several pretty co-eds to Raleigh, armed with baskets of camellia blooms to pin on the laps of legislators, hoping they would give favorable attention to bills affecting East Carolina.

"It took a lot of fighting and much persuasion to get appropriations for improvements to the campus," he remarked. Yet, as the college grew, he continued to add new dormitories and other buildings to the college's facilities.

Eventually, the legislative battles took their toll. Saying he was, "Tired of being tired," Dr. Messick handed in his resignation effective in early 1963. His work and his leadership were saluted by the press and by powerful political figures, but to him, the most touching, meaningful tribute came from the East Carolina student newspaper:

"By pouring himself heart and soul into his work, he built a little teacher's college into one of the finest places of learning in the state... he is great because he cared."

In 1981, the university dedicated an enlarged and refurbished theater arts center "to one of the most dynamic and colorful leaders in the institution's 74-year history."

While at East Carolina, Dr. Messick came to know S. Lee Braxton, mayor of the nearby town of Whiteville and chairman of the board of First National Bank there. That acquaintance led to a series of happenings that capped the career of Dr. Messick as an educator.

After leaving East Carolina, Dr. Messick worked briefly with the U.S. Office of Education, supervising its activities in the southeastern states. Then, he was persuaded to go to work for Congress as a research specialist. From there, he came out of retirement to serve as dean of instruction at Vermont State College, where he was handed the assignment of revising the college's curriculum.

Meanwhile, Braxton, the former mayor, made his fortune and joined up as an associate of Evangelist Oral Roberts. When Roberts decided to found and build his university in Tulsa, one of his needs was for a person with expert knowledge of a university's curriculum and of how buildings should be planned for greatest efficiency in teaching. Braxton thought immediately of his old friend, Dr. Messick.

For a while, Dr. Messick served as consultant and retained his position at Vermont State, but in July 1963 he joined Oral Roberts as dean and executive vice president of a university that at the moment was little more than a dream. It was here that Dr. Messick did what he calls his "most creative work."

His responsibilities included developing the curricula, composing the college catalog and faculty handbook, setting standards for student admission and devising various bulletins. He interviewed and recommended faculty and personnel employment and advised with the architects on the appointments of various buildings.

Dr. Messick reached deep into his years of experience to make the university one of the country's most up-to-date in the way of curriculum and facilities. His experience as a member of the National Accreditation Committee of the American Association of Colleges and Universities carried him onto campuses across the country. He gleaned the best of ideas from that experience and combined them with others he had left over from his days as superintendent of the Spencer schools and as a principal at Trenton and South River.

The result was the crown jewel of the Oral Roberts University campus, the John D. Messick Learning Resources Center. It's a unique six-story learning complex with a highly sophisticated information and retrieval system for both students and professors. It provides four-and-one-half acres of classroom, library, offices and other related facilities. One of its features is an electronic projection system whereby a professor can call up or record whatever he desires. Lectures are on tape. Two electrical engineers were engaged to carry out Dr. Messick's ideas. The completed $10-million building was called by the Ford Foundation "one of the most creative facilities on the American campus today."

From out of an experience at the age of 19, Dr. Messick developed a strong, life-long philosophy of religion. Thus, a conflict between his intellectual and Roberts' fundamental approach to the spiritual might have been expected.

"I see no contradiction in religion and intellectuality," said Dr. Messick. "Basically all religious denominations believe in Christ. I know there is a heaven. I know there is a Christ. I never feel alone. I know that He is with me. If intellect puts those beliefs there, then what is the contradiction?"

Dr. Messick tells the story of how he once kidded Oral Roberts that if he (Roberts) would like to transfer to the Methodist Church without a ministerial degree, then "I might be able to get the conference to accept him. He took me up on it and today is a member of the largest Methodist church in Tulsa, although he never changed his faith in action."

Later Oral Roberts wrote: "We are so very grateful and we give God thanks for finding you at a very strategic time in the life of Oral Roberts University. Your contacts, your experience, your know-how and ability were the things that put us on the right track. You helped us lay a good foundation and our strong academic courses are due to your great strength."

In retirement, Dr. Messick is as active as health permits. He is a member of a number of organizations and earned a national 10-year award for service to add to the many accorded him in his career. He is close to his children, grandchildren and great grandchildren. He is happy about Eloin's growth and thinks that church-related colleges will survive and should be kept distinctive.

Of his life, he says, "I don't know that I would do anything differently if it could be done over today."

A key to that life might be found in a statement by Aristotle long ago: "All who have meditated on the art of governing mankind have been convinced that the fate of empires depends on the education of youth."

The Year in Review

By Alan Wooten '87

Even without a national championship or the Joby Hawn Cup, Elon made great strides in its athletic program during 1984-85 and the advances will continue to show next year.

Baseball
The biggest story of the year was the Elon baseball team. The Christians were picked to finish second in the conference and district races. With a never-say-die attitude, the Christians romped through league opposition to the regular season Carolinas Conference and NAIA District 26 titles. They began tournament play by winning the District 26 tourney and then finishing second in the Area VII tournament, after losing the first game of the double elimination affair.

Receiving an at-large berth into the NAIA National Championship Finals in Lewiston, Idaho, Elon finished seventh in the ten-team field. In the final poll by the NAIA the Christians were ranked fifth. Head Coach, Rick Jones, in his first year at Elon, led the team to a 40-10 record and was Coach of the Year in the conference and district. Many observers of Elon baseball over the years have called this the greatest team ever fielded.

Maurice Morton, senior from Graham, N.C., set records for career runs (126), career hits (185), career stolen bases (113), and stolen bases in a season (58). Pitcher John Driscoll set a new career record at Elon with 26 wins, breaking a 55-year-old record set by C.V. "Lefty" Briggs in the late 20s. Morton and junior Greg Harris were drafted by the San Diego Padres of the National League.

In national tournament play, Elon opened by dropping a 6-1 decision to the College of St. Francis from Joliet, Ill. The Christians were the victims of four inning-ending doubleplays. Driscoll took the loss while David Terry and Jerry Russell, two promising freshmen, had two hits each.

On Tuesday, Elon returned to winning side of the ledger, posting Southern Maine, 11-5. Elon jumped ahead 10-1 and never looked back. Pete Gibson and Budgie Clark had three hits each and Terry Harris added two and three runs batted in. One of Harris' hits was a booming 400-foot homerun over the scoreboard in rightfield. Greg Harris notched the victory, his ninth of the season.

On Friday, Elon met with the big "E" elimination. Georgia College used a first-inning grand slam and a seventh-inning three-run homerun to put Elon away. Terry Harris added another homerun in rightfield and Russell drove in the other run with a double off the wall in leftfield. Greg McDannold, despite some good moments, took the loss on the mound.

Elon head coach Rick Jones offered nothing but praise for his team. "We accomplished a lot of things out in Idaho. We proved we can play some good baseball against some of the finest teams in the country. Our goal now is to try and rebuild our pitching staff and make the trip back to Lewiston next year."

Soccer

Elon also won a conference title in soccer and received its first All-American in the sport when Joe Nepay was named to the third team. Head coach Steve Ballard was named Coach of the Year in the conference and district while Nepay was Player of the Year. The team finished 11-7-1 and should contend for the conference and district titles this fall.

Basketball

Elon had another Player of the Year in the Winter when Robert Leak received the honor in basketball. Since then, Coach Bill Morningstar has done some excellent recruiting, including the signing of Warren Wallace from Clemson, and Elon should field an excellent team next year.

Football

Elon won the NAIA District 26 football title in the fall. The Christians were unable to make the playoffs but finished 7-3 and were ranked 13th in the nation. Royce Fentress was the District Player of the Year and was drafted by the USFL Birmingham Stallions. Fentress was also a first team All-American and received Elon's highest athletic honor in the Basnight Award.

Golf

Elon's golf team also did well this year. Although failing to make the playoffs for the first time since 1975, the Christians were ranked in the top ten all year. Elon was the victim of fluke weather in the district tournament and missed the trip to Phoenix by two strokes. Tom Martine and Barry Pilson were named to All-Conference and All-District teams.

Publications Win Awards

The Elon College Sports Information Department under the direction of Steve Ballard and with the assistance of Alan Wooten, has received four national awards during the past year.

The NAIA Sports Information Directors' Association named Elon's football program third best in the nation in Division I competition. It was the fourth time in five years the football program has been recognized in the top three in the nation. Elon's basketball program was also judged to be sixth best in Division I competition for basketball programs, the first time since 1978-79 it has received an award.

At the College Sports Information Directors' Association convention, Elon received two more awards. The South Atlantic Conference (SAC-8) Media Guide was selected as the top program, while the football program for Elon was fifth. Elon served as the SAC-8 News Bureau for the past year.

Myers '78 Returns as Coach

By Alan Wooten '87

Jackie Myers, Elon '78, has been named to succeed Mary Jackson as the new women's basketball coach at Elon. Myers, who played collegiately for Jackson in the late seventies, will also coach the softball team and teach in the school's physical education department.

Myers came to Elon from Carolinas Conference foe Pfeiffer College, having served as head basketball coach there since 1982. Before that, Myers was head coach at Williams High School from 1980-82 and assistant coach at East Tennessee State from 1978-80, during which time she earned her master's degree in physical education.

While at Elon, Myers was a three-sport star in volleyball, basketball, and softball. She was named All-

Jackie Myers '78

Conference for basketball in her final two years and was All-Conference in softball in her senior campaign when Elon garnered the ALAAW State Softball Championship, defeating Carolina for the title. Elon, along with the other smaller schools in North Carolina, has since changed its women's program to NAIA. "I'm looking forward to coming back," said Myers.

WHICH WILL IT BE?

ACCORDING TO YOUR WILL . . .
or according to arbitrary state laws?

If you have not exercised one of the most precious rights you have as an American citizen, the right to make a will and dispose of your property in accordance with your own personal wishes, then you should see a free booklet, Making Your Will, which we will send you without obligation on your part.

What can a will do for you? A will can:

- Provide for your property to be distributed in keeping with your wishes.
- Save unnecessary expenses in settling your estate.
- Name a guardian for minor children.
- In many cases, reduce or avoid estate taxes and future income taxes for beneficiaries.
- Create a trust or trusts to assure an adequate income for your spouse or other heirs, while protecting your estate against mismanagement or dissipation due to their inexperience or lack of interest in managing financial affairs.
- Provide a bequest to Elon College or any other charitable cause which you want to benefit from your estate.

Don't procrastinate or neglect to do what needs to be done. Before making or revising your will, write for the free booklet, Making Your Will. What You Should Know Before You See Your Lawyer.

USSR~You can get there from

By GREGG PAPDI

Dr. David Crowe, professor of History at Elon College, could be arrested for false advertising. He touts his yearly Russian expedition as a trip. It is not a trip, not in the ordinary sense of that word; it is an adventure—pure adventure. Mr. Webster defines trip as making a journey. He defines adventure as an exciting and remarkable experience. Actually, to be fair to both Dr. Crowe and Mr. Webster, the Russian offering could best be defined as an adventurous trip.

It is surely a journey. The 1985 group covered close to 20,000 miles in sixteen days, and journeyed back and forth through twelve time zones. There were days when we lived on time that was noon where we were but midnight the day before at Elon College. Over this period of sixteen days we were involved in twelve to fourteen separate plane flights (depending on where one came from to get to New York), a 36-hour train ride through Siberia into Mongolia, and a 24-hour ride back into Siberia. Those of us who dealt with constant time adjustments, dragging luggage that constantly seemed to gain weight (yes, Virginia, there are souvenirs galore in the USSR and Mongolia), and keeping up with planes, trains, and buses can attest to the fact that this was definitely a journey.

On the other hand, it was definitely an adventure. Flying 450 miles into the Gobi Desert in a double prop plane that would land on a non-existent runway is adventure. Being stranded on a broken bus in that same desert and finally being rescued by three mongols who happened by in a jeep and who repaired the bus with a safety-pin and wire is strict adventure. Hearing soldiers walking on top of and scraping underneath your train, and looking out of the window and seeing soldiers carrying M1 rifles and looking grim at the border crossings is adventure. So is a Tibetan Buddhist worship experience, an opera sung in Russian with a chorus of 84 and a house that was burned on stage, children wanting chewing gum at every stop, and being stared at constantly by everyone (we felt, at times like the king who had no clothes). So this trip was also an adventure, truly an exciting and remarkable experience.

Why does one go to the Soviet Union and Outer Mongolia? Everyone knows that Outer Mongolia isn't real anyway. It is only a figment manufactured by those needing to threaten, such as, "If you don't shape up, I'm shipping you off to Outer Mongolia."

Why deliberately leave the conveniences of our society (it will never again take working plumbing and hot water for granted)? One reason is Dr. Crowe. Where else could a person find a leader that speaks fluent Russian, has taught the history of that country for years, and has made eleven trips into this rather formidable part of the world? His experience and expertise takes the trip out of the category of "tour" and places it into the category of "hands-on experience." What a bonus Dr. Crowe was! He had the unique talent of looking after the group without hovering, and of encouraging our own initiative and participation.

Oh the cities of this trip! Leningrad is beautiful with its waterways and its lovely cast iron railings that stand watch along these waterways. The city stands as a monument to man's struggles, having experienced the Decemberist uprising, the terrorist activities of the 1880's, and the siege of the Second World War. It is also a monument to man's love of the beautiful as preserved and exemplified in the Hermitage Art Museum, the Kirov Theatre, and St. Isaac's Cathedral.

Baku, a lovely sun-baked area bordering the Caspian Sea, was pure culture shock after cold, over-cast, snowy Leningrad. Suddenly we were transported into a Mediterranean climate and society; from the cool, reserved north to the warm relaxed south. It seemed strange that this belonged with the same country, and it was here that we began to grasp the size and diversity of the Soviet Union. We had a seven-course banquet, 14th-century style, complete with a rather strange Turkish-sounding band that delighted in showing up periodically to play loudly as they stared at the ceiling and as we stared at them. Needless to say, it was wonderful then, but not quite so wonderful at 2 a.m. that same night when we assembled at the airport for our night flight to Asia and the town of Tashkent.

Russian ballet is spellbinding. We watched Swan Lake being performed in this central Asian city and each scene seemed a Degas painting come alive. The theatre performances we saw were first-rate whether they were of ballet, opera, or folk music. Each city has a children's theatre, and the arts are presented to the people from the time of their childhood. This is evident in the excellent attendance and attention at the performances. It must be added, however, that along with ballet, folk tradition, and classics, rock is alive and well. It was an experience in schizophrenia when I awoke in the middle of the night on a train in the wilds of Siberia only to hear John Lennon's "Let it Be," or sat having dinner 450 miles into the Gobi Desert while listening to Jim Morrison. So much for suppression. The young will find a way.

"A train is a train is a train...For 36 hours we rode through the Siberian countryside toward and into Mongolia."

Irkutsk is pure Doctor Zhivago. Russian, wooden, unpainted houses with ornately carved trim and shutters of what can best be described as "Williamsburg colors." It was to here that many Decemberists were sent into exile and, because of this, became a 19th century cultural center. It was here that we quietly observed a Russian Orthodox ceremony in a small, ancient church. The shadows were alive with old women dressed in black scurrying from one altar to the next. Some good American Protestants and Catholics lit candles in this quiet, different place and wished for a peaceful world that would fit this holiness.

A train is a train is a train, and we experienced pure "train-ness." For 36-hours we rode through the Siberian countryside toward, and into Mongolia. The Soviet Union is massive in size and much of it is forest and unspoiled wilderness; miles and miles and acres and acres of birch trees. Never again will I see birch trees without remembering the beauty of Russia and, most particularly, the Siberian countryside.

Skirting around Lake Baikal, one of the largest and certainly the deepest lake in the world, we entered Mongolia and came to Ulan Bator. It was a trip into National Geographic. What is Mongolia? It is school children wearing white aprons and large smiles and playing the same games that our children play. It is music everywhere, and playing and singing together. It is Mongol dresses with ashes and boots, and it is horses and sheep, and camels, and a Buddhist monastery with the orange-robed lamas and the turning prayer wheels. It is the Gobi Desert that is the paradox of cold American Coca-Cola and ageless mountains of such rugged beauty that you feel you have been where time began; the Gobi desert of ice so cold and so thick that you can walk between its floes and disappear into its cold whiteness before coming out on the other edge; the Gobi Desert of sand dunes and sheep herders on patient camels that allow themselves to be ridden by this busload of curious foreigners. Mongolia is wondrous and different and gracious, and is an adventure. It could never be relegated to the name "trip."

Back to Irkutsk and a flight to Moscow that is longer than the flight from Helsinki to New York. overwhelms us. Moscow is full of green. A third of the city has been left in green, and birch trees are, once again, everywhere. Red Square is History. You stand and experience Russia. The Kremlin walls run along one side and form the backdrop for Lenin's tomb. The end is dominated by St. Basil's Cathedral, a many-domed, bright, beautiful building, and GUM. Department Store forms the other boundary. The cobblestone square seems to echo with parades and politics and, even at night, is filled with strolling people who range from lovers to soldiers, from old women to children who look solemnly at these strange visitors to their city.

Day sixteen we tour Helsinki and fly home. Home, how wonderful and how welcome! We all look the same, though very tired, but we are not the same. We have taken a wondrous trip together, and we have seen things and experienced things that will always be a part of us now. We listen to "our" music. We glory in "our" freedom. We indulge in "our" luxuries, but we remember Irene and smile with love. We remember the people who sang and played with us. We remember champagne at breakfast on a train passing Lake Baikal. We remember Lenin everywhere. We remember the desert and the mountains and the birches. We remember sixteen days when we learned and grew. We remember Russia.

"Russian ballet is spellbinding. We watched Swan lake being performed in Tashkent and each scene seemed a Degas painting come alive."

Gregg Winn Pappendick '85 returned to college in 1981 after a 26-year interruption. During her four years at Elon, she lost both her parents, and her husband was killed in an accident. Nevertheless, she finished her degree in philosophy with a perfect 4.0 average and was accepted by a number of graduate schools, including Harvard University. She requested a year's deferment from Harvard and is attending UNC-Chapel Hill and working part-time while she ponders her decision. She is the mother of three grown children.

Tryst with a Twist

The Rev. Fletcher C. Lester, '18, was among many Elon alumni who celebrated anniversaries in June, but his anniversary was quite out of the ordinary. Lester was married on June 17, 1984—his 90th birthday. His bride, Gertrude Dawson, was 77 years young! As if a wedding with a combined age of 167 years for the bride and groom were not enough, there was another detail that made their wedding different from most. It was a surprise wedding.

"No one knew," said Lester. "It was like running away to get married!"

"Only we were running into a crowd," his wife added, laughing.

When Lester's two daughters planned a 90th birthday party for their father on that Sunday in 1984, they did not know that they were also planning a reception for his wedding. Only four people knew about Lester's wedding plans: his wife's son and daughter-in-law who flew in from Atlanta, a reporter from The High Point Enterprise and Lester's son-in-law, Paul Robinson, who performed the ceremony.

Lester and Mrs. Dawson had been dating for over a year and their children knew of and approved of their intentions to marry, but did not know they had specific plans.

Lester preached at the regular church service at First Congregational Christian Church of Christ in High Point on June 17, 1984, and Robinson ended the service.

After the closing hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," Robinson asked that the congregation remain seated. Then, recalled Mrs. Lester, "Fletcher came down the aisle, walked me to the front of the congregation, and we were married before they knew it."

After the wedding the new Mrs. Lester told The Enterprise, "You don't have to be young to enjoy marriage. If we only have two weeks together it will be marvelous."

'69 Grad Makes History

Bart Shaw ranks among the leading young American historians, according to Dr. Robert Delp of the Elon Department of Social Science.

Shaw recently received the Fredrick Jackson Turner Award presented by the Organization of American Historians. The award, the organization's most prestigious, was given to Shaw as the author of the best first book published by an American historian.

His book, The Wool Hat Boy: Georgia's Populist Party, recreates the world and attitudes of the Georgia Populist Party in the nineteenth century.

"Shaw's book painstakingly recreates the world of the Georgia Populists, and in so doing overturns long accepted views about the nature of the people who made up that important branch of southern populism," said the Organization of American Historians committee that selected his book for the award.

Shaw shares the 1985 Fredrick Jackson Turner Award with Sean Wilentz, whose first book is Chants Democratic: New York City and the Rise of the American Working Class. The two books, "will change the way we look at nineteenth century America," said the committee.

Bart Shaw and Wilentz received a medal and a cash prize from the organization.

Shaw, being a loyal alumnus, wrote to several of his history professors to tell them of his award. In a letter to Dr. Durward Stokes, '64, he wrote, "You perhaps don't realize the profound influence you and your colleagues have had on me. In fact, I look upon you all as invaluable authors of the book."

After graduating from Elon, Shaw earned his master's degree at the University of Wisconsin. He received his Ph.D. at Emory University and is now a professor of history at Cedar Crest College in Allentown, Pa.

ELON COLLEGE HONOR ROLL OF HONORS 1984-85

1984-85 Annual Report

$7.3 million PRIDE campaign, new programs highlight year

On May 31, 1985, Elon College completed the most successful fund-raising campaign in its 96-year history. The PRIDE II Campaign, Providing Resources for Institutional Development at Elon, raised $7.3 million for improvements, endowments and operating expenses, substantially more than its original goal of $5.7 million.

"To exceed the goal is extremely gratifying," said President Fred Young. "It is an indication that alumni, parents and friends share our vision of overall excellence for Elon College."

"It is also a tribute to fine management of this campaign and the hard work on the part of many volunteers. We are grateful to all who made this accomplishment possible."

Dr. James B. Powell served as general chairman of the campaign. Other members of the steering committee included Ernest A. Koury, Sr., Major and Special Gifts Committee chairman; Royall H. Spence, Jr., Trustee Committee chairman; Dr. J. Earl Danieley, Area and Special Campaigns Committee chairman; and C.A. McIver, Burlington area chairman; Sherrill Hall, chairman of the Board of Trustees Development Committee; and David T. Rutledge, Public Relations Advisory Committee Chairman. Money for a new fine arts center was a major goal of the PRIDE II campaign. Campaign pledges and gifts which may be used for the new center totaled $2.8 million, enough to construct the first phase of the building, which consists of music classrooms and a recital hall.

College officials are now negotiating a plan that would allow construction of both phases of the center. The second phase consists of art and drama facilities and includes an auditorium. A decision on the construction plans and a date for ground-breaking are expected soon.

A $250,000 challenge grant from the Kresge Foundation played a key role in the fine arts center fund-raising. Elon donors gave $975,000 in response to the challenge.

PRIDE II gifts and pledges to the college endowment totaled over $2 million. This amount included scholarships, professorships, departmental endowments and a $250,000 addition to the Spence Library Endowment, a gift from Mr. Royall Spence, Sr. and the late Mrs. Spence, and Mr. and Mrs. Royall Spence, Jr. Sixty new scholarship endowments were established as a result of PRIDE II.

Nearly $1 million was raised for physical plant enhancements. This amount included gifts from Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Chandler, the late Reid Maynard and his wife, Grace Moore Maynard, and Mr. and Mrs. Royall Spence, Jr., to name Chandler, Maynard and Colclough Halls, respectively. The Bakatsias family of Burlington gave $50,000 to build a new soccer field which bears their name.

Finally $1.4 million was given to support the college's Annual Fund and Athletic Scholarship Fund during PRIDE II. Together, these funds provide general operating support for the total college, as well as scholarship funding for athletes.

The other big giving news of the year was the increase in the percentage of alumni making gifts to the college. In 1984-85 that figure rose to 38.7%, surpassing Duke, Wake Forest and Davidson and ranking Elon second in the state in percentage of alumni participation. More details may be found elsewhere in this issue. Two other giving records were established in 1984-85: Annual Fund gifts from alumni exceeded $100,000 for the first time and total private giving surpassed $2 million.

Admissions Standards Show Increase

In a speech outlining Centennial goals to the faculty in September 1984, President Fred Young announced that requirements for admission to Elon would be gradually raised over the next four years.

The first increment came in 1984, with a highly successful outcome. A slightly higher admission standard for entering 1984-85 students resulted in a substantial increase in the number of students rejected. Despite that fact, the college has a record enrollment of 2794.

Increases in the number of students applying for admission made that achievement possible. Since 1982 the number of applications received has risen over 40%, enabling the college to be more selective.

Standards were tightened again for the 1985-86 year. In July, 1985 rejections were running 70% higher than in July, 1984; however, with the increased number of applications, the enrollment for fall 1985 was expected to remain stable.

The strengthening of admission standards is a part of an overall goal to place the college "at the top among the private institutions in the state with similar missions" by the Centennial.

MBA, New Majors Added to Academic Program

The enrollment of the first students in Elon's MBA program and the addition of two new majors to the curriculum highlighted the 1984-85 academic year.

Local professionals and recent college graduates greeted the MBA program enthusiastically. Thirty degree candidates were admitted to the program in the fall and an additional nine in the spring, exceeding expectations for the first year. MBA classes are offered four evening each week; 36 semester-hours credit is required to earn the degree.

The communications program at Elon took another step forward in 1984 with the creation of majors in mass communication (radio and television) and journalism. A videotaping classroom in Mooney Building was converted into a full-fledged television production studio and equipment was purchased equivalent to that owned by most small television studios and many larger institutions.

Communications students went immediately into production. Throughout the year, they and their professors produced a weekly half-hour television show for local access cable channels entitled "Elon in Review."

The new journalism major is a modification of the previous English-journalism major, a strong program at Elon for many years. The addition of typesetting and word-processing capabilities is now enhancing the professional preparation of students in that field. Both new communications majors at Elon emphasize strong writing skills.

Perhaps the most exciting development of the academic year was the scheduling of Elon's first fall semester of foreign study.

Beginning in fall, 1985, Elon students will have the fall semester studying in London, England, all for the regular price of tuition, room and board, plus air fare.

Students will stay at a London hotel, take classes taught by British and American professors, have access to University of London library facilities and have plenty of time for extra travel. The popular Winter Term in England will continue to operate as in the past, giving Elon students a choice of foreign study opportunities.

Elon's teacher education program was reaccredited by the N.C. State Department of Public Instruction during the past year. In preparation for the reaccreditation visit, the Department of Education conducted an exhaustive self-study and made several changes. Among the new features: a full-semester of student teaching, a limited grades majors, sophomore level practicum, and a Curriculum Resources Center stocked with complete sets of state-adopted and supplementary texts, various teaching aids and a microcomputer with appropriate software. The changes keep Elon in the vanguard of current statewide efforts to ensure well-trained teachers.

Writing is no longer the property of the English department as a result of the successful implementation of Elon's writing-across-the-curriculum program in 1984-85. Following a kick-off workshop led by nationally known writing consultant Elaine Maimon, 33 faculty members representing all disciplines used writing assignments and activities as a way of teaching the subject matter in their field. The successful program has attracted the attention of other colleges and universities, and project

From the President

It is a pleasure to present the 1984-85 Elon College Honor Roll of Donors.

I encourage you to read the report on the year's activities that accompanies the Honor Roll. The accomplishments outlined in that report are the work of your gifts. Through your support of Elon College you are helping to fashion the best possible education for the young men and women enrolled here, one which prepares them for a career and for life.

We are indebted to you for your generosity to Elon. Your commitment increases our sense of responsibility and we pledge to you our best efforts to use your gifts thoughtfully and wisely.

Fred Young

director Dr. Whitney Vanderwerff has conducted a number of workshops to teach the writing-across-the-curriculum methods.

Religious, Cultural Life Programs Expand

To stimulate student interest and attendance, all Elon cultural and intellectual activities were centralized under the coordination of Dr. George Troxler during 1984-85. The result was an outstanding year featuring over 50 programs ranging from the N.C. Shakespeare Festival production of The Merry Wives of Windsor, which packed Whitley Auditorium, to a speech by Fatah Vision author Joe McGinnis, which drew an overflow crowd of nearly 700.

The religious life program also continued to grow during the past year. In addition to the many religious organizations which held regular meeting on campus, the new chaplain, Rev. Richard McBride, offered bi-weekly chapel services, a Wednesday morning devotion for faculty and staff, and vespers on Wednesday evenings.

Six new student organizations were added to the list of Elon student activities in 1984-85. They included Young Democrats and Young Republicans clubs, a commuter student organization and three departmental societies.

Physical Facility Grows to Keep Pace

To accommodate the growth in other areas, physical plant facilities were added, expanded and renovated during the past academic year. Three units housing 128 students were added to the Jordan Center complex, bringing to 428 the number of beds added at Elon in the past three years. Bakatsias Soccer Field was completed on the northern extreme of the campus, giving the Elon soccer team a superior playing facility.

Program facilities added in 1984-85 included a new greenhouse on the corner of O'Kelly and Lebanon Avenues, a television production studio/classroom in Mooney; the Curriculum Resources Center, also in Mooney; and a new computer lab and additional computer equipment in Alumnus Building. Moonelon Conference Center located near the college was purchased and renovated. Renamed The Lodge, that facility serves as a recreation and conference area for faculty, staff and students.

Also during the past year, the college installed its own telephone system, serving all faculty and staff offices and over 1200 students. New sections of brick walkways were added within the walled campus, and remodeling was done in Duke Building, both dining halls, Beck Pool, and the Special Collections Room of McEwen Library.

Elon Alumni Top Wake and Davidson

For the 1984-1985 fiscal year, 38.7 percent of all Elon alumni donated a record $100,000+ to the annual fund.

We did it! When the final figures were tallied, Elon College alumni found themselves in the top position among all coed colleges and universities in North Carolina in the percentage of alumni who make an annual donation to their school. Not only did the alumni topple Davidson and Wake Forest in gaining the top spot; they also claimed 1,000 new alumni donors for the third year in a row. During those three years, alumni participation increased an incredible 186 percent. Also, total donations to the Annual Fund in 1984-85 exceeded the $100,000 mark for the first time. That dollar amount represented a 64 percent increase over three years ago.

Elon's Director of Alumni Giving, Dr. Jerry R. Tolley, was elated.

"There is one thing for certain about Elon alumni," said Tolley. "They love a challenge and when one is issued they respond."

In establishing the record participation percentage, Elon's Golden Alumni led the way as 49 percent made donations. This elite group includes all those alumni who are members of the Class of '35 or earlier. For the second straight year the Class of '36 led all classes as it recorded a participation ratio of 72 percent. The Classes of '24, '25, and '38 followed closely with participation percentages of 67 percent, 63 percent, and 60 percent respectively. There were ten additional classes who gained over 50 percent participation. They were the Classes of '13, '14, '15, '17, '26, '27, '29, '34, '36, and '40. In all there were 45 classes whose participation ratio was 40 percent.

In the more recent classes, although not claiming the higher participation percentages, did establish a standard of their own as every class from 1969 to the present had over 100 donors. To see what your class's participation ratio is, see the Honor Roll of Donors.

Parents and friends of Elon also increased their level of support in 1984-85. In fact, 991 parents of currently enrolled students (38.5 percent) contributed over $33,000 to Elon.

Friends of the college continued their generous support to Elon as 1,171 friends made contributions, an 8 percent increase over the previous year.

In reviewing the annual giving year, James P. Elder, Jr., '60, 1984-1985 Annual Fund Chairman, stated, "This has indeed been a remarkable giving year for Elon College. I'm extremely proud of the alumni as they have set standards of giving, both in alumni participation and dollars donated. We can all be proud of beating both Wake Forest and Davidson and gaining the top spot in alumni participation among coed colleges and universities in North Carolina."

Zeta And Kappa Sigma Win In Greek Contest

The 1985 Greater Greek First Annual Alumni Participation Award was claimed by Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority with a record-setting 50.3 percent of their former sisters making a donation to the Elon College Annual Fund. Following close behind was the Kappa Sigma Fraternity, who recorded 84 percent increase in donors over the previous year. Their second-place percentage of participation was 49.7 percent.

The Phi Mu and Sigma Sigma Sororities both gained a participation percentage of 48.6. Alpha Sigma Alpha sisters were fourth in the sorority race as 48.3 percent of their alumnae made gifts. Their 103 percent participation increase over the previous year gave them the lead over all Greeks in the increased performance category.

In the fraternity race, the Kappa Alpha-Kappa Psi Nu boys came in second with a 47.9 percent participation ratio, edging out the Tau Kappa Epsilon brothers who stood at 44.3 percent. Sigma Phi Epsilon and Sigma Pi recorded 40.8 percent and 40.5 percent respectively.

The race for the Greek Participation Award was much closer than antipicated. In fact a margin of only four donors separated Sigma Sigma Sigma, Phi Mu, Alpha Sigma Alpha, and Kappa Sigma from receiving the winner's trophy.

Although not eligible for the award the old Iota Tau Kappa Fraternity turned in the best performance overall as 55.8 percent of these alumni donations. For 1984-85 fiscal year, total Greek participation was an impressive 47 percent, 10 percent higher than the percentage for all alumni.

Dr. Jerry R. Tolley, Elon's Director of Corporate and Annual Resources was most pleased with the performance of the Greek alumni and stated: "The First Annual Greater Greek Participation Challenge was a grand success. In fact, it was through their significant increase in participation that Elon is claiming the number one position among all the coed colleges and universities in North Carolina. The fraternities and sororities increased their percentages of participation from 31.9 percent in 1983-1984 to 47 percent in 1984-1985. We congratulate them on their outstanding record."

GIVING CLUBS

Special recognition is given to Elon College donors who make significant gifts for the Annual Fund, academic scholarships and awards, academic program support, endowment, and capital projects. Membership in the ORDER OF THE OAK is awarded to alumni and friends who have contributed $100,000 to Elon through the new ELON LIFE FOR ENDOWMENT PROGRAM. The CHAIRMAN'S COUNCIL of donors who have given $5,000 or more. Membership in the PRESIDENT'S CLUB is extended to those individuals who contribute $1000-$4999. A contribution of $500-$999 entitles donors to membership in the OAK CLUB. The A.L. HOOK CLUB membership consists of those who have contributed $100-$499. The amount of an individual's total gifts for all eligible purposes during the fiscal year ending May 31, 1985 determines the qualifications for giving club membership.

The Holmes Endowment Fund: Better Things through Chemistry

Today, G. Thomas Holmes is a retired executive of the Aluminum Company of America (ALCOA) and a member of the Elon College Board of Trustees.

Holmes, as has so many other Elon grads, built upon the solid and credible preparation he received in a traditionally strong program for a highly successful career as a chemical engineer. That solid foundation helped propel him into the top echelons of one of America's largest firms.

Now, through the G. Thomas Holmes and Gladys Wright Holmes Endowment for Chemistry with a funding of $75,000, that department will be better equipped than ever for preparing chemistry majors who plan to pursue graduate studies or who seek to enter the workforce.

Income from the endowment becomes available for use for the first time during the 1985-86 academic year. According to terms of the endowment, income will be used for the benefit of the department to prepare pre-engineering students for admittance to professional engineering schools. Any funds not spent for those purposes will revert to the endowment principal.

According to Dr. J. Earl Danieley, Thomas E. Powell, Jr., Professor, the money comes at a propitious time.

"The cost of scientific equipment has increased very rapidly within the last few years," he said. "In the first place, there is much instrumentation considered essential in the undergraduate program which did not exist a few years ago. Equipment which has been standard in the laboratory for years now costs two to three times the prices of a few years ago."

Further, Dr. Danieley continued, "College and universities are finding it difficult to underwrite the cost of all the needed equipment for work in the natural sciences. Elon is very fortunate to have this endowment fund to supplement our other resources and to use it in our efforts to provide modern, state-of-the-art equipment for our students."

There are many ways Elon alumni can help their alma mater in the highly competitive field of education. The generosity of Tommy Holmes, class of '39, and of Gladys Wright Holmes, class of '41, certainly enhances Elon's position for attracting quality students.

The Lineberger Scholarship Fund: An Excellent Match

Mrs. Virginia Lineberger Rogers of Charlotte, a member of the class of 1932, and her husband, Hurley D. Rogers, decided in 1983 to make a gift to Elon that would honor her parents. The resulting Luther A. and Georgia V. Lineberger Scholarship Fund at Elon is an excellent example of how a family can work through a matching gift program to establish a fitting memorial to a loved one.

The Lineberger connections with Elon are strong. Four of the Lineberger children attended Elon College. In addition to Mrs. Rogers, the others were her sisters, Mrs. Mary L. White (Mary E. Lineberger '31) and Mrs. Margaret E. Rogers (Margaret E. Lineberger '31), and a brother, L. Alexander Lineberger, Jr. '38. His wife, Emma Woodson '37, also attended Elon.

As a retired official of the Exxon Corporation, Mr. Rogers qualified under the matching gift program of the Exxon Educational Foundation, today, because Mr. and Mrs. Rogers made use of the opportunity afforded by the foundation, the Luther A. and Georgia V. Lineberger Memorial Scholarship Fund is already established and students are receiving more substantial benefits than would have been possible without the Exxon participation in the gift.

Many of the nation's leading corporations, convinced that support of higher education is important, encourage employees to contribute to their alma maters through matching gift programs. These programs, in many instances, make it possible for alumni to establish significant memorials quickly and efficiently. Through matching gifts, donors can increase the value of their contributions considerably.

Some 902 Elon alumni—nearly 10%—are eligible for participation in matching gifts programs sponsored by their employers.

The Cannon Foundation: Helping to Build Excellence

When he established a foundation in 1943, textile giant Charles Cannon could not have known that his charitable institution would assist Elon College in becoming "A Force of Infinite Possibilities." However, the success of the foundation. Over several decades the millions of dollars generated by the college from private foundations have given Elon a qualitative "edge," and the Cannon foundation has been one of its most steady benefactors.

Mr. Cannon envisioned his foundation as having broad goals placing principal emphasis upon medical care, community funds, higher and secondary education, youth agencies, and church support. In addition, he anticipated that the foundation's activities would be confined largely to North Carolina.

The Cannon Foundation, a substantial benefactor of Elon for many years, has met its founder's expectation through the awarding of scholarships and capital improvement grants to the institution. Its gift of $50,000 toward the construction of the fine arts center is the latest illustration of its generosity.

Today, under the presidency of Mrs. Miriam C. Hayes, Mr. Cannon's daughter, the foundation continues to provide support to North Carolina institutions of higher education. Elon is proud to be included among these.

The Value of Careful Estate Planning: An Example

By Frank Proffitt

Elon College graduate Archibald (Archie) F. Fleming (A.B. 1940) loved Elton and left a sizable bequest to the college when he died in 1979. But after noting the gift, the striking thing that came from a study of his will was how carefully it was drawn and how thoroughly he had developed his estate plan before it was written.

Archie and his wife, Mary Ruth, prudently made separate wills but jointly agreed on their objectives. Consequently many of the provisions were alike or similar in both wills, but each will was drafted to minimize taxes, legal fees, and administrative costs and to protect as much as possible against erosion of the estate.

Archie's will was premised on the actuarial expectation that Mary Ruth would outlive him. Therefore, his will was written so as to take maximum advantage of the marital deduction and to instruct his Executor that necessary costs and taxes should be paid out of the portion of his residuary estate which was not included in the share qualifying for the marital deduction. Also, the will provided for beneficiaries to receive full benefits, with taxes paid by the Executor from the estate.

After certain specific bequests were made to family members and friends, the will provided for the residuary estate to be conveyed, in trust, to a designated bank and trust company for purposes which were spelled out in sufficient detail. Since the couple had no children, the single most important objective was to ensure that Mary Ruth would have the income she needed after Archie's death. To accomplish this objective, the will provided that all of the net income from the trust should be paid to Mary Ruth, or applied for her benefit, during her lifetime. Also, the Trustee was authorized to apply as much of the principal as was necessary to meet her reasonable needs if, in his sole discretion, the income from all sources should become insufficient to take care of her.

Mary Ruth died in 1984 and, in accordance with a provision in the will, the trust was terminated, and the estate is in the process of being settled. The trust principal and any accumulated income will eventually be distributed to designated beneficiaries, in keeping with Archie's wishes, as set forth in the will. As indicated in the beginning, Elton College is one of these beneficiaries and has already received one significant distribution from the estate.

Other distributions will follow as the settlement process progresses. This will eventually amount to one of the largest bequests Elton has ever received. Archie Fleming was a true alumnus who believed in the value of education, and he wanted to invest a large share of his estate in the futures of worthy young people by helping them to get a college education at Elton.

From Ohio to Elon: Support for the Fine Arts Center

The support of businesses and corporations—area, state and national—is crucial to Elon's success.

During the recent PRIDE II campaign, a total of 79 corporations made major donations, helping to push the college well over its $5.7 million goal to a total of $7.3 million.

The majority of these corporate gifts came from locally owned Alametake County corporations. Local corporations have long been among the college's most generous benefactors and have made much of the institution's progress possible. A significant number of PRIDE II corporate gifts, however, were made by firms operating locally but owned by a national corporation. In these cases, the local company, through its chief executive officer, received approval of the gift through the national headquarters.

Ametek-Lamb Electric Division of Graham, N.C., is one example. The divisional headquarters are in Kent, Ohio, and the plant in Graham has been operating for the past seven years.

Ametek, a Fortune 500 company with sales last year of more than $1.5 billion dollars, has been listed on the New York Stock Exchange since 1930 and is a diversified manufacturer with 30 plants throughout the United States. The Graham Plant specializes in high-tech motors used in computers and business machines and produces blowers for high efficiency furnaces.

When PRIDE II volunteer C.A. McIver '36 called on Ametek's local plant manager, Donald T. Coward, he indicated that he was interested in having his company support the college. A proposal was presented to the Ametek Foundation, Inc., and the result was a $20,000 commitment to the proposed Fine Arts Center at Elon.

The Ametek-Lamb Electric Division gift is one example of corporate support that has helped to make Elon a vital and progressive college.

The following four stories are true. The individuals were students at Elon when they needed help.

Student A is married to a minister, is 36 years old and has four children. The family has a very modest income. The student previously attended a community college and performed excellently. When she transferred to Elon, she was awarded a $2,000 academic scholarship in conjunction with other aid. With this help, she was able to stay in school. At the end of the first semester she had a 3.7 grade average as a mathematics major.

Student B comes from a family of modest means, also. She was awarded a $2,200 academic scholarship and a $1,500 music scholarship. She also received an outside scholarship of $500 because of her potential. At the end of the fall semester she had a 3.6 grade point average. The scholarship aid has enabled her to stay in school without incurring loan debts.

Student C's father was a United Church of Christ minister. The father died before his son could enroll at Elon. The mother's income is derived from Social Security. The son received the discount Elon accords to children of UCC ministers plus a $1,500 academic scholarship and help from several Navy organizations. The son has been able to stay in school without taking his mother's resources and without running up a large debt.

Student D, an orphan, transferred to Elon from a community college. He received a football scholarship and other aid to help him attend Elon. Despite his background of deprivation, he has become a successful student. Scholarship funds enable him to continue as a student at Elon where he will receive preparation for a life and career he might never have known otherwise. These four students all have a common goal—a college education. They also have a common problem—lack of money.

Today's students can still find work to help pay their way but usually it is impractical for them to try to hold down full time jobs. That means their money must come from elsewhere—perhaps a federal grant, but Congress is cutting in to those sharply. Meanwhile, the cost of a college education continues to rise.

ELON COLLEGE STUDY ABROAD

Elon Enrolls Largest and Brightest Student Body

Elon College has begun its 96th academic year by enrolling the largest and best-prepared freshman class in its history.

Official statistics indicate that 2929 students signed up for fall semester classes, the ninth consecutive increase in enrollment for the college. Academically, this year's freshman class is superior to all previous classes. Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores for freshmen are up an average of 50 points from two years ago, admissions officials report.

Joanne Soliday, dean of admissions, called the SAT increase "incredible."

"Normally it takes a college several years to achieve even a small increase," said Soliday.

Soliday attributed the success in part to increased interest in Elon.

"The word is getting out what a great school this is," said Soliday.

"The number of applications we receive has increased 40 percent over the past two years. This allows us to be more selective."

Elon has been raising admissions standards two years ago as a part of a series of goals for the college's Centennial Year, 1989. "We are not a university," said President Young in announcing the goals. "Neither is it our role to educate solely the academically elite. But we can and should aim for the top among the private institutions in the state with missions similar to ours."

The 1985-86 Elon students hail from 29 states, the District of Columbia and 12 foreign countries.

Only 46 percent of the full-time students are from North Carolina, and college officials expressed both satisfaction and concern over that figure, which is down from 58 percent five years ago.

"The nature of the Elon student body is obviously changing," said Dr. Fred Young, "and the change has both positive and negative implications."

"The increasing number of out-of-state students means that Elon is less provincial and that opportunities here are more diverse."

"On the other hand, the decrease in North Carolina enrollment means that the college is moving away from its traditional enrollment base, which involves risk. An aggressive state tuition program is any one of the states from which we recruit heavily could greatly and immediately reduce our enrollment." Young attributed the decrease chiefly to cost factors.

"Within North Carolina, Elon has difficulty competing with the cost of tuition at the state-supported universities," said Young. "Outside the state, however, students and parents consider Elon an excellent buy in education—good quality at a low cost."

With a current tuition of $3500, Elon is among the lowest-priced of all private colleges in its recruiting area. The North Carolina Legislative Tuition Grant of $950 reduces the cost to $2550 for all North Carolina residents attending Elon. Tuition at the state-supported schools averages slightly less than $1000.

As is traditional, twenty-five percent of Elon's 1985-86 students are from Virginia. Twelve percent are from the Maryland-New Jersey area.

Over one-half of the students chose to live on campus, creating a familiar housing crunch. At the beginning of the semester, 74 students had to be housed temporarily at a local motel. More than half of them have since been moved to campus residence halls, and space is expected to be available for the remainder by the end of the fall semester.

97th Freshman Class Gets to Know Elon

By Meredith Lee '86

Car doors slammed, trunk lids groaned open and parents braced themselves as young faces sported smiles of nervous anticipation—Orientation Week for students had begun.

On September 1, Carole Ann Barnett, a freshman from Pinebrook, New Jersey, was feeling the apprehensions of most students, she was looking forward to school, but did not want to leave her family.

"When we pulled the car around to unload it, my mother was telling me how worried she was about leaving me here so far away from home," said Barnett. "Then some cute soccer players came to move my stuff into my dorm and she said, 'I think you're going to like it here.'"

The orientation guide the freshmen received defined orientation as "finding out just where you are and why." During the three-day period the students not only learned where to find Mooney building, but also where to find the resources within themselves to make the most of their college careers.

The Sunday the students arrived was filled with moving, unpacking, meeting advisors and administrators and Opening Convocation. Monday brought the new freshmen more than most bargained for, a morning lecture on academics. After a day of smiles of welcome, Dr. John S. Sullivan's lecture, "Vision and Commitment," was quite a shock.

In the lecture, Dr. Sullivan told the students that they need to commit themselves to listening well and learning well. He asserted that during high school, the students cut class, came unprepared, did not participate in class, cheated or were aware of cheating, crammed for tests and ran away from their problems. Dr. Sullivan went on to tell them that college is the chance to break their bad habits of uncommitted learning and running from problems.

"In my speech, I was knocking them down to prove my point," said Dr. Sullivan. "Then I picked them up, brushed them off and sent them on their way." He said that he has had a positive response from the students about the lecture. "I want to give them the support they need to overcome the bad patterns they created," he said. "I want them to look at what they will do with college and what they're about."

"I thought the speech was really good, because 75 percent of it was true," said Russell Bull, a freshman from Parkville, Virginia. Bull noted that the speech had an important message for every freshman at Elon.

Tuesday's academic convocation, "Analysis of a Rock Video," was sponsored by the General Studies Program. It held a lighter message than the first academic convocation. The purpose of the program, according to Dr. Bill Rich, director of the General Studies Program, was to show how something that the freshmen were familiar with like a rock video could be approached from different perspectives.

The freshmen viewed a rock video, and then Dr. Rich and a panel of three faculty members led a discussion on the theme and meaning of the video. The panel gave three perspectives of the video, a sociological view, a feminist view, and a journalistic view, and then invited group discussion. "I want the freshmen to understand that general studies courses help them gain different perspectives of issues which lead to a better understanding," said Dr. Rich.

David Atkins, director of student activities, planned the 1985 orientation schedule. "I think the orientation program went well, from the students finding their dorms and moving in, to the two academic convocations."

Student Carole Barnett added, "Orientation was great. Everyone was friendly and helpful during a difficult time for me."

Twenty-two New Faculty Join Elon

Elon began the 1985-86 academic year with 22 new full-time faculty members. They included Dr. Ellen Barney Williams, granddaughter of the late professor John W. Barney, and a new chairman for the fine arts department, Dr. Paul Bravender. Dr. Bravender replaces Don Gibson, who resigned in the spring to become dean of music at Baylor University in Texas.

Degrees of the new faculty range from Oxford and The University of Edinburgh to Purdue, Michigan State, and the University of Chicago. Three received their undergraduate degrees at Elon.

"This new group is, as a whole, the largest, best-prepared and most experienced faculty hired in many years," said Dr. Chris White, vice president for academic and student affairs. I think Elon will be significantly enhanced by their knowledge and skills."

Letter to the Editor

My dear Friend:

I received the Elon Magazine yesterday with the article by Moses Crutchfield about me. I think he did a good job and I appreciate it very much. It's quite true that "I love Elon," and I'm always happy with its success.

Thanks for giving the idea and space for my being remembered. And the selection of the author was splendid. I remember Moses quite well as a student, and he was always a warm, lovable personality, which still exists.

With very much appreciation, and thanks to all concerned, I extend my best wishes.

"May the good Lord bless and keep you, cause his face to shine on you, and give you perfect peace."

God bless you.

J.D. Messick, Ph.D.
 (and Litt. D. 1948 from Elon)

Faculty Urges Divestment

The Elon College faculty has passed a resolution calling for the college to divest all its financial resources from corporations doing business with South Africa.

The resolution, sponsored by Dr. Bruce Waller and passed at the Oct. 4 faculty meeting, calls for the "complete divestment within two years, of all funds with those corporations with direct investments in South Africa..."

In addition, the resolution states that the South African system of apartheid is opposed to the college's commitment to "recognition of the intrinsic worth of all individuals."

The resolution also refers to previous recommendation from the national synod of the United Church of Christ asking all groups associated with the church to divest. This plea extends to all affiliated institutions such as Elon College.

The Investment Committee of the Board of Trustees asked the Elon staff in the spring to prepare a report on investments the college holds with companies who do business in South Africa. The Investment Committee's recommendation will be presented to the full board at its meeting on October 23.

In a recent interview with the Burlington Daily Times-News, President Fred Young stated that it was appropriate for the faculty and trustees to consider this issue.

"Precisely what kind of statement to make is the problem," Young said. "Do you totally disinvest; do you disinvest from companies that do business with companies doing business in South Africa, or do you do it according to the Sullivan Principles?"

The Sullivan Principles are a widely accepted set of criteria to which businesses should adhere or risk disinvestment.

Whatever the board decides at its October meeting, recent sanctions imposed by President Reagan and any future action taken by the U.S. government might make any action by the college "moot" according to Dr. Young.

College Mourns Brittain's Death

By Bob Moser '85

Elon College suffered a great loss this summer with the death of Dr. Mary Gates Brittain, an assistant professor of English who had been with the college since 1976. She had fought a year-long battle with cancer before her death at age 52.

Brittain was a dedicated and learned professor, but what stood out in her years at Elon were her many other activities. Involved in a great number of campus organizations, she devoted exceptional amounts of time and energy to these "interests." She served as advisor to the yearbook, Phi Psi Cili, for several years, was active in Omicron Delta Kappa, and was president of The Beta Omega chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, an honor society for women educators. Her professional interests included the Modern Language Association, the Southeastern Renaissance Conference, the English Speaking Union, and the Order of the Eastern Star.

Even with all her commitments, Brittain saved much of her time for what she probably considered her main "interest," and certainly one of her greatest loves—the sisters of Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority. She served as advisor to the sorority for six years, and lovingly came to know the sisters as "her girls." As sorority president Sandra Perry said, "It was just like having a mom at school. She was more than just our advisor; she was our friend." The sorority has established a scholarship fund in memory of Dr. Brittain, and contributions can be sent to the sorority.

Dr. Brittain was born Mary Lou Gates in 1933 in the small town of Timpon, Texas. Married at 16 to Eugene Brittain, who died this year, she still managed to become the first in her family to go to college, later earning her Ph.D. in English from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Dr. Mary Brittain's untimely death was mourned by faculty, students, and former students alike. As Chaplain Richard McBride said in his tribute to her, "Praise be to God that we have seen in Mary's manner of living that life can be both gentle and good, competent and inspiring."

Mary Cosby Speaks at Fall Worship Service

Mary Cosby, a founding member of the Church of the Saviour in Washington, D.C., was the guest speaker at the annual college/community fall worship service on October 1.

Mrs. Cosby's message was entitled "Borrowing God's Eyes." Her discussion centered around Christian attitudes which enable us to achieve a greater global understanding. The Reverend Richard McBride, Elon College chaplain, said that the message was in keeping with his goal for the year—"to enlarge our perspective and gain greater understanding of the problems of the world."

Mrs. Cosby founded the Church of the Saviour 40 years ago along with her husband, Gordon, and a friend, Elizabeth O'Connor. The mission of the church is to serve the homeless, infirm, elderly, immigrant mothers with babies, the unemployed and children in Washington, D.C.'s inner-city. In addition to the church work, Mrs. Cosby is a lecturer, teacher and retreat leader. She frequently speaks on issues such as the relationship between activism in the world and spirituality.

Future events at the college centering on this theme include a "Teach-In on South Africa" planned for the spring of 1986.

Central America Teach-In Raises Awareness

A teach-in on the people, issues and conflicts in Central America was held on the Elon campus September 16-18.

The three-day event was a joint effort by college chaplain Richard McBride and the General Studies program to increase public awareness of the peoples and conflicts in Central America.

Presentations began with the play A Peasant of El Salvador on Monday night. Other features included a chapel service conducted by Ann Calvin Rogers-Witte, pastor of Community United Church of Christ in Raleigh. She shared her experiences in Central America during the service and in an afternoon slide presentation.

The highlight of the teach-in centered around the opposing viewpoints presented by two of the speakers, William Schofield and Reed Brody.

Schofield, representing the U.S. State Department Latin America Bureau, emphasized that the warfare between the Sandinista government of Nicaragua and the American-backed Contra rebels is not a confrontation the U.S. has created.

Schofield disputed the charge that the Reagan administration is interested only in a military solution to the strife. He claimed that for every U.S. dollar given Central Americans for military purposes, three dollars of aid go toward economic development.

Reed Brody, former assistant attorney general of New York state, led a four-month fact-finding mission to Nicaragua in 1984. His perception of American aid was quite different from Schofield's presentation.

Brody discovered during his stay in Nicaragua that the contras were not fighting the government or the army, but instead were making ruthless attacks on civilians. These same contras have been given $100 million in direct aid from the U.S. in four years, according to Brody.

A Real Long Shot

Do you think kids bring only their hair dryers, popcorn poppers and irons to school? Tom Mays '88 brought his own cannon—a replica of a Civil War cannon which he and his father made. But it's for a good cause. Now every Elon touchdown is capped by cannon fire.

Alumni

Sanford Named Alumni Director

Susie Bullard Sanford '79, whose Elon roots go back to the college's earliest years, has been appointed Director of Alumni and Parent Programs.

In her new position, Sanford will be in charge of planning activities designed to secure the interest and loyalty of alumni, parents and students. She will plan activities such as homecoming, alumni chapter meetings, alumni weekend, parents weekend, and class reunions.

Sanford is enthusiastic about her appointment. "My primary goal is to keep alumni and parents involved and interested in Elon," she noted.

"I am confident that Susie will make great contributions to the college because she has the qualities that will help her become an integral part of the development program at Elon," said Dr. Jo Watts Williams, vice president for development. "Susie already is familiar with Elon after working here as an accountant. Another of her strong points is her family's rich tradition of Elon graduates."

Sanford's grandfather, Dr. J.E. Rawls, class of 1896, and her grandmother, Emma Holland Rawls, class of 1902, began the Elon tradition that has lasted four generations. A total of 36 members of Sanford's family attended Elon. Four members were on the Elon College Board of Trustees: her grandfather, father, the late Dr. George M. Bullard of Mebane; great-aunt, Susie Holland; and uncle, Dr. J.E. Rawls, Jr. Her mother, Margaret Rawls Bullard, was a member of the class of 1946, and two brothers and a sister, Thomas Perry Bullard II, Dr. George Minson Bullard Jr., and Ann Rawls Bullard, are recent graduates.

After graduating from Elon with a degree in business administration, Sanford worked part time while earning her degree in accounting. She began working as an accountant for Elon in 1982. Her husband, Ronnie Sanford, is a sales representative for Redman Industries.

Snyder '45 Honored at Celebration

Dr. Walstein W. "Wally"

Snyder '45 celebrated his 25th anniversary as executive director of Elon Home for Children on Thursday, August 1, at a surprise reception and dinner at Best Western Restaurant in Burlington. Dr. Snyder's wife, Nell, was also honored by the Board of Trustees for her service to the Home and support of her husband while he has served as executive director.

Over 220 people attended the event. Present and former board members and staff, Elon Home alumni, representatives from the many public and private organizations with which the Home works, and many friends and family paid tribute to Dr. Snyder.

Dr. Fred Young represented Elon College and made a brief address as part of the program.

At the conclusion of the program, Dr. Isabelle Powell, president-elect of the Elon Home for Children's Board of Directors, presented Dr. Snyder with a gold ring and Mrs. Snyder with a gold pendant, which were gifts from the Board, staff, and alumni.

Dr. Snyder grew up in Elkton, Virginia. He attended Elon College graduating in the class of 1945. In 1950 he received his B.D. from Duke University and in 1964 was awarded an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree by Elon College.

He came to Elon Home for Children in Elon College after serving as a minister for the United Church of Christ. During his tenure as executive director, the Home has established a sound financial base and has expanded to include two group homes, The Oaks in Burlington, and Turner Memorial Group in Suffolk, Virginia. In January 1985 Boys Town of North Carolina in Charlotte merged with Elon Home for Children. Dr. Snyder was instrumental in effecting the merger. Under Dr. Snyder's leadership, the Home has attained national recognition.

Two Alumni Chapters Meet

Suffolk/Tidewater Virginia Chapter

The Suffolk/Tidewater Virginia Chapter sponsored a pool party on Saturday, August 3, at the Suffolk Swimming Pool. Although unusually cool weather prevented participants from swimming, more than 50 area alumni enjoyed socializing with their college friends. Arrangements for the party were made by Betty Jean '76 and Terry '71 Crigger, and Mopsi '75 and Henry '71 Fittman. Local alumni who assisted in promoting the event were Jane '78 and Rusty '78 Smith, Perry-Lou '77 and Mickey '77 Leggett, Kay and Donnie '69 Goldberg, Marcia '80 and Steve '82 Humphrey, Dickie Whitmore '82, Tina and Blair '83 Thompson, Wanda '77 and Les '77 Hall, Debbie '77 and Jay '78 Butler, Wellington Saecker '41, Cheryl '78 and Barry '79 Oliver, and Trisha '74 and Steve '73 Doucette. The college was represented by John Bangley '84, Director of Athletic Fund Raising. (Chapter President: Betty Jean Crigger 804/934-0250)

Greater Charlotte Chapter

On Wednesday, September 11, the Greater Charlotte Chapter hosted a dinner party at the Charlotte Athletic Club. About 30 guests enjoyed cocktails and a delicious steak dinner. Speaker Mackey Carden, Elon's head football coach, discussed the prospects for the 1985 Fighting Christians. Stan '78 and Martha '79 Butler organized the event. Those who helped to spread the word were Patricia Hook '47 and Gene Neal, Lib and Bob '44 Johnston, Olivia and Woody '38 Wilson, Jeanne Hook '45 and "Ace" '48 Harrell, and John Nichols '65. The college was represented by Susie Bullard Sanford '79, Director of Alumni & Parent Programs, John Bangley '84, Director of Athletic Fund Raising, and Dr. Jerry Tolley, Director of Corporate and Annual Resources. Walker Heads Annual Fund

Zachary T. Walker III, president of Oakhurst Textiles in Greensboro has been selected chairman of Elon College's 1985-86 Annual Fund Campaign.

Walker's selection was announced by Dr. Jerry Tolley, director of annual and corporate giving. "Zac" Walker has had a strong interest in the college since his graduation in 1960," noted Tolley. Currently Walker serves as president of the executive committee of the Alumni Association and as a member of the Presidential Board of Advisers.

Walker also has an impressive family history with Elon. His uncle was "Peahead" Walker, coach and athletic director until 1937. Walker's father, Zachary T. Walker, Jr., a 1930 graduate, was the quarterback during his senior year and played on "Peahead's" Walker's team. Both men have been inducted into the Elon Sports Hall of Fame.

"Zac" Walker III '60

In a letter to Alumni, Walker proudly announced that Elon now ranks as number one in alumni participation among all co-ed college and universities in North Carolina. In light of this record, his challenge to fellow alumni is "to lead Elon's alumni giving to an all time high."

The 1985-86 campaign goal is $350,000. In order to meet this impressive goal, Walker urges every donor who has ever made a donation in the past to make a contribution this year. In making inquiries about past donations, Walker discovered that last year 15 classes had over 50% participation; 45 classes had over 40% participation. Walker has set the 50% participation mark as his goal for all classes for 1985-86.

In addition, special attention will be paid to three classes, randomly by Ronald H. Hart, Jr.

A 19-year-old history major at Elon College is leading an effort to restore one of the few remaining antebellum churches in the Winston-Salem area.

Michael Perdue, now a college junior, began working in 1981 to restore the Wentworth United Methodist Church to its original condition. The church was dedicated in 1859.

It is an area of North Carolina peppered with large tobacco fields on gently rolling hills. Life is slow-paced in Wentworth, with a strong sense of community.

Since most parishioners are older, Perdue is finding it necessary to look outside the community for support for his project.

Although it is challenging, it is work that he enjoys.

"I've been interested in history all my life, especially church history," he said. "I have roots (in the community) going back to 1836 and a strong personal interest in this church."

Perdue was the most likely candidate to organize the renovation, according to the other members of the small congregation. So, they gave him the responsibility of doing the project.

When the building was erected, slavery was still practiced and social interaction between the sexes was strictly regulated. These social conventions influenced the construction of the building.

Originally, the slaves had to sit in the balcony, which could only be reached from an exterior door on the side of the church. That way they would never enter the sanctuary.

A wooden partition extended from the back wall of the church all the way to the front pew. Not only did men and women have to sit on separate sides of the sanctuary, they had to enter through separate doors.

To learn about the history of the church, Perdue interviewed the older members and searched records in Charlotte and at Duke University, as well as the church's own records.

selected, in a pilot project to challenge the giving record of the class of 1937. That class can boast a remarkable 72% participation in the Annual Fund drive.

The classes challenged this year are: 1974, Nathaniel W. Harrison, Jr., president; 1964, Dr. K. Wayne Pruitt, president; and 1957, Donald B. Johnson, president.

Walker hopes that these special efforts to increase alumni giving will move Elon close to its real dream: to be number one among all colleges and universities in the Southeast in alumni participation.

Wooten's Runback: A Legend at Elon

"Once in a lifetime!" A quarter of a century after it happened those four words were George Wooten's immediate reaction to the mention of a touchdown he scored for Elon College in a 13-12 victory against Catawba in 1960. But it was more than just a touchdown.

Here was the scene: Catawba led Elon 12-7, with eight seconds to play in the game and had the ball at Elon's seven-yard line. It was fourth down, and the options for Wooten were either to run a play and kill all but the last couple of seconds or kick a field goal for a sure victory.

Catawba called timeout to talk over the situation and decided to get more points with a field goal.

At that point, Catawba's world ended, and the world of George Wooten, Elon and thousands of students and alumni who had gathered for Homecoming Day exploded in a starburst of ecstasy.

Catawba's center did not make a good snap, the holder made an even worse placement and the kick sailed off to the right, nowhere near the goal posts, and didn't even have enough steam to go over the end line.

"I was lined up on the left side of the end zone, just in case—just in case by some sliver of a chance the ball might be slicked to my side. We had another man stationed on the other side of the end zone for the same reason," says Wooten.

The fates continued to conspire against Catawba—and for Elon.

Forgetting that a short field goal could be run out of the end zone just like a punt, the Catawba players never even covered the ball.

"I caught it about two yards from the back line," Wooten remembers, "and as I looked upfield, I couldn't believe that I had an alley about 15 yards wide. I just took off, and no one even touched me until I got to the end zone, and one of my teammates darn near killed me."

"When we looked at the films on Monday, the Catawba players were shown watching me like I was some kind of idiot, running so hard past them," he adds. "None of them even moved to get at me."

Of course, Catawba later claimed that an official blew a whistle and they thought the play was dead, hence they didn't give chase. Not so, says Wooten.

"There was no whistle because if they had heard one, then I would have heard one, and I wouldn't have run like 108 yards for nothing!" he says. "Heck, at that point all of us felt the game was over, and all Catawba had to do was to run out the clock. When we saw them line up for the field goal, we didn't like it. We felt they were trying to rub our noses in it."

The following year when the two teams played at Catawba, and Catawba attempted another field goal, Wooten lined up in the end zone again.

"This time, though, they sent a couple of guys out to cover the area as soon as the ball was kicked," he says with a laugh.

The feat is a legend at Elon, passed down each year, and everyone knows all of the details. There are also about a half million people, among the several thousand who actually were there, who claim to have witnessed that miracle.

"My son's football coach has told his team about it as a good example of never giving up, never believing any game is over until the final gun," says Wooten, who works for the Navy as a personnel specialist and now lives in Virginia Beach. "And he's correct. I should know."

Elon

restaurant business means success

by Deborah H. Crotts

The restaurant business is highly competitive. It demands not only substantial investment of money, time and energy, but also a flair for satisfying the whims of an all-too-fickle public, always on the lookout for the new and unusual. Two Elon College alumni, however, are carving quite a niche for themselves in this exacting field. Donald Keith Hall '72 and William Rex Harrison '66 are both successful and innovative restaurateurs.

Keith Hall's involvement with the restaurant business began with a job as a dishwasher for Le Chateau in Burlington. He held this job while he attended Elon College, juggling work and studies to make room for football practice and his wife and young daughter. From a position as dishwasher, he rapidly progressed to management trainee in 1972, then to store manager in that same year, area manager in 1973, regional manager in 1974, vice president of operations in 1975, and finally, to senior vice president in 1977. At that point he was the second in command in the Le Chateau organization and was not yet 30 years old!

Le Chateau had also grown from a single restaurant in Burlington, NC., to a chain of 26 restaurants which were sold to the food company Green Giant in 1977 and then to Pillsbury less than a year later. Keith stayed with Le Chateau as their senior vice president and ran the franchise for Pillsbury for two years, building the chain from 26 to 52 restaurants. Pillsbury, which also owned Steak and Ale, decided to convert Le Chateaus to Steak and Ale or sell them individually. Keith helped oversee the sale of the restaurants and earned enough money to finance his own venture: T.K. Tripps.

T.K. Tripps was Keith's first brainchild. With the help of Thomas D. Mincher, one of the former owners of Le Chateau, Keith has developed his idea from the original restaurant in Greensboro to a chain of seven restaurants in North Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama. The T.K. Tripps restaurants (T. from Thomas Mincher, K. from Keith Hall and Tripps from an ad agency's list of suggestion) exhibit a sophisticated, but relaxed atmosphere with a combination restaurant and lounge. Catering to the affluent and upwardly mobile, T.K. Tripps offers a place to meet people, socialize, and enjoy a casual dinner.

Current annual sales of the T.K. Tripps restaurants exceed nine million dollars, an obvious sign of the public's appreciation.

In addition to the T.K. Tripps, Keith and Mincher have started the Rock-Ola Cafe. They researched this idea by visiting in Texas, Nevada, and on the west coast to study the trends in restaurants. The prototype for what they hope to develop into another rapidly expanding chain is located at the corner of West Market Street and Muirs Chapel Road in Greensboro, N.C. The menu is hamburgers, hot dogs, salads, sandwiches, and fries but it is definitely not a fast-food restaurant. The atmosphere is casual, 1950s style. Rock-Ola is family oriented, offering a fun atmosphere and large quantities of good food for a modest price. It has met with Greensboro's enthusiastic approval. The proud owners note that Rock-Ola is doing 20 to 25 percent more business than they had budgeted.

Plans are afoot to expand both of these operations. Raleigh, Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Atlanta, Hampton (Virginia), and Orlando are under consideration as possible sites for Rock-Ola Cafes and new T.K. Tripps. Keith hopes that they will have 50 to 52 restaurants in operation by the 1990's. He feels firmly that the secret to success is good management and inspires his managers by offering monthly bonuses based on the individual restaurant's profitability. In addition, they do careful research before they open a restaurant and are reasonably certain once it is opened it should make a profit.

Keith still keeps time for his family and football, just as he did in college days. He speaks with obvious pride of his daughter, a high school junior and cheerleader, and his son, an eighth grader who loves sports. He coaches football at Western Guilford High School, is on the Board of Directors for Youth Programs for Greensboro, has sponsored a football camp for the underprivileged, and has participated in the alumni football games at Elon College.

Rex Harrison shares Keith Hall's commitment to family and football. The former Los Angeles Rams and Norfolk Neptunes football player considers his three children his crowning achievement. Football has taken a back seat in his current lifestyle although he says ex-football players from the Rams, the Redskins, and the Philadelphia Eagles have come to visit his establishment: the night club September's in Virginia Beach.

Like Keith Hall, Rex has had to work for what he has; it was not handed to him on a silver platter, so to speak. His father died when he was six leaving his mother with the job of supporting herself and her son with a bookkeeping job at a feed company which paid forty dollars a week. Rex hoped to earn a football scholarship to a major university.

His coach recommended that he apply to Elon. Rex worked the summer before college at a moving and storage company and did weight-lifting. He brought his weight up 45 pounds and was able to earn a place on the Elon College football team when he arrived in the fall. He planned to be a doctor, but after his marriage in his sophomore year, he realized that the cost of medical school would probably be prohibitive and changed his major to history with a minor in physics and math.

After leaving Elon, he was the 72nd player chosen in the sixth draft of the NFL and was offered a contract with the Los Angeles Rams. Rex signed with them, becoming the first Elon player to be drafted by the NFL. He sustained an ankle injury and coach George Allen let him go after a year. He returned to Norfolk and played for the Norfolk Neptunes in the Continental League for three years. Following that, he went with Xerox Corporation, starting as a sales representative in Norfolk and working his way up to branch manager for Hampton Roads.

The dream for a restaurant and club like September's was born during his football career when he visited the night spots of Los Angeles with a group of football players. It has blossomed into September's, a sophisticated place, decorated in the Art Deco opulence of the 1920s with marble, opal, walnut, and brass. It caters to the established affluent and attracts an impressive guest list, including Mark Moseley of the Redskins and Gavin McLeod of the television show Loveboat. The club has a video screen behind the bar which broadcasts MTV at an unobtrusive level. Harrison is branching out into live entertainment and various programs such as fashion shows, dance classes, and aerobics classes to provide interest and excitement.

The Rose Room, the restaurant half of September's, boasts a computerized ordering system which allows the waiter or waitress to key the order from the dining room and gives the restaurant a more relaxed, in-control atmosphere. The color scheme for The Rose Room naturally is rose, accented by teal and black. Each table is covered with a pink linen tablecloth and graced with a single rose and a candle. The chef, who was previously the chef for Jacques Cousteau's Calypto, has prepared a healthy and tantalizing menu offering regional nouvelle cuisine or, as Rex Harrison explains it, "regional dishes in French sauces."

Rex Harrison '66

Harrison is proud of his endeavor and justifiably so, but at present he is satisfied with its uniqueness. He has been approached by people who are interested in expanding on his idea or making it the first of many, but unlike Keith Hall, Rex has no wish to go beyond his single establishment. He thinks he will work at this for five or ten years and then perhaps retire.

Both Keith Hall and Rex Harrison have created exciting places for eating and entertainment and both are doing exceedingly well in their field. These two Elon alumni have achieved success with a unique flair.

CONVERSATION WITH A PHILOSOPHER

In announcing that Dr. John Greenfelder Sullivan is the first recipient of the new Maude Sharpe Powell Professorship, President Fred Young said, "The primary factor in his selection was his effectiveness as a teacher. Willingly assuming the role of mentor, counselor and friend to his students, he exemplifies the ideal for a liberal arts institution."

In my conversation with this professor of philosophy, he spoke first about the classroom. "I think teaching is one of the dramatic arts," he said. "I feel that I must enliven the subject matter and make it applicable to the students' lives. Teaching is like the work of an actor who brings a role to life, no matter how many times he plays it. He must reanimate the old, must do the play anew."

"Philosophy starts at zero point," ... continued. "I know what I will do, but I face it anew each course, each day. Probably it won't be the same as last time students always make a difference. And I am learning, making shifts in my own emphases and ideas. There is a job of sorting out the flowers and the garbage."

"Am I a better teacher as I grow older?" Sullivan repeated my question. "Do I make a greater impact on my students now than when I started? I am available to them now in terms of myself, of the things I love. I have more connection points now. And I think I give my students far more than I was given at their age. I give them quality material when I'm at my best. I also want to make the student less provincial and to deepen his or her responses. It is frustrating to see the needs and to know that you get the students for such a little while. One is always coping with failure—the limitations of self and students against the ideal."

Serving for a decade (1972-82) as chairman of the Department of Philosophy, which offers a rich selection of upper level courses in addition to the introductory, Sullivan has insisted on keeping the required hours for the major low—27 semester hours of "very solid courses." The purpose is to encourage either a double major or a philosophy major and another concentration. He believes that the student at undergraduate level should have a good background in the liberal arts. Sullivan worked with a project team in the summer of 1981 which formulated the draft report for a revision of the general education requirements. Elon College has since adopted a curriculum requirement of liberal arts courses throughout the student's four years.

In the relatively small Department of Philosophy, enrollment runs about 500 students a year. Here the courses, divided into sequences, include the introductory: Introduction, Logic and Ethics; the historical sequence: Greek and Medieval Philosophy, 20th Century, American, and Modern; and the topical group of six: Philosophy of Law, of Religion, of Science, of Philosophy and Society, Eastern Philosophy, and Ages and Stages of Life.

Dr. Bruce Waller, a colleague in the department, says of Dr. Sullivan, "John is open in his approach to philosophical issues and very generous in discussion. We by no means agree on every question we discuss, but John is always fair. The temptation in disagreement is the strawman fallacy: one is tempted to cast the opposing position in the weakest possible form. That is the opposite of John's approach. He is always eager to frame positions and arguments in their strongest forms, whether they are his own views or those with which he disagrees."

"Getting clearer on an issue or closer to the truth is much more important to John than winning an argument or upholding his original position."

"John can, however, be formidable in argument. His wide-ranging knowledge and analytic tenacity and thoroughness lead him to weak points in arguments and positions, and his own views are carefully crafted and stoutly defended."

"In our teaching we may be something like Jack Sprat and his wife, licking the platter of philosophical pedagogy clean because our tastes are in such direct contrast. But that would not be quite true. John teaches several areas—ancient, medieval, Eastern, philosophy of religion—which I am not qualified to teach, but I can't think of any area that I teach which he could not teach. While we do have complementary interests, we have some in common—philosophy of psychology, moral psychology, and contemporary ethics."

Waller classifies himself as a logical positivist, the point of view of the Vienna Circle, also known as logical empiricism which sifts out the metaphysical and relies on the logic of science.

"Bruce and I blend in many things and disagree in some," Sullivan says. "I tend more toward religion, ethics, and psychology. My definition of religion is that it is a quest to reunite what has been separated. The core of religion is the mystic tradition, the sense of an ultimate source and of the kinship of all things."

He is pleased that academic philosophers are now talking about Eastern philosophy, a subject taught more frequently in departments of religion. Some Americans are learning more about the East and are practicing meditation and contemplation. This interest has increased greatly in the last 20 years.

"It has also become acceptable to be interested in the applied areas of philosophy," Sullivan says. "Of late, I have been involved in questions of ethics and professional responsibility, especially in the health care professions. For example, I gave the keynote presentation, 'The Nurse in the Middle,' for the North Carolina Nurses Association in Greensboro. And I have spoken on similar topics to state counselors and social service workers in district and state meetings."

"Until recently, the stress has been on the ethics of duty, the language of rules and rights," Sullivan explains. "In the last decade, interest has grown in the ethics of virtues—the language of responsibility, i.e., the appropriate response. When we are talking about the question of what we ought to do, we tend to move to the extreme cases, such as allocation of scarce resources or of the fate of a defective newborn child."

"I am less interested in the 'lifeboat' cases and more in the way value-laden issues arise every day," Sullivan says. "For example, in speaking with nurses on issues under the rubric of ethics, I found that what emerged many times was not 'What is to be done?' but 'How do we respond?' when clearly something is wrong. It could be insufficient options being given to the patient, or the drug dependence of a physician. Wishing to be neither a martyr nor a minimalist, the nurse is caught in the middle. If she speaks up, she may lose a job she desperately needs; if she doesn't she feels frustrated and guilty. Such a situation demands not just ethical solving, but organizational, diplomatic solving of human relations problems."

I asked John Sullivan about his association with the Traditional Acupuncture Institute in Columbia, Maryland, a connection many people may think a long way from an Elon College professorship. "In the last five years," Sullivan said, "I have been increasingly associated with this institute as visiting lecturer, as consultant, and from 1984 as a member of their board of directors. I went up there first as a visiting lecturer on medical ethics, invited by Bob Dugan and Dianne Connelly, whom I have known for years. They had become interested in such an institute near Oxford, England, and had stayed there to study. Over the last decade they have developed their own endeavor, their own identity, in Maryland. They have a faculty of 20 and about 15 visiting lecturers, some from Johns Hopkins and from neighboring colleges, and people in practice.

"I found here a direct application of Eastern philosophy. It made me rethink all my ideas," Sullivan continued. "In the context of doing consulting work with them, I took the beginning portion of their intensive 27-month training program. After my beginning course, I know that anyone who thinks M.D.s can go for a weekend course and learn acupuncture is completely ignorant of this ancient Eastern mode of preventive medicine. In fact, in ancient China, physicians were paid only if the patient stayed healthy. Just as eastern philosophy involves the whole person, so does this form of wholistic health. Sir William Osler, the Canadian physician and writer who came to Johns Hopkins, said, 'Don't tell me about the symptoms of the patient, but tell me about the patient who has the symptoms.'

Sullivan believes that medical profession burn-out, not to mention the problems of litigation, calls for some alternatives in health care with emphasis upon preventive medicine. He thinks that the application of Eastern philosophy, which integrates body, mind and spirit, may be one answer.

I am announcing the new Powell professorship, President Young also said, "Dr. Sullivan's credentials are impeccable." Sullivan brings to this professorship the academic training and research which culminated in two doctorates: the J.C.D. in Canon Law from Lateran University, Rome, Italy, and the Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

Preparing at first for the Roman Catholic priesthood, Sullivan won a Basselin Fellowship for his junior and senior years at Catholic University in Washington, D.C., for the B.A. and the M.A. in Philosophy. He continued at Catholic University for the four years required in theology, and he added a second major in mathematics. In 1963 he was ordained a Roman Catholic priest.

"That year I had the chance to go to Rome," Sullivan recalled. "Pope John had died, Paul was the new Pope, and the Vatican Council was meeting. I left Washington feeling very cosmopolitan and liberal and arrived in Rome in August when the Council was in full tilt. To my amazement, I found unofficial Rome light years ahead of us. Everything was being rethought. It was a mind shock, but very exciting! I soon realized it would not be effective to write on church law, for it was then in a state of flux. I decided to concentrate on the broader issue of interpretation of law."

Sullivan completed his studies and his thesis, "The Relevance of Three Anglo-American Jurists for a Theory of Interpretation of Canon Law," privately printed in Rome in 1966. The three jurists were H.L.A. Hart, Roscoe Pound, and Benjamin Cardozo. He returned to Rhode Island to become executive assistant to the Bishop of Providence and assistant chancellor for the Rhode Island Diocese.

As time passed, Sullivan felt that in good conscience he could not function as a Catholic priest, for several hoped-for changes did not emerge from the Vatican Council. He asked for, and received, ecclesiastical permission to leave the active ministry in 1968.

Now he added to his education by taking work in group leadership at the National Training Laboratories Institute of Applied Behavioral Science in Holderness, N.H., work at the Anthos Institute, New York, and at the Princeton Gestalt Center, Princeton, N.J. Increasing his experience in management and in communications, Sullivan took a job as administrative assistant to the president and general manager of Gallagher Communications, Inc., New York City.

By 1970 Sullivan was ready to return to his first love, philosophy, and on January 17 to marry Linda L. Votta, whom he had met in New York City. That fall he joined the faculty of Elon College as assistant professor of philosophy and director of a new current issues program which he designed for small group explorations of social topics.

In 1972 Sullivan was named chairman of his department, replacing Dr. Ferris Reynolds, "a hard place to fill" by the respect and manner of his suggestions and ideas, he was elected chairman of the Academic Council. For 10 years he served on the Curriculum Committee. In 1980 he was promoted to full professor and in May was given the Daniels-Danley Award for Excellence in Teaching.

"I have been interested in the work of the North Carolina Humanities Committee and began work with them as resource humanist in 1974. I have continued to work with them to the present," Sullivan said. His work has entailed speaking and consulting in numerous projects sponsored throughout North Carolina by the NCHC. This interest has taken him out of state to serve on panels, to deliver papers and to participate in workshops.

Sullivan served as chief consultant and played a large part in a project of the National Endowment for the Humanities which culminated in the adult education project entitled "The Measure of Man: Humane Values in Western Civilization." This public lecture series covered six historical periods with published tools for community-wide programs. Later in this project the NEH saw the need for an adult seminar for which reading materials had to be developed. Sullivan worked on the Medieval, the 18th Century, and the 20th Century segments.

"This is in the field of adult education which I enjoy very much," Sullivan said. "The public is always invited to these programs which bring scholars and community together. The Cumberland County Library in Fayetteville, for example, has had great success with 'The Measure of Man' series. So have Durham, Charlotte, and others."

"Another project I enjoyed was a film-lecture series in five parts entitled 'Aspects of Love' which I gave at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro," said Sullivan. "In this series I was examining human relationships: parent-disciple, man-woman, master-disciple, colleagues at work. There are many kinds of human relations."

"Eventually I would like to write a book on certain aspects of morality. I wrote my Ph.D. thesis at UNC on 'Kohlberg's Progress Toward Understanding the Moral Life,' and I had planned a book based on this topic. Now my interests focus more on the ethics of the virtues, the relation of ethics and religion and questions concerning alternative modes of healing."

his full life at Elon College.

"I remain very interested in the general education—liberal arts—program at Elon and also in adult continuing education. If I could now bring to this college some aspect of philosophical thinking and its application, I would like it to be an emphasis upon the feminine, on birthing and nourishing, in contrast to what we have been doing in America for years. We have made the human being an abstraction in the pursuit of material success—things and money. Both nationally and internationally, we have too often stressed aggression, dominance, and force. Of course, we have made great progress in many fields, but a 'macho' stance toward other people can now bring humanity to extinction. We need to recover non-aggressive, non-arrogant ways of settling conflicts."

"We should reinstate a balance of the masculine and the feminine, not either-or, but a balance for wholeness," Sullivan continued. "We need to recover a less individualistic, more communal vision."

"In this endeavor, Eastern philosophy can play a part, not because it is Eastern, but because it articulates aspects of the human that have been forgotten."

"Institutions, such as colleges, can apply the nourishing aspects of the feminine in teaching, in planning, and in a vision of the universality and wholeness of life."

Mary Ellen Priestley, retired professor of English and journalism, has known John Sullivan since he came to Elon College.

Elon Football Ranked No. 1

By Alan Wooten '86

Following Elon's big 33-27 win over Lenoir-Rhyne College Bears on Homecoming Weekend, the Fightin' Christians garnered the number one ranking in the NAIA for the first time in nearly two years. With victories over Guilford and 1984 National Champion Carson-Newman, in addition to their victory over Lenoir-Rhyne, Elon is also sitting atop the SAC-8 standings.

Leading the Fightin' Christians on offense thus far is tailback Jonas Davis of Henderson, N.C., with 330 yards on 70 carries and six touchdowns. At quarterback, Waynesboro, Va., native Mike Brodowicz has completed 25 of 48 attempts for 289 yards and three touchdowns. His leading receiver, Eden, N.C., native Stanley Hairston, boasts 12 catches for 169 yards and two touchdowns. In the offensive line, 6-1, 250-pound Alphonso Morrison, of Hamlet, N.C., has led Elon's big front.

Defensively, the Fightin' Christians have been led by linebacker Russell Evans of Cheraw, S.C., with 27 solo tackles and 15 assisted tackles. His cohort at linebacker, Jack Arnold of Albany, N.Y., has 21 solos, 11 assists and one quarter-back sack. The defensive line has been led by noseguard Grady Williams, of Weldon, N.C., with 16 solo tackles, four assists and two quarter-back sacks, while the secondary has been led by Tim and Mike Ferrell of Danville, Va.

Elon's head coach Mackey Carden has been extremely pleased with the team's performance thus far in 1985 and is optimistic that Elon will continue its march towards both the SAC-8 and NAIA titles.

SOCCEER

The Elon College soccer team also has gotten off to a fine start in 1985 with a 7-1-1 record through nine games. The Fightin' Christians, under Coach Steve Ballard, are led by three-time All-American Joe Nepay of Monrovia, Liberia, with five goals and six assists. Freshman Mike Wessels of Jacksonville, N.C., has chipped in seven goals and four assists. Another freshman, Glenn Goss of Somerdale, N.J., has six goals and four assists. Defensively, Elon is led by senior sweeper back Andy Schaefer of Alamogordo Springs, Fla., and left back Ron Jandoli of Bricktown, N.J. The Fightin' Christians, currently ranked seventh in the NAIA in the Southern Division poll, hope to capture the conference title again and garner the first ever District 26 title.

WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL

Elon's new coach Byrd Britz, Elon's volleyball team has struggled through a difficult season. The team currently has a 6-10 mark going into the second half of the 1985 season.

GOLF

Elon College's golf team under head coach Bill Morningstar currently holds a first place and second place finish in their fall, 1985 season. Elon captured the Washington and Lee Invitational Tournament with Chris Dockrill, a senior from Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, garnering medalist honors. Elon finished runner-up in the James Madison Invitational Tournament, while Elon's Jimmy Merriman, a senior from Fieldale, Va., finished second in the individual race. With a rebuilt team, Coach Morningstar is extremely pleased with the showing of the 1985-86 linksters.

Don't Miss a Play

The Elon football games are being carried live over radio station WWMO located in Reidsville, N.C., as well as Elon's campus station, WSOE. WWMO is a 100,000-watt station, 24 hours a day, located at 102-FM on your dial. Doing the play-by-play for the Fightin' Christians are Bob Anderson and Wes Durham. Durham is the son of UNC-Chapel Hill commentator Woody Durham.

Tolley Edits Book of Foot- ball Drills

Dr. Jerry Tolley, director of annual and corporate giving at Elon and former head football coach, has recently compiled and published a book of football drills called The American Football Coaches Guidebook to Championship Football Drills.

The book contains over 800 drills and drill variations which Tolley personally solicited from 260 football coaches across the nation. The contributing coaches line up like a Who's Who of college football coaches: Barry Switzer, Joe Paterno, Gerry Faust, Pat Dye, Frank Akers, Danny Ford, Bo Schembechler, Vince Dooley, and Dick Crum, to mention a few.

The book was first published in February 1985 and is already in its second printing.

The genesis of the book, according to Tolley, goes back to the days soon after he resigned from Elon's head coach position after back-to-back NAIA national championships. Prentice-Hall Publishing Company approached him about writing a how-to book on football while his name was well known.

After contract discussions with Prentice-Hall, Tolley decided that, given the ready-made market for the book, he could publish it himself more profitably. So publish it he did, only to find that coaches everywhere were waiting for such a book.

Lou Holtz, former N.C. State coach now at Minnesota, probably summed up the football community's reaction best:

"The AFCA has presented the football profession with a volume I consider to be a coach's dream...I cannot imagine a coach not wanting it for his professional library."

Teach-In

"The Central American Teach-In gave us a chance to raise our political awareness and sensitivity," said Chaplain McBride. "We are not as politically or religiously aware as we should be about the world around us."

To continue this awareness of our place in the world community, McBride is planning another teach-in during the spring of 1986. The focus for that event will be South Africa.

Alum Puts Elon on National Map

Alcoa Aluminum recently presented the Arthur Vining Davis Award to Elon College Trustee G. Thomas Holmes '39 and 34 of his colleagues for "outstanding group achievement in Alcoa technology." This was only the second time in Alcoa's history that the award has been given.

To publicly honor these men, Alcoa published a full-page announcement in The Wall St. Journal. It stated: "In their search for excellence, these Alcoans have made a better world for all of us."

The state-of-the-art technology Holmes and the group developed is called "the Alcoa 398 Process." It is a closed-loop system for cleaning and protecting the air and environment at smelting locations.

The Alcoa announcement stated that "the environmental success of this system has accelerated the use of Alcoa smelting technology by other aluminum producers and has established Alcoa as a technological and environmental leader worldwide."

Holmes has been part of the Elon world since his graduation in 1939. He has served as a member of the Board of Trustees since 1977.

Holmes wrote that he and his wife Gladys '41, "had a very enjoyable return visit and party to receive this award from Alcoa's directors and officers." Holmes is now retired, lives in Finchurst and enjoys spending time on the golf course and at the beach.
